HUMORS OF BANN PUBLISHING.

Announcements of Marriages That Have Been Unceremoniously Interrupted.

A few years ago a ludicrous, albeit sensational, incident occurred at a church in Larkhall. A rustic couple, after having had the banns published the prescribed number of times, proceeded to the church to be joined in holy wedlock. The service was conducted without a hitch until the officiating clergyman arrived at that part where he asked, "William Wisher, wilt thou have this woman to be thy wedded wife?" when the bridegroom replied with some astonishment that his name was not William Wisher.

The ceremony was of course suspended, and on investigation being made as to the cause of the mistake it transpired that the bridegroom had written to the session of the church requesting him to have the banns published, and concluded his letter thus, "So no more from your well wisher and Mary Williams." The sexton, supposing that William Wisher was the name of the intending Benedict, published the banns accordingly, and the disappointed couple were compelled to await the publication of the banns in their proper names.

The procentor of a country parish church near Arbroath on Sunday announced from his place that "there was a solemn purpose of marriage between Alexander Spink of Fisher's Inn and Elspeth Hackett of Burn wynd," when the parish beadle, who was something of a character, suddenly arose and unceremoniously interrupted the proceedings by exclaiming: "That's wrang! That's wrang! As an Sanders Spink o' Fisher's loan that's gaun to marry Elspeth Hackett, hat Lang Sanders Spink o' Sandidy croft." The name of one of the parties had been wrongly stated in the proclamation paper, and this was the way the beadle took to correct it.

Some years ago a middle aged agricultural laborer called upon the session clerk of Alloa and asked him what the charge was for publishing the "cries"—i. e., banns of marriage—three times on the same Sunday. "A pound," replied the clerk. "Aye," said the other, "an what's 'aye tak' when ye tak' two Sundays to do't?" "Half a guinea," was the reply. "An what's't's charge when ye tak' the Sundays to't?" was the caustic next query. "Seven and six," answered the clerk, with an amused air. "Aye, man," rejoined the querist, "I see; the langer ye tak' to dae't the cheaper it gets. Just cry awa' till ye pay yersel'!"

And he took his departure without more ado.—London Tit-Bits.

Trousers, Breeches and Pantaloons.

The words breeches, trousers and pantaloons are now used interchangeably, but originally the significations were quite different. Pantaloons are said to have been at first nothing but long stockings worn in Italy as a mark of religious habit by the devotees of St. Pantaloon. Breeches originally reached from the waist half way to the knee, and finally to the knee, where they were fastened with a buckle. Trousers are the present style of leg gear, a combination of the former two.

SAME OLD FARCE.

The County Board Meet and Elect Commissioner Rhinehart Chairman.

The County Printing Awarded to the Highest Bidder—The Crookston Times.

Kirsch, Rhinehart and omers carry the Scheme successfully Through.

And the Bids Were Not Even Considered by the County Board.

The County a Heavy Loser.

The county commissioners met on on Tuesday morning, 2. P. De Mers moved that the present incumbent, Hon. M. E. Kirsch be retained for the coming year of 1894, whereupon the Hon. Michael arose, voluminously thanked the gentlemen for the honors conferred upon him in the past three years and declined to try it another whack. He then placed in nomination the name of A. C. Rhinehart. The name of C. P. DeMers was then nominated by Commissioner Oppegaard and the vote stood: For Rhinehart: Kirsch, Rhinehart, and DeMers. For DeMers: Linden and Oppegaard. Mr. Rhinehart having received the majority of the votes was duly declared elected and after a few minutes spent in felicitation the board adjourned till 2 o'clock. At nearly three the bonrd again assembled and the bids for doing the county printing were opened and read. The Times bid 72 cts. per folio for treasurer's reports and all such work, and 6 cents per description for the tax list; The Tribune bid 50 cents and 6 cents and the JOURNAL 25 and 3 cents for the tax list, the bid of the JOURNAL all round being fully one-half that of the Times and very much less than that of the Tribune. These being all of the bids received Mr. Kirsch then offered a resolution that the bid of the Times be accepted and that paper be made the official paper. Mr. Oppegaard offered a resolution that the Tribune's bid be accepted. For Mr. Kirsch's resolution the vote stood: Kirsch, Rhinehart and DeMers. For Oppegaard's resolution the vote stood: Oppegaard and Linden. While the bid of the JOURNAL would have saved one-half the expense to the tax-payers of the county, not one member of the board raised his voice in behalf of the taxpayers. This may be the kind of treatment that the people expect from its public servants but it hardly looks reasonable to think that it is and how those commissioners can justify their action to their constituents is a problem that we will not try to solve.

The City Poor.

The committee on poor, of the council, accompanied the relief committee on its rounds on Wednesday afternoon and found some quite destitute cases—most all occasioned by sickness and a few from inability to procure work. One family, that had been shipped here by the authorities from Montiello was found to be absolutely destitute: there were seven children in that family and when the committee arrived they found the children scrapping for a crust of bread one of the kids had picked up. The council committee found that food, fuel and clothing were needed and took steps to provide the food and fuel. Any person who has any cast-off clothing they do not want could find a good investment for it by notifying the relief committee or the council committee, who would see it placed where it would do the most good. And if any one could find employment for any of these destitute ones it would be gladly welcomed.

Worse Than Here.

Our Polk county farmers, as they contemplate a yield of from 5 to 12 bushels of wheat this year and not over 50 cents per bushel for it, have reason to think their lot is a pretty tough one, but the JOURNAL has heard of even lower prices than that. Edward F. Smith, a former resident of Crookston, writing from Spokane, Wash., to renew his subscription, says:

"We have had a very mild winter so far. I believe it has not been down to zero yet. We have no snow at the present writing but have had some, and a great deal of rain for this season of the year. Everything is very quiet, in fact I might say at a stand-still. Wheat is only worth 22 to 24 cents per bushel for the very best; oats about the same. Farmers are feeling pretty blue and I think they have good cause to as their crops have hardly paid for harvesting."

A Tribute to Averill.

The Thirteen Towns pays the following tribute to Attorney W. H. Averill, of Fosston, who died at that place on the morning of December 23rd, of typhoid fever after a week's illness. He contracted a cold while attending court in Crookston returned home on the 16th, and in just one week his body was sent to Winona, where his parents reside. He was 31 years of age. The Towns says:

Mr. Averill was an square a man as God ever made and no one can point to an act of his life that was stained with dishonor. There was nothing small about Mr. Averill. He carried his big heart on his sleeve. Broad and liberal in his opinions, urbane in his manners, kind of heart, genial in his nature, as generous as the day is long, the friend of every man and every man his friend, it is no wonder that he became the center of a large social circle and formed friendships that could only be dissolved by death. During his residence in this city he has filled every office within the gift of the people, and at the time of his death was City Attorney, County Commissioner and secretary of the Thirteen Towns Fair Association, and was going to his general ability and popularity he always has had a remunerative law practice.

The Governor has appointed C. B. Elliott to succeed Judge Canty as judge of the district court. Judge Elliott has been judge of the municipal court in Minneapolis. The appointment is a good one and will meet with general approval.

A Singular Coincidence.

The chaplain of an American jail vouches for the following. A little boy was taken by his parents to visit the prison, and on passing one of the cells in which a notorious criminal had been incarcerated his father playfully pushed him in and closed the door upon him. The child, overcome by some vague terror, screamed aloud and could scarcely be comforted by his mother's caresses.

Years passed. The lad half thoughtlessly fell into crime and was only recalled to his better nature on finding himself, having been sentenced to a term of imprisonment, in the identical cell into which he had been momentarily thrust as a child.

Spent Only One.

Little Dot—Mamma gave me two quarters to buy candy, but I only spent one of them.

Father—That's something like. Now I'll give you another quarter to put with the other.

Little Dot—Thank you, but I can't put it with the other till I find it. It dropped out of my pocket on the way to the candy store.—Good News.

A GROWING INSTITUTION.

The Winter Term at the Strawbridge School Commenced With an Increased Attendance.

After a vacation of one week the Crookston Normal School & Business College resumed work again on Tuesday morning. It was the beginning of the winter term, and proprietor and teachers were hustling about, answering numerous questions and ascertaining what studies the new students wanted to pursue. At 9:30 Mr. Strawbridge made a few remarks, wishing them a prosperous New Year, and introduced Rev. Squier who after a short scripture lesson and prayer, told the students of the importance and value of education impressing particularly that cramming the mind full of everything and training the memory to retain all that touched its surface was not the correct ideal education. But to train and educate the mind to reason, to follow out a line of thought.

Mr. Titus then took charge of the students and proceeded to organize the classes. In this he demonstrated his ability as an organizer, as he has already done in his teaching. Several new classes were organized in the common branches, also in the higher including algebra, physiology, rhetoric etc. A literary society and debating sections will be organized this week. These are for the special benefit of the students and any friends they may invite.

Twenty-two new students enter upon the work of this term. Many of these are teachers who have been teaching in different parts of the country and are taking advanced work. Others are taking the Preparatory, Normal, Commercial or shorthand courses.

This school does not hold out the bait "The Cheapest School in the Northwest." It makes no specialty of cheapness, but it does, of giving value for value, charging a reasonable price and giving the best that can be given for that charge. The motto is, "do well what you do." No cheap grade work. Left in the standard higher." "This New Year's opening gives the projectors of Strawbridge Normal School & Business College every season to feel assured for the future success of similar work.

The proprietor, Mr. B. A. Strawbridge, and his teachers extend a cordial invitation to the patrons and friends of the school to pay them a visit.

A "National Bouquet."

Among the many suggestions concerning a national flower, one which comes from a Vermont farmer has decided points and interest. He proposes that we shall not attempt to settle upon a national flower, but let each state choose a state flower, and have a "national bouquet," composed of all the state flowers.

Already certain of the states have emblems which would make very appropriate and pretty elements in such a great American nosegay.

Massachusetts people prefer the trailing arbutus for an emblem. California, on the other side of the continent, has by law adopted the eschscholtzia or poppy as its state flower. The cedar sprig of Vermont and the pine branch of Maine would contribute a needed tinge of green to the nosegay, while the orange blossom of Florida would lend its fragrance, and the mountain laurel of Alabama would crown it resplendently.

The goldenrod and the aster would belong to the first state which should formally adopt them, and so would the graceful shooting star of the central west and the prairie rose. There are flowers and trees enough to "go around."

A bouquet composed of all these state flowers and tree branches would grace all formal occasions and would typify the union of the states. It would say "E pluribus unum" to the ordinary intelligence more plainly than the Latin motto does.—Youth's Companion.

The Book He Wanted.

Odd demands are made on the busy editor's time. A Scotch member of the fraternity recently received a letter, the envelope bearing a request that the contents should be handed to any bookseller in Edinburgh. The letter ran: "The book that I want is a courting book—a book that will tell me how to talk to the lass that I love; a book that will tell me the words to say to her and the words to ask her when I be courting her in the sport of a book that I want, no matter how few or how little the words may be."—Weekly Irish Times.

Nervous Excitability After Death.

Experiments made by M. d'Arsonval with an instrument he calls a myophone prove, contrary to the older opinion, that nervous excitability may exist for many hours after death. The cold test of the muscle shortening is no doubt not applicable long after death has departed, but as the sound given out by the myophone proves, the death of a nerve is much less rapid than has been hitherto supposed, and a nerve may act on muscle in a state of electric excitability without producing more than simple molecular vibration.

THE INTERSTELLAR MEDIUM.

Even a Scientist's Pen Cannot Adequately Describe Its Transcendent Properties.

That space is not void is conceded. That it is filled with a medium capable of transmitting light and heat is not questioned. This medium is believed to be uniform in density and elasticity, but the exact nature of its constitution is unknown. Some believe it to be molecular, like gas, while others question if its structure has been correctly defined. It makes no direct impression upon the senses and is known only through effects produced, and yet, whatever he its nature, it is known to transmit a wave of light at the rate of 86,000 miles per second, there being, as a mean value, within the spectrum about 50,000 waves in an inch, or more than 90,000,000,000,000,000 in the distance passed over in one second.

When it is considered that waves are transmitted through this medium in all conceivable directions with the same velocity, some faint conception may be had of its intense activity. The complicity of the waves is transcendent, for each shade of light has its own wave length, there being about 30,000 waves to the inch in red light and more than 54,000 in violet, and outside the visible spectrum there are less in number in one direction and more in the other. Every self luminous body in the universe is imparting to this medium waves of these varying lengths all traveling with a sensibly constant velocity.

When it is remembered that the countless number of stars and suns, scattered promiscuously throughout limitless space, are producing waves, and radiating from each in all possible directions, it would seem that if they did not actually destroy each other they would so interfere as to produce "confusion worse confounded," and the impression upon the eye of an observer would be valueless. But, on the contrary, the scientist believes that this medium truly and faithfully transmits to the remotest space every wave imparted to it, preserving with the strictest integrity by individuality—except that planets and other solid bodies may destroy the waves they intercept.

A star ten or more years ago started on a wave which just now, we will suppose, arrives at the earth and writes its own record on some sensitized plates, through a glass mirror 5,000,000,000,000 miles away. From these impressions the physicist finds perhaps that the star is dendiic, and the most powerful telescope had failed to divide it; that the two revolve about each other, and he determines their probable orbit, masses and velocities. Or perhaps he finds, as in the remarkable star of 1892, that it changes from a star to a nebula in a few months. In all this no question is raised in regard to the integrity of the record, nor whether in its long journey any planet, sun, comet, meteor or star has unduly interfered to modify or in any way corrupt the story it was commissioned to tell.

Grant that! But this is little more than the shadow of an illustration, for Herschel, the astronomer, thought it probable that we can see nebula from which it has taken light 300,000 years to reach the earth, during which time the interstellar medium has been faithful in transmitting at the rate of more than 11,000,000 miles per minute the impulse committed to it, notwithstanding its path has been crossed and recrossed by other waves without number. Pen cannot adequately describe the transcendent properties of this wonderful medium called the "luminiferous ether" nor too highly exalt that faith which enables one to implicitly believe the truthfulness of the stories committed to him. One is led to exclaim with the psalmist: "O Lord, how manifold are thy works. In wisdom thou hast made them all."—Science.

Milord, Miss and the Dog.

A traveler's tale of British phlegm is told in the following terms: A Frenchman was seated in a smoking carriage and had for his companion a "mitred Anglais." Enter a British miss—of course with a plaid and protruding teeth and a Skye terrier. She sat opposite the milord. He politely informed her that she had by mistake got into a smoking carriage. She made not the slightest answer, but sat grimly on.

The train then ran by his cigar, much to the astonishment of the Frenchman, who, according to the story, sat watching what would happen. When they reached the next station, the milord said, with the cold dignity of his race and cast: "Madam can now change into a nonsmoking carriage. If she does not, I shall assume that she does not mind smoke and shall light another cigar."

Madam said not a word, but stared in front of her. The train went on again, and the milord lighted up. When his cigar was well alight and the train in motion, the lady bent forward, took the cigar out of the milord's mouth and threw it out of the window. The milord not only did not make any remark, but he did not even seem disturbed. All he did was to wait a minute, and then to bend over the lady, seize the Skye terrier, which was lying in her lap, and fling it out of the window.

Of this act the lady, to the complete astonishment of the French spectator, took no notice whatever. At the next station both the lady and the milord got out, but without exchanging a word in regard to the cigar and dog incident, while the Frenchman turned over in his head an etude on the subject of "Les Anglais tacituraux."—London Spectator

TO THE PRESIDENT.

AN UNEMPLOYED WORKMAN WRITES AN OPEN LETTER.

Mr. Cleveland's Attention Called to Industries Ruined and Labor Pauperized. Idle Results Must Follow the Adoption of the Un-American Tariff Bill.

To His Excellency Grover Cleveland, President of the United States:

SIR—As your excellency is an American president, invested with the powerful influence of your high office and wielding that influence to force legislation antagonistic to the interests of your country, if it is not too late, it is certainly not out of place to ask your excellency whether you are drifting; if the varied interests of that portion of the world's inhabitants living within the territorial limits of the United States and owing allegiance thereto are not large enough for your stewardship; whether you are moving within the lines of national Democracy and for the interests of the nation that placed you at its head, or if you have switched off to the line of universal Democracy and taken the nations of the world under your consideration to the neglect and material injury of your own?

Whatever may be the object of your ambition, the one fact is established that your policy is destructive to the interests of your own country.

Within the first six months of your administration what is the condition of business under it? The money that monopolized business has been withdrawn and is stowed away in the banks. The industries that prospered before you came have withered at your approach. The labor that was happy and contented is becoming demoralized from starvation, and yet while your policy has been condemned by six of the leading industrial states and the people of every section which it is designed to affect have protested against it, while the voice of starving labor has swelled the ominous sound of discontent, you seem indifferent to a condition that is increasing in danger that is a menace to public tranquility and may lead to a necessity for measures that would be abhorrent to civilization. You set yourne the course that Great Britain has laid down as the chart of American politics. You have found the tools in the Wilson committee to shape your bill of destruction and seem impatient for its completion to affix your signature thereto.

Your zeal for this foreign measure would been mystery but for the fact that you have the indorsement and approval of foreign controlers. What we will lose in productive values they will gain. The business which your tariff reform policy will sheriff out of the country will be transferred to your foreign allies; England, France and Germany favored, if they did not materially aid in your election. They are now increasing their plants and oiling their spindles in anticipation of a share in the prospective wreck of American industries. Your minister (Bayard) at the Sheffield dinner could not with an unprejudiced eye on the growing prosperity of Sheffield artisans, while he could strike with a traitor's hand at the law which assured the prosperity of American workmen. This in itself is a trivial incident and unworthy of notice, but in keeping with the foreign interest of your administration.

This picture is not overdrawn. It is a facsimile from an American point of view, and from this point I again ask your excellency whether you are drifting? You are pursuing a destructive and dangerous course.

In view of the condition resulting from your policy, the increasing distrust and disturbing circumstances that are sure to follow and the emphatic condemnation by those same people who one year ago were mislead to support it, you can no longer hide your purpose under the Chicago platform. If judged on the basis of intelligence, that platform was never tenable. You are well aware of the fact that a large proportion of your votes were cast by men who were reckless of consequences, indifferent to the public welfare and incapable of distinguishing in many cases between the tariff and internal revenue. They certainly did not represent an intelligence on which to base a justification for the enactment of a ruinous and, to them, destructive law, although they represent more than your majority multiplied by 10, and they did yell for Cleveland and a cheap shirt. Yet it would ill befit the honor, the justice or the humanity of an enlightened and Christian government to take advantage of their ignorance.

To err is human. I acknowledge it is noble, but to pursue a destructive course when admonished to retreat is open to worse than criminal.

You are the elected trustee and chief custodian of the people of the United States. You have accepted the stewardship over the interests of industry and the millions of people whom that industry maintain. Yet if the industries that have been scattered the homes that have been wrecked and the labor that has been pauperized by your foreign policy, and within the first six months of your administration could be seen at one view, the nation would be appalled. The walls at the White House will not shield you for the execration of a duped and plundered people.

A WORKINGMAN.

Is This Meant For Sarcasm?

Writing of the slight cyclone of Nov. 7, the London Daily Chronicle said. "We imagine that to nobody will this revulsion be more welcome than to Mr. Cleveland, who has long been anxious to escape from the thrall of Tammany." This must be what the late Artemus Ward called a "snark." The editor of The Chronicle, however, was level headed when he added that Mr. Cleveland had contributed to the result.

TOO HIGH A PRICE TO PAY.

The "Object Lesson" Proposed Would Entail Too Much Misery.

The free trade members of the ways and means committee have now completed their work. There is a feeling and disposition on the part of some manufacturers who favor protection, and who have become so disgusted with the efforts of the present free trade party, to overthrow and revolutionize the industrial and commercial progress of the United States—not to oppose whatever changes in the McKinley tariff may now be offered by the party in power. The idea of these gentlemen is to let the free traders have full swing, that the people of the United States may learn to its full extent how disastrous the free trade policy would be to the country, and that the "object lesson" might be the greater. This, they think, would so effectually kill all advocacy of the free trade theory that the industrial progress of the United States would then become permanently established under a protective policy.

Such reasoning is wrong. The men who advocate it do not stop to consider whether the effect would be. The American Economist has shown that the mere fear of free trade has cost a loss of $5,000,000,000 in business and labor since the present administration assumed office. What, then, would be the result if its permanent establishment and enforcement? The importation of hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of foreign goods annually to take the place of goods that have recently, under protection, been manufactured in American mills by American workingmen will involve such an enormous loss in money circulation, such a terrible waste of American labor, such a vast amount of distress among the poor classes of our people, that its effect is too terribly astounding to contemplate. A policy of passive nullification to the present administration's free trade recommendation would be far too high a price for the American people and the American nation to pay.—American Economist.

McKinley on Tariff Changes.

Every reduction of the tariff will be followed by a reduction of wages. Every cut in the tariff rates will be followed by a cut in the wages. Any proposed tariff legislation in an unerring blow at labor, which will be instantly felt in the home of every operative in the United States. The friends of protection should not now falter. The fight is only begun. If temporarily lost, it is not to be given up. Congress was never more needed, and never more expected by the people from their representatives than now. It is the demand of the hour and the requirement of the situation. The tinkerers of the tariff should be thwarted. They should be opposed at every step in their programme of destruction. Republicans and Democrats who believe in the protective system,in congress and out of congress,should stand together in resisting every effort to weaken or destroy it. If it is at last to be accomplished, let none of the responsibility rest upon us. In a time like the present, with idle men and idle mills, platforms to the rear and theories to the winds, the voice of partisanship should have no voice in our councils; the voice of patriotism alone should be heard. Let there be no yielding of principle; no compromise which shall despoil our workshops and degrade our labor.—William McKinley.

The New Tariff.

The new tariff presented to the country by the Democratic party is a composite measure, and not in accordance with any one plank of the Democratic platform of a tariff for revenue only that was agreed to at Chicago. The free trade party was elected into power upon its pledge of giving the country a tariff for revenue only. They have secured the votes of the people under false pretenses. Once elected to office, and now in power, they have failed to redeem their pledge. The new tariff, as proposed, will not supply sufficient revenue for the needs of government, but will diminish revenue by nearly $50,000,000 annually, and this, too, at a time when the treasury is depleted and the government must have recourse to temporary measures for supplying funds to pay its daily debts. There was no such need of this under a Republican administration, which reduced the annual debt by millions and millions of dollars. Directly the Democratic party gets its fingers upon the finances of the country, however, the expenditures exceed the income and the debt increases, so that a new issue of bonds may have to be made, or money may be borrowed, in anticipation of its being earned, upon the security of government notes, treasury bills, or I O U's, or whatever else they like to call them.

The American Protective Tariff League.

The American Protective Tariff league assembled in special session and resolved "to continue the work aggressively." Why, certainly! Nowend not speak words of encouragement to the league—the skies have been raining encouragement upon it. Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, Iowa, New Jersey, have encouraged it. Despair has been calling an deep in thunderous sounds of encouragement. The American Protective Tariff league cannot but feel as "a giant refreshed with wine." The patient and intelligent work has been crowned by success.

The peculiar virtue of the league is that it works incessantly. Other organizations are beneficially active in campaign times, but the league educates the people while their judgment is in repose. Its documents reach the farmer, and the mechanic, and the storekeeper, and the tradesman at times when they are not predisposed in regard every appeal to their intelligence as influenced by partisan ambition. It is in perpetual session far the education of the people in political economy as taught by the chiefs of the American school. It would be a calamity were the league in cease from its intelectually aggressive work. —Chicago Inter Ocean.

A VERY POPULAR AIR WITH THE PRESENT ADMINISTRATION.

American Labor Interests and the Home Industries Are Not Considered—The Hawaiian Muddle Is the Most Remarkable Development of Anglomania In Washington

Since March 4, 1893, on the incoming of the present administration, both the foreign and internal policy of the country appears to have been formulated with a view to a consideration of the interests of foreign countries rather than of our own country. This has appeared not only in one instance, but in many instances. Setting aside such little matters as the exclusion of China or Japan tea from the White House kitchen and the exclusive use of Ceylon tea, because it is English, you know, we find that a similar policy only on a larger scale and one of greater significance has been carried into our affairs of state.

The most important feature was the tariff measure formulated on English free trade lines, without any regard or consideration for the interests of American labor or American industries. Having changed our system of currency to conform with that of England, it was only natural that the same model should serve on which to fashion our methods of revenue. The result, it has been found, would have been insufficient to supply an income equal to the expenditures of our country. This also is English.

We also have the suggestion made to forestall the revenue by an issue of short term treasury bills. This method of spending one's income before it is earned is also of English origin.

The latest Anglomaniac development that has emanated from Washington this year has' appeared in connection with the Hawaiian muddle. It appears that the first published account of the secretory of state on this subject was shown to and approved by the British embassador at Washington before it was allowed out for publication for the information of the American people. We thus have a plain case of an act undertaken by the United States government and approved by the British government and the United States and of the American people first submitted for the consideration and approval of the representative of a foreign country, and that country England.

Not only has this most extraordinary step been taken, which was decidedly uncalled for and merely an act to carry favor with what is English, but at the same time the secretary did not even have the common courtesy to submit a copy of his report, even after publication, to the lawfully recognized representative of the Hawaiian Islands, who is located at the seat of government. There was a direct insult given to the other country concerned, for which the report was made, while an envile flunkeydom was effusively displayed to the representative of England. English had an earthly concern in the matter so far as either the United States or the Hawaiian Islands were concerned.

Such are some of the gross exhibitions of un-Americanism on the part of the present Democratic administration, as ofinatively and offensively displayed to the American people. For other instances we need only examine as regards the new tariff measure, formulated on English free trade lines and designed mostly to assist foreign trade at the expense of our own. The remarkable utterances of Benjamin Folcom, counsiler-in-law of President Cleveland, that were made on our national birthday to the manufacturers at Sheffield, are too surely becoming realizations, but the congratulations to the English manufacturers were by no means out of place from his own standpoint, or that of his cosmn-in-law, or their party. There are no words of congratulation for American manufacturers, or for American laborers. They may condole with one another while waiting for the congressional elections af 1894.

Our Imports of Wool.

The greatest amount of wool ever imported in any single year under the new McKinley law far the year ending June 30, 1893, so Justice, Bateman & Co., point out. The amount of raw wool and dyposes of the charge, as often made by free traders, that it is necessary to put wool on the free list in order to relieve American manufacturers cheap foreign wool for raising. They never imported so much foreign wool as under the last year at the McKinley law, the cheddnes at which were so wonderfully reduced under it the woolen mills af the United States were employed to their full capacity, so that the entire consumption of 1893 was not only all consumed in our home market, but 108,000,000 pounds of foreign wool besides.

Why I Am a Protectionist.

I am a protectionist because I am an American. We should have free trade among ourselves because we honor one flag and are citizens of a common country. But the man who builds us houses here, who pays us wages here, who employs my labor here, who does nothing to contribute to our growth and to our prosperity, but who lives abroad beyond the oceans, whence he desires to bring his products, either farm or manufactured, into the American market in competition with ours—he should pay for the privilege, and when he has paid for the privilege we will cover the money into the treasury of the United States, and with it we will cancel our obligations and carry on the business of government. And I would do this in the name of patriotism and my country because I believe it right.—Ex-Senator B. W. Perkins of Kansas.

CHANGES IN TARIFF

WHAT THE OLD AD VALOREM RATES OF DUTY ARE.

A Comparison With the New Figures Will Enable Laborers and Manufacturers to See How Wages Will Be Affected—Probable Reductions In Various Trades.

With the publication of the new tariff measure of the present administration, which is composed very largely on an ad valorem scale of duties, it will be of particular interest to compare the new with the old rates; those as proposed in Mr. Wilson's tariff measure with the rates as existing under the McKinley bill. In order to do this, with the new rates fresh in the memory of the people, they need but glance at the table given below, which shows the ad valorem equivalent of duties collected on foreign goods under the McKinley bill, and they can thus understand to what extent the changes are likely to affect their particular business or interests.

Such comparison will be particularly interesting to all wage earners, because it will enable them to understand at once how the factories in which they have been working are likely to be affected. Also how their wages are likely to be affected, because a reduction in the tariff would involve a reduction in wages.

How Labor Is Deceived.

In a pretended effort to discover the cause of the great political flop the Democratic press has sought opinion only where it was made a point for the public eye and has carefully avoided direction where it is daily exhibited. In fact, they tried hard not to find it. For instance, the New York World requested the opinion of Mr. W. C. Whitney and other lights of tariff reform and free trade proclivities, but The World has studiously avoided the hard fisted son of toil, whose changed condition has made him a close observer of the causes which have led to it. Mr. Whitney may be an author on social etiquette, good living and other things pertaining to men of his class; but, while Mr. Whitney and such as he are troubled with the difficulty of finding a way to spend and enjoy their surplus wealth, the misguided workman, robbed of employment and unused to the Democratic blessings of want and starvation has done some very hard thinking. He has thought of the weekly income that he and his children were accustomed to bring home from the protected factory before England and her Democratic ally had succeeded in obtaining a verdict against what they called the "robber tariff." He thought of the dentist chill which crept into the factory after the election of 1892. Like the stone phere before a storm, business stood still, collections became difficult and sales impossible. To save immediate capital production had to be limited; labor was unemployed and wages reduced, as the result of the promises made before election by the free trade rabbers who framed the platform and the policy for the Democratic party, which platform does not affect Mr. Whitney and his kind, but which has seriously affected the workingman.

Horace Greeley on Free Trade.

Speaking of the second free trade panic in the history of the United States, 1818 to 1824, when Great Britain poured her fabrics into our market in an overwhelming torrent and far below cost, in order to crush out American industries, Horace Greeley said:

"At the close of the second war with England, peace found this country dotted with furnaces and factories which had sprung up under the precarious shelter of embargo and war. These, and yet firmly established, found themselves suddenly exposed to a relentless and determined foreign competition. Great Britain poured her fabrics, far below cost, upon our markets in a perfect deluge. Our manufactures were down like grass before the mower, and our agriculture and the wages of labor speedily followed. Financial prostration was general, and the presence of want was universal. In New England fully one-fourth of the property went through the sheriff's mill, and the prostration was scarcely less general elsewhere. In Kentucky the presence of debt was simply unbelievable. In New York, the leading merchants, in 1817, united in a memorial to congress to save our commerce as well as our manufactures from utter ruin, by increasing the tariff duties."

THE SUFFERING PEOPLE.

A Hard Winter Before the Workers of the Nation.

General Hastings of Pennsylvania in a speech at Philadelphia, has formulated up the situation in the country. The condition of the Pennsylvania farmer and workingmen as he presents it is not overdrawn, and it will be the condition of the New York farmer and worker before a year's round rushes on the people call a halt at the ballot box. He says "People are now in want, with a hard winter and a very scanty crop than in the face, and who can say that all this is not due to Democracy and the Democratic congress?

"The country is in such a condition now that news turn to each other with blanched faces and ask how long their employment will last. Mills are closing every day. The party in power at Washington is responsible for the existing condition of affairs. The farmer is feeling the stress of financial and political weather as well as the artisan and professional man, and through the length and breadth of our beautiful state one hears the cry for relief. But the Democratic party remains inactive and narcissus to the public demand.

"The Democrats repudiated protection at Chicago and said they would do better things. They have done nothing but cause a wave of destruction and poverty to sweep the land. They painted tariff reform in such glowing colors that the people thought they would like a change. They got it, but at what a cost!

"During the 25 years the Republican party ran the government wages increased from 10 to 90 per cent, and the people prospered and saved money. Satisfied with affairs, our foreign neighbors were glad to deal with us and take our money, but as soon as the Democrats gained power they began to question our stability and wonder if silver was to be the same as before.

"The people are frightened. Manufacturers are at their wits' ends. If the manufacturers had the assurance that the tariff would not be changed with for 10 years and a promise that no change would be made in the currency of the nation, all the mills in the country would begin work inside of two weeks."

Agricultural Ignorance.

Does not every dollar's worth of imports into this country displace a dollar's worth of home products that would otherwise help to go out?

This is one of those profound conundrums that the secretary of agriculture tried to solve at the congress of agriculture recently held in Chicago. We do not believe that any schoolboy would ask such a question. The protective tariff has nothing whatever to do with the exports of the country. The quantity of grain that will "leap to go out" depends entirely upon the crops in other countries as well as in our own—in fact, upon the question of supply and consequent demand. The protective tariff, Mr. Morton, is to keep out from this country things that are grown or manufactured in other countries, and which we ourselves are able to grow or manufacture. We presume that Mr. Morton is not aware that during the period of the greatest protection this country has ever had our exports of wheat were larger than ever known in the history of the country, the result being that our imports were phenomenally smaller than our exports; hence our exceeding prosperity under protection. The dense ignorance shown by the secretary of agriculture in the affairs pertaining to his department would be amusing, were it not so shameful, in coming from the head of the department that should be representative of our vast agricultural resources.—American Economist.

Wages Lost In Eastern Mills.

The extent of the depression in the textile industries of New England may be gauged by the following statement of the losses in wages in Lowell, Mass. The mills were shut down for periods as follows, and the losses, as near as can be obtained, are also given: Merrimeck, two weeks; loss, $44,000. Lawrence, three weeks; loss, $90,000. Lowell, brussels department, four weeks: injrain department, seven weeks; loss, $77,000. Appleton, twelve and a half weeks; loss, $100,000. Tremont and Suffolk, eight weeks; loss, $150,000. Hamilton, two weeks; loss, $38,000. Faulkner's, seven weeks; loss, $24,000. Pickering's hosiery, twelve weeks; loss, $24,000. Pullingy's shoeshop, nine weeks; loss, $3,000. Collins' mills, six weeks; loss, $8,400. Mohair Plush company, eight weeks; loss, $4,000. Howard Knitting company, six weeks; loss, $25,000. Stott Bros., running two-thirds time; loss, $1,000; making a total loss to employees of $515,300. Besides this many small concerns have been shut down for three months, and if the total losses of these could be obtained it would undoubtedly be found that the working people of the city have lost in wages fully $750,000 this season. But the loss is not at an end, as the mills have all cut down wages about 7 per cent and are usually running on reduced time and with reduced help.—Manufacturers' Record.

Real Causes of the Panic.

While Mr. Cleveland's cry of warning to foreign investors was has contributed to bring us to our present sorry plight, the overshadowing and all controlling reason for our condition is to be found in the threat of the Democratic party to destroy our present industrial system by absolutely destroying the protective features of our revenue system, and in its place establish a system designed simply and solely for revenue. This threat is the real cause of all our trouble. But for it the question of silver would not have rufled this nation more than a breeze of summer disturbs the placid waters of some sheltered brook. The tariff is the issue in this nation to day and will continue to be until we have established beyond question one system or the other—the "protective" or "the tariff for revenue only" system. —General George A. Sheridan.

PROTECT AGRICULTURE.

It Is Quite as Important as Our Manufacturing Industries.

The population of the United States is probably now not less than 65,000,000. If the same ratio as to the employment of our people holds good, there are now about 31,000,000 people who earn wages or live by work, including about 6,000,000 engaged in agricultural pursuits. There is no other single industry that gives employment to so many of our people as agriculture. While the product of the agriculturist does not equal in value the product of the manufacturing industries, agriculture is, to a certain extent, the basis and foundation of all other industries. No industry can possibly exist without it. The farmer feeds all the people. The miner who goes down into the earth may dispense with a house and live in the hole he has dug. The lady may dispense with the bonnet and depend upon the covering for the head which nature has given her. And the man who toils may dispense with shoes for his feet and wrap the saw hide about them. But none of them can dispense with the products of the farm. All must have bread or die. Agriculture should therefore be protected, and there is no country in the world where it stands more in need of protection than in the United States. It should be protected in the products it produces, and in the market in which it sells its surplus products. The latter is quite as important as the former. If the farmer cannot sell, there is no incentive to produce more than enough for his own wants. And if he has no surplus, or cannot sell what he has, he cannot buy clothing to keep out the cold or the necessaries of life upon which he lives. Is is the money from his surplus products that enables him to live.—The Late Thomas H. Dudley of New Jersey.

The First English Slave Trader.

Sir John Rawkins was the first English slave trader. He formed a company composed of the leading men of London and fitted out three small ships, which sailed in 1562. Later Queen Elizabeth lent Hawkins Jesus e large ship of her own of 700 tons, and took shares in the second African company. She not only equipped the ship, but put 100 soldiers on board to provide for contingencies. On the second voyage Hawkins secured 400 negroes and had a narrow escape from losing them, owing to the lack of water when he was near the equator. But, as he piously recorded in his log, "the Almighty God would not suffer his elect to perish, and sent a breeze which carried them safe to Dominica." This was the beginning of the slave trade, which lasted for more than two centuries before it was finally suppressed.—Boston Transcript.

Carried a Live Shark Ashore.

Jonathan Fowler, a Massachusetts fisherman, once walked out knee deep through the mud and filth of a seashore at low tide to a shark left by the retiring waters, shouldered it and brought it alive on his back to the shore. The shark weighed 500 pounds, quite a load, considering that it was not the most portable of articles and that the man had to wade through mud.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Dr. Miles' Medical Co., Elkhart, In.

You will remember the statement I made to you some months ago, when I was afflicted with a bad case of dyspepsia, and through the use of your remedies you kindly requested me. I tried all kinds of medicines, and obeyed all medical directions. My nerves were completely shattered, producing dizziness, heart trouble and all the ills that make life miserable. I commenced to take Dr. Miles' Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills as per directions, and was CURED after three weeks' use. I am in the best physical condition of my life, and have had no return of the trouble. I am willing you should use my name and testimonial in any way you may see fit, as I feel like praising the remedies that CURED me. Yours truly,

FOR WOMEN AND HOME.

This well-known journal, a union of four leading women's papers, has won its fame because it deals with what really interests the women of America. Fashions from the standpoint of good taste and economy. Fiction of a pure and helpful kind. Music and Art suitable for non-professional readers. Household hints written by practical women. Suggestions and aids for self-supporting women. It is a paper for women, by women, and its writers are among the most noted authors. Every line is original, every engraving a gem.

It is a paper of to-day without espousing the great questions of religion, politics and temperance, it gives all the news regarding them. It is universally quoted by the press because its views are all its own, and unique. Send to Springfield, Ohio, for a sample copy. Formerly $1.00, it is now but 50 cents a year. News and Comment.

THE State capitol commission met in St. Paul on the 28th of last month and closed the purchases for the new capitol site. The expenses of the board thus far amount to $1,151.12. The next move will be to advertise for plans, and the members of the commission will visit many of the state capitols throughout the Union to get ideas on the most modern style of state buildings.

THE senate committee on foreign affairs, which is investigating the Hawaiian business, is said to be considering the capability of the Hawaiian people for self-government, with the view of annexing the Islands to the United States sometime in the future. Should such a contingency arise, it would be a and blow to King Grover, whose sole sad only reason for trying to restore Queen Lil to her throne was to give the Harrison administration a slap in the face.

MUNCIPOLIS feeds and shelters from 100 to 200 tramps nightly in her police stations, and is thus wasting money and sympathy and encouraging the trapp business, while hundreds of her deserving poor are daily begging for work. Recently an officer went into the tramp's quarters and announced that he had work for them, and out of the 120 tramps in the room only two volunteered to work. If the officer had asked them to take a bath they would all have taken to the woods.

BEN DUNN of the Princeton Union, devotes about nine columns of the last issue of his paper to the address which State Auditor Bierman recently issued to the public anent the pine land investigation which Dunn was instrumental in starting in the last legislature. As might be expected, the Princeton editor punctures the auditor's letter in every point, and makes out a strong case against Mr. Bierman. One thing is certain, the agitation of this matter has given it so much publicity that no future state auditor will dare to sell pine timber on school lands for less than it is worth.

ANYBODY from Washington indicts several changes in Cleveland's cabinet. Attorney-General Olney is certain to retire. His health is poor and the companies he represents are asking for more of his time. Hisell will go from the postoffice department to the department of justice, and Josiah Quincy, state assistant secretary of state, has been notified that he can have the postmastership and he has agreed to take it. "Otey" probably will find it hard to serve two masters—the people and the corporations—and Hisell has discovered that the head of the postoffice department is an unsecure and he is looking for a softer snap.

THE Northern Pacific Railway company wants the present receivers removed, and others appointed in their place. It is charged that the receivers are working the various lines to their own private benefit. The petition gives in detail the cause of the collapse, and charges President Oakes and the board of directors with making immense profits off the building of branch lines which never paid operating expenses. Whether all the charges made in the petition are true or not, it is obvious to everyone that there has been a terrible leakage somewhere when such a splendid piece of property as the Northern Pacific railway should be in the financial condition it is today.

THE assassin of Mayor Harrison, of Chicago has been found guilty of murder and will have to hang, unless his attorneys can procure a new trial, which is altogether unlikely. No wretch ever more richly deserved his fate than this man, and his hanging will have a salutary effect upon other cranks who are seeking notoriety. Hind Prendergast escaped on the plea of insanity which was set up by his counsel, the country would soon be overrun with cranks, and no public man's life would be safe. There is not one of these cranks but is sane enough to know right from wrong, and are really a more dangerous element in society than the insane, because the latter are locked up as soon as the first symptoms of insanity appear, while the latter are allowed their freedom until some innocent life pays the penalty. And the only remedy for this is to treat the murderous crank as a criminal, responsible for his actions.

POOR BLEEDING KANSAS.

A serious row has broken out among the Kansas populists. Mrs. Lease, who occupied the position of head of the state board of charities, has been summarily removed from office by Governor Lewelling "in the interest of harmony and good government," the executive says. But the real cause of the removal is said to be the fact that Mrs. Lease had never thoroughly buried the hatchet with the state administration, and when word was brought to the governor that the fiery, female Populist was about to make another assault on him through the newspapers, he immediately wrote the order for her removal. She will take the matter into the courts, on the ground that she cannot be removed without cause, and the governor's order of dismissal assigns no reason for so doing. In the meantime Mrs. Mary gives voice to her pent-up feelings as follows:

"The old crowd must go. I went into this fight for principle, and I cannot and will not tolerate the corruption of the present administration, an administration more corrupt than any Republican administration that ever disgraced Kansas. The administration of Gov. Lewelling seems to make appointments to further his own political ends, regardless of competency. When he finds an appointee he don't use he deposes him."

A prominent populist attorney remarks in the same vein:

"The removal of Mrs. Lease will certainly disrupt the People's party in the state, and lead to shameful and disgraceful defeat at the next fall elections. I certainly consider the governor the most unwise and indiscreet governor Kansas ever had. He has done more to bring reproach upon the state and astray capital from coming to it than all the governors Kansas has had from the time of her admission to the Union. I will not say an atom to defeat him for renomination, supported by thousands of our people."

HARD TIMES.

Speaking of the causes for hard times the Northfield News recently says: "The hard times began when Mr. Cleveland came into power. If this were merely a coincidence it would be remarkable. But that Democratic assumption of control of the government and the depression of business were indeed cause and effect is an unavoidable conclusion. Mr. Cleveland went into Washington pledged by his platform to assail with hostile legislation the vast and complex industries built up in this country under the protective system. That fiat chilled the heart of every industry in the United States. It checked proposed extensions. It made prices unsteady. It depreciated the prices of stocks of material, it made orders small and dangerous all operations extending into the future, it depreciated the value of every manufacturing plant and it shortened the credit of every mill owner operating with borrowed money.

DEMOCRATIC FINANCIERING.

Minneapolis Journal: "The government arrives at the end of the year with a poor showing. The treasury balance has slumped down to less than $100,000 and the reserve over part of it to about $82,000,000, although that fund should be kept up to $100,000,000. Expenditures have exceeded receipts this month by between $6,000,000 and $6,000,000, while the customs receipts are the lowest since 1885, the total for December aggregating about $9,000,000. The secretary of the treasury evidently estimated the deficit for the fiscal year too low. It will be nearer $40,000,000 than $28,000,000."

THE Republican State Central committee met in St. Paul this week for a business meeting. The development of the past few months shows the need of the application of Republican principles and indicates that the party will again do business at the old stand just as soon as the people can again be heard from.

IF the country ever can learn anything by a bitter experience the experience of the past few months has clearly taught it that republican principles are the best—the most reliable, and the deans will not have the chance to ruin the country again very soon.

Their efforts were not very successful, however, for the rats played havoc with the dead sparrows and destroyed 150 of them. About half as many were killed in the tournament. Another shoot of the same kind will be held in the near future.

COMMISSION PLEASED.

Red River Drainage Work Progressing Satisfactorily.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 2.—The Red river drainage commission met at the governor's office, holding two sessions. Mr. Chandler, Mr. Nicholson, Mr. Miller and Assistant Secretary of State Stockmeyer were present. The meeting was for the purpose of closing up business for the year.

Mr. Valentine, president of the commission, spoke himself and the board members, saying that they were highly pleased with the way in which the work was handled by Mr. Rinehart and had been done. He has accomplished all that he agreed to do and more, since, although the work is not completed in detail, temporary ditches have been cut which will relieve the overflow of spring waters and give the district practically the benefit of the completed undertaking, although this was not promised until Aug. 1.

Mr. Rhinehart will receive what is left of the amount appropriation of $81,500 for drainage, and will wait until next year for the balance due him. The commission does this year extends over 250,000 acres, and indirectly benefits a still larger area.

Fatal Accident to a Montgomery Sleighing Party.

MONTGOMERY, Minn., Jan. 2.—The Chicago express, southbound, struck a sleigh in which were Dr. McKeon, Rev. Father Windisch, Joseph Dedina and his son-in-law, Joseph Slais. Dedina was instantly killed, Slais was seriously injured, the team was killed and the sleigh demolished. The other occupants of the sleigh escaped injury by jumping. The train was not seen by the occupants until it was upon them.

ADORN A GALLOWS.

PRENDERGAST'S FATE SPEEDILY DECIDED BY THE JURY.

The Assassin of Mayor Carter Harrison Found Guilty and Sentenced to Death. The Verdict Was Read He Utterly Collapsed—An Omaha Tragedy.

CHICAGO, Dec. 30.—The jury in the Prendergast case, at 2:17 p. m. returned a verdict of guilty, and fixed the penalty at death. The verdict produced a profound sensation in the court room. The prisoner was fear s t r i c k e n and trembling when brought back to court, and utterly collapsed when the announcement was read.

E. P. PRENDERGAST.

When Clark Fitzgerald arose to read the finding of the jury the prisoner stood clutching the back of a chair, eyeing him with the most intense eagerness. His long, bony fingers nervously clasped and unclasped the back of the chair, his frame trembled violently, his face was flushed, and his spiteful looking mouth opened and closed as though he would say something, but lacked the power to speak.

"We, the jury, find the defendant, Patrick Eugene John Prendergast, guilty of murder in manner and form as charged in the indictment and Fix the Penalty at Death."

Fitzgerald's voice, clear and calm, read out the finding and died away with a slight emphasis on the final word.

Then Prendergast revealed himself the utter coward. His face turned pale, he opened his mouth to speak but only a faint murmur came from between his pale and quivering lips. He moved slightly and would have fallen, but for the assistance of a bailiff. When the jury was polled he listened with acuity to each and every answer to Judge Brentano's question.

"Was this, and is this now your verdict?"

"It is," said Foreman Jacob Sutter, and "It is," repeated every other juror, and then bope and the last vestige of courage failed utterly in Prendergast's breast. He was half led, half carried back to his cell, where, refusing to speak, he threw himself upon his bunk in the attempt to hide from his fellow prisoners, whose expressions of satisfaction over the verdict were more emphatic than graceful, and more sincere than polite.

DEED OF A DEMON.

An Omaha Man Cremates His Entire Family Including Himself.

OMAHA, Jan. 1.—On marble slabs at the city morgue lie the charred remains of the family of John Cummings. Father, mother, baby and grandmother are there, awaiting the outcome of the coroner's inquiry. Nothing in Nebraska annals approaches the deed for horror.

Cummings had been in ill health for some time, and according to neighbor Tommy Fox, who was present, he deliberately set fire to his own house and closed the doors on his wife, mother-in-law, his wife and his 1-year-old baby in the flames. The little boy tells a straightforward story, and says that his father originated he said: "Cummings was sitting on the edge of the bed in a chair, where Mrs. Cummings' mother was with the baby. Another person in the room was Mrs. Fox, the mother of Mrs. Cummings, by aunt. There was a fuss about something, and Cummings upset the lamp and closed the door, compelling the inmates to stay there. They cried, but he refused to let any of them out."

Another Witness Talks.

Philip Nathan, a next-door neighbor, says that when he first saw the flames he noticed Mrs. Cummings trying to open the shutters to the window of the bedroom. He heard her cry and say, "My baby is already afire." Soon thereafter he saw the woman enveloped in flames.

Miss Nellie Fox, who is a relative of Mrs. Cummings and a frequent visitor to the house, says that Cummings had been sick for quite a long time. She denied her brother's statement about Cummings having purposely knocked down the lamp to burn the entire family, but the boy rejoined that he saw him do it. He also added that when he first took notice he saw Cummings sitting on the bed crying.

The police are working on the case yet, but have developed nothing to dispute the evidence that Cummings committed the crime while in a fit of insane rage.

EVANS AGAIN FREE.

The Notorious California Train Robber Breaks Jail at Fresno.

FRESNO, Cal., Dec. 29.—At 6:10 p. m. Chris Evans, the notorious train robber, escaped from the county jail, by the aid of a waiter who took his food in to him. They held up the jailer with revolvers. One man who attempted to stop them was shot in the shoulder.

Posses Returning Home.

FRESNO, Jan. 1.—Word received at the sheriff's office regarding the pursuit of the escaped bandit, Chris Evans, announces that all posses except Sheriff and his regular deputies, are coming home. The Scott posse will remain indefinitely.

Mrs. Evans Held.

FRESNO, Cal., Jan. 1.—Mrs. Evans has been held in the sum of $8,000 for complicity in releasing her husband, Chris Evans. Her brother, George Byrd of Visalia will furnish bonds. There are no tidings from the sheriff's posse.

"Only the Scars Remain."

Says HENRY HUDSON, of the James Smith Woolen Machinery Co., Philadelphia, Pa., who certifies as follows:

"Among the many testimonials which I see in regard to remarkable medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc., none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

Mother Urged Me

THE HIGHEST AWARD.

Royal Baking Powder Has all the Honors in Strength and Value 20 Per Cent Above its Nearest Competitor.

The Royal Baking Powder has the enviable record of having received the highest award for articles of its class—greatest strength, purest ingredients, most perfectly combined—wherever exhibited in competition with others. In the exhibitions of former years, at the Centennial, at Paris, Vienna and at the various State and Industrial fairs, where it has been exhibited, judges have invariably awarded the Royal Baking Powder the highest honors.

At the recent World's Fair the examinations for the baking powder awards were made by the experts of the chemical division of the Agricultural Department at Washington. The official report of the tests of the baking powders which were made by this department for the specific purpose of ascertaining which was the best, and which has been made public shows the following strength of the Royal to be 160 cubic inches of carbonic gas per ounce of powder. Of the cream of tartar baking powders exhibited, six fell short in strength—thus tested contained but 133 cubic inches of leavening gas. The other powders gave an average of 111. Royal, therefore, was found of 29 per cent greater leavening strength than its nearest competitor, and 44 per cent above the average of all other tests. Its superiority in other respects, however, in the quality of the food it makes as to flakiness, delicacy and wholesomeness, could not be measured by figures.

It is these high qualities, known and appreciated by the women of the country for so many years, that have caused the sales of the Royal Baking powder, as shown by statistics, to exceed the sale of all other baking powders combined.

Hall's Hair Renewer cures dandruff and scaly affections; also the worst cases of baldness where the glands which feed the roots of the hair are not closed up.

During the last half-century—since the discovery of Ayer's Sarsaparilla—the average life of man has increased in civilized countries, has been considerably lengthened. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is everywhere considered the standard blood-purifier, the superior medicine.

The promptness with which Ayer's Cherry Pectoral stops shocking cough and induces refreshing sleep is something marvelous. It never fails to give instant relief, even in the worst cases of throat and lung trouble, and is the best remedy for whooping cough.

WOULD NOT ENTER IT

A NEW PHASE OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC INJUNCTION CASE.

The United States Court at St. Paul Refused to Sanction That Part of Judge Jenkins' Order Preventing the Men From Striking—What Judge Caldwell Would Have Done In the Premises.

LITTLE ROCK, Jan. 2.—Apropos the threatened strike which was to have takes place Tuesday or the Northern Pacific and the recent order of Judge Jenkins at Milwaukee enjoining the strike and the subsequent order of Judge Caldwell at St. Paul, the following will be of interest to the public. The general administration of the receivership devolves on the United States circuit court at Milwaukee. That court is called the primary jurisdiction, the receivers having first been appointed and the property turned over to them under the orders of that court. But it was necessary that the Dakota and Montana in the other states through which the road runs should confirm for that district the action of the Milwaukee court.

This was done by filing a bill and procuring ancillary receivership in each state. All orders of the court of primary jurisdiction requiring to be enforced in the other states are nanally entered as of course, and presented to those courts.

Refused to Enter the Order.

But a gentleman in the city from St. Paul says the United States circuit court in that city refused to enter that part of theorder of the Milwaukee court enjoining the officers of labor organizations from ordering a strike on the road or the employes from striking on account of a reduction of their wages, but did enter so much of the order as enjoined the employes in case they struck from interfering with the property or men employed to take their places.

When Judge Caldwell was appealed to for information on this point he declined to say more than that the writs issued by the two courts will disclose the difference between them. To an Associated Press reporter who asked Judge Caldwell if there was any danger of a strike on any of the roads in this circuit in the hands of receivers, he answered that there was not as far as he knew.

What Caldwell Would Do.

Upon being asked what he would do if a strike was threatened on account of a reduction of wages on any of the roads for which he had appointed receivers, he replied:

"If receivers should apply for leave to reduce the existing scale of wages, before acting upon their petition I would require them to give notice of the application to the officers or representatives of the several labor organizations to be affected by the proposed change, of the time and place of hearing and would also require them to grant such officers or representative leave of absence and furnish them transportation to the place of hearing and substituting them while in attendance, and I would hear both sides in person or by attorneys, if they wanted attorneys to appear for them. The employes on a road in the hands of a receiver are employes of the court, and as much in its service as the receivers themselves, and as much upon any proposed order of the court which would affect the whole body of employes. If, after a full hearing and consideration, I found that it was necessary, equitable and best to reduce the scale of wages, I would give the employes ample time to determine whether they would accept or reject the scale. If they rejected it, they would not be enjoined from quitting the service of the court either singly or in a body; in other words, I would not enjoin them from striking; but if they made their election to strike I would make it plain to them that they must not, they quitting the service of the court, interfere with the property of or the operation of the road or the men employed to take their places.

Entitled to Be Heard

"A United States court can very readily find the means to effectually protect the property in its possession and the persons in its employ. I have in one or two instances pursued the policy I have indicated, and the differences were satisfactorily adjusted."

Chief Arthur Rejoined.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 29.—Writs were served during the day upon Chief Arthur and the other national officers of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers from the United States circuit court of the Eastern district of Wisconsin, enjoining them and the order from interfering with the operation of the Northern Pacific railroad.

Conference Ended.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 2.—The conference between Northern Pacific engineers and officials of the road has closed, but the results were not given out. At 11 a. m. the firemen will meet the officials. E. E. Clark of Cedar Rapids, Ia., grand-chief of the Order of Railway Conductors, has arrived in the city from Chicago.

WANT THEM REMOVED.

Petition Filed to Oust the Present Northern Pacific Receivers.

CHICAGO, Dec. 29.—The Northern Pacific Railroad company, by Silas W. Pettit of Philadelphia, its general counsel, has filed in the circuit court of the United States at Milwaukee, before Judge James G. Jenkins, its petition for the removal of Thomas F. Oakes, H. C. Payne and Henry C. Rouse, the present receivers, and the appointment of other receivers in their place.

The petition sets out that Mr. Oakes, as president of the company, appointed E. G. Rolston, the president of the Farmers' Loan and Trust company of New York, which is trustee of most of the main and branch line mortgages of the Northern Pacific Railroad company, chairman of the finance committee of the Northern Pacific directory.

The petition then states that when the Oakes-Rolston board took charge of the Northern Pacific it was in good financial condition and in high credit; that the Oakes management increased the interest bearing debt from $26,000,000 to $66,000,000 all in one year, and charges that the officers and the board of directors were themselves interested in selling certain properties to the Northern Pacific at an exhorbitant profit to themselves.

The story of the collapsing of the Northern Pacific is set out in great detail, naming particularly each of the railroads which were acquired by the Northern Pacific company and which the hill declares completed its ruin within one year after the Oakes-Rolston board came into power.

Receivers Not Incompetent.

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 29.—Receiver Henry C. Payne of the Northern Pacific said in regard to the petition of the stockholders of the road seeking the appointment of new receivers that he and his colleagues have faithfully and diligently undertaken to administer the trust placed in their charge, having in view only its preservation and management in such a way as in the quickest time to place the company on its feet.

OFFICIALS CONFIDENT.

Jacksonville's Athletic Club Certain the Big Fight Will Occur.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 2.—The application for a writ of habeas corpus for the release of Mitchell and Corbett will be argued Wednesday. The postponement is to give the governor more time to file instructions, if he has any. The athletic club is very sanguine of pulling off the fight. Lawyers say that it will be impossible for the governor to declare martial law after the courts have decided that no law is to be violated. unless he assumed the arbitrary powers of a dictator. It is their opinion that he would hardly do that. Lawyers add that a requisition for Mitchell from Mississippi on account of the Richburg affair will not issue; that it cannot because the statute of limitation defeats any proceeding of this late day.

SAN FRANCISCO EXPOSITION.

Dedicatory Exercises Postponed Until Buildings Are Completed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 2.—The California midwinter international exposition opened during the morning. The opening is purely informal, however, the dedicatory exercises having been postponed until the main buildings are completed and the exhibits are in place. There were no formal exercises, and the only special features were concerts by the midwinter fair band and the unveiling of Sir Francis Drake's monument, the "Prayer Book Cross." Besides the music and monument dedication, visitors had 160 acres of ground to wander over, and about 70 buildings and camps to inspect.

HAWAIIAN MATTERS.

Minority Report of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—The Republican members of the foreign affairs committee have completed the minority report on the resolutions presented by Chairman McCreary on the day congress adjourned, as a substitute for the Hitt resolution. The report was prepared by Mr. Storer of Ohio and is signed by Messrs. Hitt, Harmer, Blair and Van Vorhis of New York. It is very voluminous and goes in detail into the whole history of Mr. Blount's appointment as commissioner paramount and the course of the administration.

Gladstone's Birthday.

LONDON, Dec. 30.—The Rt. Hon. William Ewart Gladstone, who was born Dec. 29, 1809, celebrated his birthday Friday by working hard in his study. During the afternoon he went to the house of commons, and every other way he rigorously attended to the duties of his position. Mr. Gladstone received many telegrams of congratulation.

Refused Recognition.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 29.—Admiral de Gama, the commander of the insurgent fleet in the absence of de Mello, made a formal demand upon the representatives of the foreign powers at the capital, asking that they should recognize the insurgents as belligerents. The diplomatic corps, having previously come to an understanding on this subject, refused to accord the request of the insurgent admiral.

Mrs. Lease Bounced.

TOPEKA, Dec. 29.—The Populist campaign was thrown into the wildest excitement by the action of Governor Lewelling in removing Mrs. Mary A. Lease from the state board of charities. This was done after a long conference with his associate state officers and other leaders of the People's party, and was no doubt in anticipation of war which Mrs. Lease was preparing to declare against the state administration.

Mrs. Lease's Successor.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 1.—Governor Lewelling has appointed J. W. Freeburn, sheriff of McPherson county, member of the board of trustees state charitable institutions, to succeed Mrs. Mary Lease.

Jackson Park Open.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Jackson Park, with its relics of the fair, came into the possession of the public Monday. The wagon gates were thrown wide open, turnstiles were taken down and the Columbian guards retired to the buildings. During the entire day a constant stream of persons poured through the gates.

Will Withdraw Horablower.

AN ITALIAN PATRIOT.

The Active Political Career of Premier Zanardelli.

Giuseppe Zanardelli, the new Italian premier, is one of the leading lawyers and statesmen of Italy and has taken an active part in politics there for 40 years. He was born in Brescia 64 years ago, fought for Italian independence and unity, winning military distinction before he had reached man's estate. He revolutionized his native Brescia and was an active worker for Cavour and Victor Emmanuel throughout Lombardy and Piedmont, acting also as royal delegate to Naples, Sicily and Belluno.

Since 1860 Zanardelli has been a member of the chamber of deputies and always active in debate. In 1876 he was minister of public works under Depretis and afterward minister of the interior under Cairoli. He accepted the ministry of justice when Depretis came in again, and retained it under Crispi, but retired when Crispi fell and refused a portfolio offered him by Giolitti, whose recent expulsion from power in disgrace made a vacancy for him as premier.

Zanardelli has been the author and advocate of more measures of a progressive sort than any other member of the Italian parliament. Through his efforts the ballot was placed in the hands of 3,000,000 additional voters, and he compiled and secured the passage of the penal and commercial codes—two works of recognized merit and authority for which he has received decorations from the rulers of other nations than his own. He has several times refused the premiership, and last year was unanimously elected president of the chamber of deputies.

In person Zanardelli is tall, thin and of distinguished appearance. Though impetuous and nervous, he is gentle and affable and an indefatigable worker. He is a bachelor, with a small fortune which he has gained by his own labors, and leads a life of great simplicity and purity, which makes him exceptionally popular with the masses of the Italian people, who love him none the less for the loftiness of his motives, the firmness of his character and his zealous devotion to the cause of popular liberty.

TO UTILIZE NIAGARA'S POWER.

The First Tunnel For That Purpose Almost Completed.

Standing at any of the points of vantage from which the great falls of Niagara may be viewed, one of the earliest thoughts in the utilitarian mind, after the feeling of awe engendered by a first sight of the sublime spectacle has passed, is about the great usefulness of the immense power there concentered, if only it could be properly controlled.

This power has not only been harnessed; but, aided by the rapid advances in electrical engineering, it will before long, if all goes well, be supplying motive power light and heat to many more by places, such as Buffalo and Rochester, with a prospect of profitably transmitting it as far as New York city, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and even to Chicago.

The scheme by which this is to be accomplished ranks among the greatest engineering enterprises of the century and is expected to be ready to begin operations by the 1st of next February. An inlet canal taps the river about ½ miles above the falls, conducting the water to a great wheel pit, where a series of gates admit it to pipes, called penstocks, which will convey it to the turbine wheels, 140 feet below, generating 5,000 horsepower for each wheel and conveying it by shafting to dynamos on the surface.

After the water has done its work at the turbines it will rush down by a tunnel about 1¼ miles in length, shaped like a horseshoe and 200 feet beneath the surface, and rejoin the river a few hundred feet below the falls. The excavation of this tunnel was the most important, difficult and costly part of the entire undertaking. In its digging 1,500 men were employed at an expenditure of $60,000 a month. Ground was broken for it on Oct. 4, 1890, and it is now practically completed.

The outlet through which the tunnel discharges into the river is said to be the most solid piece of masonry of the kind ever constructed. It would need to be, for the water will whirl through it at the rate of 53½ feet a second. The company has a franchise for a second tunnel on the New York side of the river and for a third on the Canadian side, and expects to be able to produce 100,000 horsepower in each tunnel, which will lower the water in the falls about two inches.

Mr. Tariff.

Tariff was originally the name of a Moorish chief, who having a port in Spain near Gibraltar was accustomed to levy toll on passing vessels. His toll became a regularly understood thing, and the amount was added to the price of the goods.

CALIFORNIA'S PRIDE.

GREAT DISPLAY OF FRUITS AND FLOWERS AT SUNSET CITY.

An Altogether Interesting Exhibition of the Agricultural and Horticultural Resources of the Golden State—Active Competition Between the Rival Citrus Belts.

None of the structures at California's Midwinter exposition will be more distinctively Californian than the Agricultural and Horticultural building. It is the third in size of the buildings, and its dimensions are about 400 by 200 feet. Its architecture is of the style in which the early padres loved to erect their mission buildings, with low round arches and flattened domes, a style that was peculiar to early California, and is there distinguished as the "mission," in much the same way and with quite as much correctness as the people of older states speak of certain architectural forms as "colonial." The structure is, however, much more ornate and fanciful in its decorations than the early examples of the padres' work, which were severely and characteristically plain.

But if the building is distinctively Californian in its architecture, it will be hardly less so in the character of the products therein displayed. All the world is free to send exhibits, and Florida, Mexico and Japan have already announced their intention of disputing California's boasted supremacy in oranges. Other nations will no doubt be ready to do so in the matter of prunes, raisins, figs and the other dried fruits, but the perishable nature of most of the materials, even with the advantage of cold storage which will be accorded them, will necessarily restrict the competition to localities from which the displays can be replenished as occasion requires. This will give the California counties manifest advantages which they will not be slow to act upon, for they are never slow in anything.

In the showing of dried and canned fruits, however, they realize that they must do their best in a competition with the older, though less favored, localities in which the different varieties have been made specialties, and in these lines they have devised some surprising things. Fresno county, the greatest raisin district in the world, for instance, is to have a model of her beautiful courthouse, the body of the building to be constructed of raisins and the dome of oranges. The dimensions of the model will be 50 by 50 feet, and the dome will be 45 feet in height. There will be plenty of room inside for visitors, and the structure will have to be watchfully guarded lest visiting vandals actually eat it up.

There has been an orange war in California for several years. Outsiders do not know much about it unless they have visited the coast or take some California paper, for Californians never mention it when they go away from home. In fact, Californians on their travels forget all about sectional jealousies and neighborhood quarrels and speak of the entire big state as if it were their personal homestead, in every acre of which they have a reversionary interest. But the orange war has been waging nevertheless, though it may be considered a fraternal rather than a fratricidal strife, and mention of it is made here, not for the sake of calling outside attention to it, but to show how it is to benefit the whole state.

It is like this: There are in California two separate and distinct citrus belts—meaning tiers of counties in which oranges, lemons and other semitropical fruits can be grown. One of these is in the northern half of the state and embraces the counties of Colusa, Yuba, Butte, Solano, Placer, Sacramento and Napa. The other is in the extreme southern part of the state and includes the counties of San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Ventura, Orange and San Diego on the coast and Kern and San Bernardino in the interior. Between these two sections the greatest rivalry exists as to which raises the best fruits and offers the most inducements to intending settlers. Strange to say, oranges sometimes ripen earlier in the northern belt, and much has been made of this fact.

It has been the custom for each of these belts to have every year a citrus fair of its own, and the displays thereat have seemed simply marvelous to people who live where oranges, lemons, figs, raisins and such things don't grow. This year, however, incited by the general enthusiasm for the Midwinter fair which pervades the state, both belts have agreed to hold their citrus fairs in the Sunset City, and each has been assigned a location near the Agricultural building. Their displays, combined with those of other localities and with the transcendent floral possibilities of the entire state, will give casual visitors a newer and more adequate idea of what the California means when he calls his state "the land of sunshine, fruit and flowers."

Altogether it looks as if the entire Golden State were "out for a good time," as the Native Sons lovingly express it, for much is being made of the amusement features of the exposition, and the San Francisco papers devote a great deal of space to informing the world at large what fun as well as instruction can be had in the Sunset City.

H. T. WHITE.

CALL IT SUNSET CITY.

CALIFORNIA'S MIDWINTER EXPOSITION IS SO DESIGNATED.

Beautified by the Allied Arts of Architecture and Sculpture—A Fountain That Is to Be an Allegorical History of the Golden State.

Architecture and sculpture are doing their prettiest for California's Midwinter exposition, and the people of San Francisco are already beginning to consider the possibility of preserving the beautiful structures which those sister arts have called into existence for temporary purposes at the Sunset City, as the fair grounds have already been nicknamed. These structures are far handsomer architecturally and in ornamentation than any of the permanent structures in Golden Gate park, where the fair reservation is situated, and it would not be unfair to say that they are the handsomest in San Francisco except in the sense in which it might be unfair to compare a fine cathedral with a pretty dwelling house, when each might be most beautiful from the standpoint of appropriateness to its purpose.

In point of durability, too, the exposition buildings would compare very favorably with the majority of homes in a city where wooden constructions predominate so largely as in San Francisco, and a few coats of paint would serve to protect them indefinitely against the elements. If any use can be made of them which will at all compensate for the expense of preserving them they certainly should not be sacrificed. At any rate the people are loath to believe they must lose them, and it is quite likely that when the fair is over endeavors to prevent their destruction will be made similar to those Chicagoans are now making to preserve some of the buildings of their beautiful White City.

Another beautiful feature of the Sunset City which Californians will be loath to part with, once they have seen it, is the great allegorical fountain which is to stand facing the principal entrance to Midwinter plaza, the grand court of the fair. The design accepted by the commissioners shows this to be a work of great originality and a high order of artistic merit. Rupert Schmid, the sculptor, is the designer of it, and he and his assistants are now hard at work getting it ready.

The fountain is thoroughly original. It will be a classic, but not of an ancient order. No old Greek can come back from the pale realms of shade and claim it is an infringement on his work; no modern globe trotter can find in it resemblances to the celebrated fountains of the world. It is an allegorical history of the Golden State, no longer famous for its auriferous deposits alone, but ever more widely known, as an inscription on the fountain declares, as the "land of sunshine, fruit and flowers."

On a mountainous pile of rocks a typical heroic figure of California, crowned with poppies and waving an olive branch, towers 40 feet in the air. At her feet on one side is California's emblematic bear glaring down over a rocky precipice, and on the other side a horned plenty casts forth its wealth of fruits and flowers. Below these, on the base of the cliff, is an eagle, illustrative of the state's loyalty to the union, preying in his talons a standard and a shield bearing California's coat of arms. Below these again a group of cherubs are engaged in pressing grapes.

All about the base of the rocky pile San Francisco's characteristic sea lions are scattered, and from their mouths and from the sides of the pile of rocks just beneath the summit streams of pure water will issue when the fountain is put in play. The resources, industries, commerce and agriculture of the state are appropriately portrayed by statuary arranged near the outer edge of the base of the fountain, quite apart from the main grouping, but none the less effectively backed up by it. The figures of Pomona and Flora are more nearly conventional than anything else about the fountain, but it was to be expected that those old Roman divinities would consent to attire themselves in forms entirely modern, and those in which they have been impersonated are sufficiently original to avoid violating artistic canons as to originality. Groups of miners, however, is distinctively modern, rugged, strong and Californian, and the old fauns in the rocks above them will carry a flood of reminiscence over the sands of the past of many an old forty-niner, waggons of golden ore of miners memory long buried away amid the debris of forgotten things.

It is proper that intending exhibitors from other states and nations should know that while the regulations adopted by the Midwinter commissioners permit the greatest latitude in the matter of displays in national, state and county buildings, the products so displayed will not be allowed to enter into competition with the classified exhibits in the main buildings for prizes. Neither will any selling privileges be granted for any of those buildings nor anything permitted which would interfere with the rights of those who have contracts for commercial privileges. The justice of these regulations is easily comprehended when the rights, privileges and duties of all concerned are properly considered.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

A nameless girl waif on the London wharves is rescued by Gordon between Tarras, the landlord, and Mr. Ivy, a ruined-for-naned bridge and a stranger. Gordon, a young engineer, discovers a secret from a lady Chester II—The deserters arrive, a scuffle ensues in the barroom of the inn, and Tarras disappears III and IV—After a vain hunt for Tarras the waif is led by a strange sound to a voice beneath the bar. Following the clue, she finds Tarras imprisoned and rescues him through a series of old rubbish ranged from the cellar to the bar. Tarras and the waif escape, and the escaped out off the waif in the tunnel, but she takes terrible revenge on them and is befriended by Tarras. V, VI and VII—The waif runs away and attempts suicide. Tarras finds her and, after a deputy to take her to his own home under the care of Mere Lisour, his housekeeper. There she begins a friendship for Arthur Gordon and Mr. Ivy. She is dressed as a boy, and Mr. Ivy—Arthur is introduced to Gordon station keeper. Tarras told and makes the acquaintance of Major Kavanagh, a bosom friend of Tarras, who is a Russian subject.

CHAPTER XXIV.

KAVANAGH'S SACRIFICE.

Kavanagh, whose comprehensive forethought nothing seemed to escape, went into the house with me, and in an easy, chatty way gave Tarras an exhaustive description of the show we had been to. He must have observed my curiosity to form my own opinion the affair and thought it prudent to relieve me from the embarrassment of unswerving the questions which Tarras would probably put to me.

"I, too, have been looking at chrysanthemums," said Tarras when Kavanagh came to the end of his description, and he turned to the book he had been reading.

"'The Land of the Chrysanthemums,'" Kavanagh said, reading the title. Then opening the book and glancing at a page, he sentinued: "To charm is not overrated, I suppose. It must be a delightful haven for the man who seeks shelter from the storms of life."

They talked upon this subject until Kavanagh rose to go.

"I should like to read this book when you have done with it," he said.

"Take it with you. It's like a volume of poems—pleasant to dip into now and then rather than to wade through, and I shall be quite as happy to take up my own dip a couple of weeks as in a couple of days."

I had listened to this conversation with special interest, conceiving that Kavanagh had a particular purpose in making inquiries about this distance country.

"Where is that land you were speaking about to Mr. Kavanagh?" I asked Tarras when we were in silence.

"Japan? Oh, right on the other side of the world."

"Then it must be very difficult to get to."

"One would need few weeks continuously to reach there," he said, and then he went on to gossip about the country and the ways and customs of the people with their simple, sweet and peaceful disposition.

The next morning, just after lunch, Kavanagh brought back the book. He had read it through.

"When I take up a thing, I us bound to go through it to the end," he said in reply to Tarras's exclamation of surprise, but a significant glance at me as he raised his eyes gave a double meaning to his words.

I left them talking for about half an hour, and running up to my room dressed hastily to go out. In putting on my gloves, I returned to the living room and told Tarras that I was going into the Kennington road.

"May I offer you a seat in my hansom?" Kavanagh asked, rising.

I accepted, and we presently went out together.

"Rudersdorf has arrived," Kavanagh said gravely when we had started.

I had to close my teeth to prevent them chattering with the excitement that shook me.

"I saw him this morning," he continued in the same somber tone.

"Have you settled what you will do?" I asked, stammering at each word.

"Oh, I had decided on a question before I saw him. It must be done. There is no other way out of the difficulty."

He laughed bitterly at my true expression of thankfulness and gratitude escaped me.

"You do not like it? It is a good thing to be able to save a friend."

"Yes, but one may be excused for feeling sadly used in having to escape even the sneer of two evils. However, he added in a lighter tone, "it is well to do it with a good grace. Still, it's a big wrench—tearing one's self away forever from friends and everything that has made life pleasant."

"Yes," said I, pursing myself in his place. "It is a terrible sacrifice to give up all you love like that. God knows I have not thought enough of your loss."

"Never mind that, my dear girl. For heaven's sake, don't cry!"

A tear of sympathy had started to my eyes as I thought of the pain he would have to leave Tarras even to save him.

"Come, we must have no sentiment. We have to act. You will have to help me in this affair."

"I am glad of that. What am I to do?"

"At present the sole object you have to regard is to keep Tarras entirely ignorant of what is going on."

"Is that all?" I asked, with disappointment.

"For the present, yes. The time to do more will soon soon enough—soon enough, you will find."

CHAPTER XXV.

THE LAST DAY.

"We must take every precaution to prevent the possibility of failure," said Kavanagh. "It is our last chance."

"Have you thought out how it is to be done?" I asked.

Overcoming the hesitation which kept him silent for a few moments, he said: "I think I may safely trust you. You are not likely to be imprudent or careless."

"Careless! How can I be careless in the life of Tarras at stake?"

"Indeed it is. The slightest rumor of suspicion would ruin our hopes, and remember I am not more important to destroy Rudersdorf than it is to keep Tarras in the dark. If he dreamed of our intention to get Gordon safted in his place, he would be the first to telegraph to the minister of police and warn him against the deception that might possibly be put upon Rudersdorf."

"Yes, he would, or never suffer Gordon to take his place. He shall learn nothing from me."

"My plan is a simple one. It is merely to lure Gordon to the Mariner's Joy and serve him as Tarras was served—of course employing other men than those who made Tarras prisoner. The less complicated the scheme is, the better," he pursued, seeing possibly the reluctance I felt. "If you can suggest anything else, please, I shall be only too happy to adopt it, providing, of course, that it is equally practicable."

"Wouldn't it be easier to give him a sleeping draft and carry him off in the same way as you did Tarras?"

He shook his head dubitatively and said: "It might be easy enough—easier, perhaps in one respect, but we must look beyond the mere act of getting Gordon away. Now, what would the consequences be? Gordon would be missed and inquiries made. It would be found out that the same accident had befallen him which overcame Tarras's short time before and that he had last been seen with me. What account could I give that would satisfy his friends and Tarras? Slow as Tarras is to suspect, his doubts must be raised by the peculiar coincidence, and—"

"No, no, that wouldn't do," I said, interrupting him. "Your plan is better—the first; how are you going to get George Gordon to the Ark?"

"When the time comes, you must take him there on pretense that Tarras has been seized and may be found in the cellar where he was confined before. There is nothing to fear," he said, aunt noticing my hesitation.

"I myself shall come as soon as possible to Lambeth in order to avoid any suspicion of collusion. If any simpler scheme presents itself, I will let you know, and of course you shall have timely and definite instructions when the moment comes for action."

"It won't be long, will it?"

"No longer than is absolutely necessary. You must have patience meanwhile. A single false step would ruin everything. Undue haste would awake Rudersdorf's suspicion, and then," he added, with a sigh, "there are my own affairs to wind up—property to be realized, belongings to be disposed of, friends to be said good-by to—a time possibly." He was silent awhile, and then I thought I would

'Round Home.

Agent Fegan is on the sick list.

Ivar A. Krohn was up from Garfield enjoying city life last week.

We desire to hear from several delinquent subscribers at an early date to avoid making any mistake.

Gus Felsing was one of those who gladdened the printer's heart with a bit of the needful on this New Year week.

C. Isaeksen of Minneapolis was in the city last Monday in the interest of a number of Scandinavian publications.

The charity ball was a great success and netted between $140 and $150. Almost two much of a crowd but everybody agrees that they had a good time.

Harry Norrie was feeling happy on New Year's day, on account of a little girl which arrived in his family on the last night of the old year. This is the second daughter in his family, and Harry feels that his cup of happiness is full.

Pete Buschemin came down from Argyle on Tuesday evening to chat with old friends in the city. He reports H. G. Marlette doing a land-office business in his barber-shop in these days—raking in more coin than anybody. The JOURNAL wishes R. G. success.

On the first Sunday in January the officers of the Epworth League will be installed in the M. E. church. The evening service will be given up for these exercises, which will consist of songs, short addresses etc., besides the installation ceremony.

Otto Knoppe, W. R. Richie and Arthur Miller started on Sunday evening for a trip to the coast—intending, if everything suits them, to locate somewhere out there. We will give the boys from six to eight weeks to get sick of it to return to civilization in the Red River Valley.

J. T. Beaudry: The treasurer's office has been running extra time for the past five weeks, trying to keep up with the business that is rushing in to avoid the 5 per cent delinquent penalty that occured January 1st. We run out of receipts just before New Years day and had to wait awhile for more. We hope to catch up soon now.

Mrs. M. J. Hutchinson of this city, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mason, in Barnesville, on the 30th ult., of erysipelas. She was 53 years of age, and had lived here for many years, and had just gone to visit her daughter about two weeks before her death. She leaves two sons and two daughters. Her body was brought here for interment and was buried on New Year's day.

O. J. Tweit, postmaster at Tweit was in the city last week looking for some assistance from his friends here. His house and contents were burned on the 9th of December, his family just escaping with their lives. There was no insurance on the property, and this coupled with the fact that Mr. Tweit has lost two horses and three head of cattle during the past summer leaves him in rather hard circumstances.

The first of Rev. Squiers' "Round the World" lectures—with stereopticon views—will be given in the First Methodist Episcopal church on Thursday evening, January 11th. There will be seven lectures—one each week—and as the price of admission for the whole course is only $1.00 no one should miss this opportunity of being entertained, instructed and amused.

The city was full of newspaper men last Monday, all looking for a slice of the county printing. There was Charley Lamma, of the McIntush Times, Phil A. Kanfer, of the Red Lake Falls Gazette, F. E. George, of the Fertile Journal, D. P. R. Strong, of the Polk County Review and Frank Duffy, of the East Grand Forks Carrier.

Ed Martin left last Thursday for a visit to friends in Iowa, and expects to be gone about three weeks. He intends to stop in St. Paul long enough to order an artificial limb of the latest improved pattern. Ed has navigated around on a wooden stump since he was seven years old, at which time he had his left leg taken off above the ankle, having got tangled up in a mowing machine which was in motion. Ed has few equals as a one-legged sprinter, and can dance, skate, swim, ride horseback, etc., and enjoys life as thoroughly as anyone possessing a full set of limbs. He was offered a good salary last spring to go to the World's Fair as an attraction, but thought he couldn't afford to neglect his business here.

Bert Burnam has been on the sick list this week—laid up with an attack of the quinsy.

Lottie, the second daughter of James Westover, died on Tuesday morning of typhoid fever.

Dr. Warnhuger reports that business in his line is not quite so brisk as it was before the holidays. The new year seems to start off with less sick horses than usual.

Charlie Marsh and J. P. Foote engaged the wood cart and four horses to make their rounds calling on New Year's day. They were both dressed in linen dusters, plug hats and fans and wrote their cards upon shingles. This was the finest turnout we saw on that suspicious occasion.

Last week Chris Anderson went over to East Grand Forks—"and he never came back." His team was found hitched in front of a saloon but "the boy—oh where was he?" is a question that his anxious relatives are now asking. It is the general opinion that he has gone west again.

In our last issue we published a notice of assessment for grading certain streets in Sampson's Addition which caused a roar from that quarter. So great was the dissatisfaction expressed that a remonstrances was handed round on Wednesday and the party who had it told the JOURNAL that he did not find one man in favor of the work being done. The petition is for the abatement of the tax on the ground that the work is unnecessary and uncalled for. The petition will no doubt prevail.

We do not like to be continually drumming, neither do we like to cause any subscriber needless expense and so we again give notice that we shall soon put a number of delinquent subscription accounts into the hands of an attorney with instruction to collect at all hazards. We never have had to bring suit as yet in these matters and will do anything in our power to avoid it, but we must at least know what people intend to do. We think that very reasonable.

A Metal That Hardens Steel.

The reason that the mixture of tungsten with steel gives the latter so great a degree of hardness that it readily scratches glass and quartz seems to be revealed by a discovery recently made in Germany. A definitely crystallized compound of iron and tungsten has been discovered, the crystals being so hard as to scratch topaz. Tungsten is a brittle white metal, almost as heavy as gold. The crystals, remarks The Paper Trade, as formed by its combination with iron, in the proportion of one atom of iron to two of tungsten, are silver gray and very brilliant. It is thought that when tungsten is alloyed with steel some of the compound just described is formed in the mass, thereby producing the remarkable increase in the hardness of the steel. This is an interesting example of the value that one metal may lend to the other, for, until the discovery that it could be used in hardening steel, tungsten, although it occurs in considerable abundance, was practically useless and without value.—New York Times.

Ane of His Tricks.

"I thought you said you were going to bring a friend home to dinner with you," said Mrs. Chugwater.

"He couldn't come, Samantha," replied Mr. Chugwater as he sat down with great satisfaction to the first good dinner he had had a chance to attack for a long time.—Chicago Tribune.

Emperors shd sumpresses, kings and queens, write to each other as brother and sister. Reigning grand dukes also enjoy this privileges when addressing kings, but sovereigns not possessing royal honors are designated as cousin.

Wood, like wool, requires to be shrunk before used for manufacturing purpose. Pitch pine beams will shrink in thickness from 1⅛ inches to 1⅛, spruce from 8¼ inches to 8⅜, white pine from 12 inches to 11¼, yellow pine a trifle less.

It is reported from Japan that a syndicate of Americans has a project on foot for the establishment of a gigantic clock and watch manufactory in Tokio, which is to employ over 10,000 workmen, labor being so cheap in Japan.

MCKINLEY'S ADVICE.

A Short Session of the Legislature Recommended by Ohio's Governor.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 2.—Governor McKinley in his message to the legislature says:

"Your honorable body meets at a time when the state is suffering from prolonged industrial depression, for which, unhappily, there appears no immediate prospect of relief. The people will demand that their representatives shall practice economy in public expenditures, which necessarily forces upon them in their private expenditures.

A short session and hut little legislation would be appreciated at a time like this."

Real estate and other tangible property, now, he says, pays the large share of taxes, while other varieties of property which are intangible, either wholly escape or bear a disproportionate share. He suggests "that the tax commission which was appointed to and which did make a report recently upon the subject of tax revision, be continued for such time as it may be deemed wise.

It is a bi-partisan body. Its report shows that the burden is very unequally distributed, and inclines to the view that corporations as a class do not have their full share.

The governor warns against tax legislation "framed so as to confiscate capital or drive it out of the state.

OUR POSTOFFICES.

Over Sixty-eight Thousand in Operation Jan. 1.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The total number of postoffices in operation in the United States on Jan. 1, 1894, is 68,888. This is shown in a statement prepared at the postoffice department, showing the number of postoffices in the country by classes in effect Jan. 1. The number of offices of the three presidential classes is 2,434. There are 151 in the first class, where the receipts are more than $40,000; 674 in the second class, whose receipts range from $6,000 to $40,000, and 2,959 in the third class, where the receipts range from $1,000 to $6,000. There are also 65,382 fourth class postoffices, where appointments of postmasters are not made by the president, and where the compensation of the postmasters for each of the last four quarters of the year amounted to $250, and the receipts $1,000 or less. The net cost raising of 43 fourth class postoffices to the presidential class takes effect Jan. 1, and these are embraced in the statement.

Great Loss of Life.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 30.—A terribly thick fog prevailed here all day and resembled in great loss of life. Owing to the almost absolute darkness 70 persons fell into the river and canals, and of this number 20 are known to be drowned and a number of others are missing.

Miss Jessie Boies Dead.

DES MOINES, Jan. 2.—Miss Jessie Boies, only daughter of Governor Horace Boies, died of consumption Monday at the family home in Waterloo, aged 23 years. Her mother died in 1878.

It was a man from Argyle who with a companion from the same village and one from Hallock stepped into Ed. Gates refectory about noon on Tuesday. The first man aforesaid named "gin" as his'n and after he had duly helped himself he turned to speak to an acquaintance who had just come in; meanwhile his Argyle friend, thinking he had had enough for one forenoon quietly smoked the gin out of the glass and substituted about the same quantity of pure, unadulterated water. Soon the man, without noticing the substitute, turned to take his medicine but no sooner had he got it into his mouth than he spat it out exclaiming vehemently: "What in thunder is that stuff anyhow? I never tasted anything like that before in my life." Then catching the expression of his friend's eye he said: "Oh, no you don't! that's no gin. I don't know what the dickens it is but I do know well enough it is not gin," and he proceeded to rectify the mistake right speedily.

Death of Dan McDonald.

D. F. McDonald died at his residence in this city on Tuesday noon at the age of 54 years. Daniel F. McDonald was the son of Finnan McDonald, from whom McDonaldsville, in Norman county, was named, who fifty years or more ago on the Wild Rice river was one of the leading pioneers of this section. He was born in county Glengary, Ontario, where his youth was spent and, where, in 1871, he was married to Miss Catherine McPherson. He was a railroad contractor, and this business brought him upon the Northern Pacific road, which he followed from Brainerd to the Red River valley, settling in Glyndon in 1872. Here he remained for awhile, locating finally a claim at the crossing of the Wild Rice river on the St. Vincent extension (now the Great Northern railroad) where he hoped a village would grow up around him, but his hopes proved futile, for the village of Ada was located two miles north of the crossing on the open prairie. Later on, in '77 or '78, Mr. McDonald moved to Crookston where he continued to reside until he died. He has filled various offices of trust in the city, was patrolman, city marshal and at the time of his death was filling the position of street commissioner. Simple and unassuming though he was, without the capacity for acquiring unlimited wealth, yet he managed to accumulate what is better, the warm and unfailing friendship of nearly all with whom he came in contact, by whom his memory will long be cherished among the sacred things of life. He was taken down a few short weeks since with a liver trouble which developed into dropsy of the heart, and while from almost the first his physician has had grave doubts of his recovery, Dan bravely struggled on, determined to live for his little family yet a few more years if possible. While not afraid to go, he yet longed very earnestly to live a little longer, and it was not until the night before his death that he seemed to finally give up the struggle. He had received consolations of the sacraments and said to the watchers about the bedside: "Well, I guess I am done for this time, all right enough." He leaves three brothers and five sisters, a wife and nine children to mourn his loss.

Twas Only Flattery.

CROOKSTON, Jan. 3rd, 1894.

EDITORS JOURNAL: I was much somewhat amused at the fulsome flattery poured out upon Capt. A. C. Rhinehart, by the Crookston Times, while the Capt. was busy making money on his state drainage contruct. I have also been surprised that the JOURNAL did not show up the fact that to a republican legislature and to republicans in the district affected belonged the credit of this great work. One would think, (i. e. one who did not know the facts) by reading the Times, that Capt. A. C. Rhinehart belonged all the honor for the great work now so well advanced while to my mind he is only entitled to the credit of that fully performing his contruct so that he may receive his pay therefor. I remember, somewhere back in '79 or '80, the fact that this country was too wet began to dawn upon our leading farmers who began to cast about for some measure of relief. Springer Harbaugh was active then and had a large farm near Euclid. One day, I do not remember in what year (but it was long before the Times was in existence or ever thought of) Mr. Hurlbaugh and A. R. Brown of this city were talking on the matter and they agreed to submit the question to Mr. Hill, of the St. P. M. & M. R. R., and put this add as that road was very much interested in the question. They did so and Mr. Hill agreed to look into and aid in any practical plan that might be suggested. Accordingly a large masscowfention held at Crookston, at which were present delegates from every county affected and a drainage committee was appointed to have charge of the work. A fund was created and a thorough survey was made by competent engineers and the legislature was asked to aid in the matter. This request failed but those who had the matter in charge did not get discouraged and give it up but continued to work hard and to put in money until, at last, at the last session of the legislature the longed for aid was obtained and the herculean task was accomplished. The efforts of such men as Ezra J. Valentine, of Wilkin County, John Erickson, of Clay Co., Capt. D. W. Donaldson, of Kittson Co., Springer Harbaugh, E. D. Childs and Capt. M. R. Brown of Polk Co., belongs the lion's share of honor for the great work by the time and money and hard work they put into it. These men were first in the work and continued faithfully to work until the results they sought were accomplished, except Mr. Harbaugh who did not live to see the drainage an accomplished fact. To one so well acquainted with the facts it seems odd to see a paper trying to heap the credit and the honors for it all upon a stranger—a contractor who is simply doing his duty in carrying out a contract for which he expects to make a goodly sum of money while the men who bore the burden and heat of the day are wholly ignored.

Respectfully Yours,
STATE DEPOT.

If our correspondent was a shrewd political student he would not need far for the animus of the Times' action in this matter for he would recall the fact that the Times was rather "off" with Capt. Rhinehart at the time the Captain needed all the help of his political friends in his late contest for his seat on the bench, and after he had won his fight the Times was obliged to hump itself to get back into line with Cap. before the next letting of the county drainage contract. Our correspondent must know that the JOURNAL was one of the first in the drainage matter and has often mentioned personally the work of others connected with it, that we also spent some time and money in St. Paul working for the success of the measure before the legislature. If we have been remiss this fall it is because we have not paid sufficient attention to the efforts of the Times to get into line again with Mr. Rhinehart.

County Attorney A. R. Holston and County Commissioner D. P. DeMers, got into a wordy altercation in Asselin's saloon on Thursday night, which ended in a tough and tumble bar-room fight in which the attorney received a very pronounced black eye, and various and sundry bumps and bruises contrary to the statute in such case made and provided. The attorney had in the issue of his paper of that day taken occasion to find fault with the way in which Crookston business men conduct their business and we suppose he intended his actions that evening to demonstrate how Crookston business men should settle all business matters.

Mentor Items.

Miss Callie Abbott, who has been very ill with typhoid fever is improving, we learn. Her sister is still quite ill.

Uncle Robert Knowles, Mrs. D. D. Overholt, and Mrs. A. D. Tice are reported on the sick list. Mrs. W. W. Attix, who has been very ill is reported convalescent.

Minor Rood has been so ill that he was obliged to send to your city for Dr. A. A. Just and is now said to be improving.

Ebbeezer Robinson who has been confined to his bed nearly two months is now able to be up and around the house.

Mentor lacks a good physician to attend to the physical ills of her people.

The wedding supper at Mr. Rieley's turned out somewhat boisterous we hear.

A petition for the retention of P. C. Moe as postmaster with 105 names of actual patrons of this office was sent to Washington Jan. 2nd and a number who came in to sign it came too late.

Rev. R. E. Hattey gave an excellent temperance lecture in the church on New Year's night.

An oyster supper was given at Mr. Yun Tuyl's in New Year's eve, which we did not attend but Mr. McLaughlin's, so you see we did not lack for the means of enjoyment and even those who desired could trip the light fantastic toe to their heart's content.

OLD SHINGLE.

An Imaginary Story.

The St. Paul Globe re-produces a story which is an amusing if not an edifying tale celebrated violinist. Ole Bull, is made to fool an innocent country man in great shape and at Crookston. The article says: "It was in the fall of 1857, Northern Minnesota, as yet but little influenced by the advance of civilization, was visited during the annual maturity by an annually benight dimeny of color. The hunting season was at its height and the small tavern at Crookston was taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate the sportsmen who crowed hither. It was evening when the mail coach drew up and a big Norwegian alighted. He will call him Laagdon because that was not his name. He was, however a great lover of music. He went laddie boy and asked the landlord for accomodations. The landlord said he was full that night but there was one room with a double bed and only a single occupant. If the stranger could arrange with him it would be all right. They went to the room and who should the occupant prove to be but the redoubtable Ole Bull himself who was so stuck on Langdon's shape that he consented at once to share his room with him. The next day they, Ole and Langdon went out for a hunt and about night they discovered that they were lost in the dense forest that surrounded Crookston. So they hunted up the cabin of a settler who was living all alone by himself and bored him for a night's lodging. After a supper the eagle eye of Ole discovered a fiddle hanging up on the wall and he asked the old man "what is that thing hanging up there." "That," said the old man "is a fiddle, a genuine Stradevirious, my only comfort in this desosfovest." "What do you do with it" innocently asked Ole. "Do with it" why I play music on it" replied the old man. Ole expressed a wish to hear some, so the old man took the machine down and after tuning a spell sawed off several chunes, after which Ole awkwardly picked up the fiddle exclaiming: "I shpy I could play this thing, is it hard to learn? The old man assured Ole that it was not very hard to learn, showed Ole how to handle the bow and then Ole turned loose such a lot of melody as the old man had not heard ever before in his life. I mean while Ole and Langdon winked slyly at each other at the great cow they were coming over the country man."

Taken as a whole it is a very pretty story about the early history of Crookston but unfortunately there is no foundation for it in existence in the year 1857, there was no dense forest around Crookston in those days and no hunters ever frequented the "tavern" in great numbers to hunt big game in the dense forests about Crookston, so we are afraid that the great Godey's magazine has got the wrong pig by the ear this time. Wonder if the story is as true to life as the location?

G. A. R. Installation.

Col. Cobham Post met at their pleasant hall last Friday evening and installed the following officers for the ensuing year, viz:

Commander—C. H. Mix.
Senior Vice-Commander—Nels Olson.
Junior Vice-Commander—H. E. Cooke.
Quartermaster—H. J. Zurracher.
Q. M. Sergeant—Will Carlton.
Adjutant—T. A. Havris.
Sergeant Major—L. Walker.

As the chaplain-elect, J. O. Sargeant, did not show up, having gone to California, that position was passed for the present.

The new commander appointed the following committees:

On finance—Comrades, Fontaine, Cooke and Jennings.

On decoration—Comrades, Olson, Harris and Kelly.

On entertainment—Comrades, Fontaine, Cooke and Harris.

A committee from the Ladies Relief Corps appeared and reported progress on the work of fixing up the Post room and a rising vote of thanks for their labors was given and a committee appointed to draft suitable resolutions. The ladies work in the post room is noticeable and the old vets hugely enjoy the new quarters which without the cheering hand of woman would be liable to be blank and desolate enough. The post meetings this winter are very interesting and all who do not attend are missing a rare treat.

The Counterfeit Case.

Attorney Steenerson left Monday for St. Paul, where he is interested in several cases before the United States district court, which convened there this week. One of these is known as the "counterfeit case," wherein the defendant is held by the United States for counterfeiting, because of obtaining money on a store order in this city lost summer. As the order was not an imitation of money in any respect it cannot be a counterfeit, and it looks as though the only charge that can be placed against the defendant is that of obtaining money under false pretenses.

"Jim Hill's House."

Every visitor to St. Paul who has seen the big red sandstone pile familiarly known throughout the American occident as "Jim Hill's house"—and statistics are not at hand to show the number of St. Paul's visitors who have not seen it—will be interested in the bit of domestic gossip that 20 servants and one housekeeper are needed to keep each floor of the enormous dwelling in order. There is a magnificent Minneapolis mansion that boasts, it is said, 17 servants and a housekeeper, but this retinue, St. Paul is proud to prove, is for the entire establishment, while Mr. Hill's 21 are the equipment for his every floor. Although of such gigantic proportions, the Hill house is most beautiful as well, and its situation upon that stateliest of sites, St. Anthony's hill, makes it one of the choicest as well as one of the costliest dwellings in this country.—New York Times.

Lord Exmouth's Pension.

Lord Exmouth has commuted his perpetual pension of £2,000 a year for the lump sum of £38,880, representing 20 years' purchase. MR. POWDERLY'S SUCCESSOR.

General Master Workman Sovereign's Career as Labor Advocate and Editor.

The new general master workman of the Knights of Labor, James R. Sovereign, is now serving his second term as labor commissioner of the state of Iowa and has long been well known in various political and labor movements in the Hawkeye State. He joined the Knights in 1881 and has been deeply interested in the order and prominent in its councils ever since, having held the position of state master workman for six years and been a delegate to the general assembly nine times. He was elected a delegate this year, but did not attend the convention until notified of his election as general master workman.

Mr. Sovereign was born in Cassville, Wis., May 30, 1854, and was reared by his grandfather at Elgin, Ills., until he was 16 years of age, when, on the death of his grandfather, he struck out for himself and went cowboying in Kansas and Texas for about a year. In 1872 he went to Cresco, where his father had a farm, and has been a resident of Iowa ever since. After attending the Cresco high school for a couple of years, working awhile on the farm, he learned the trade of marble cutting, at which he worked for about nine years.

Becoming interested in the Greenback party, Mr. Sovereign twice ran for congress on the Greenback ticket, once in 1882 and again in 1886, and also received the Greenback nomination for lieutenant governor. In 1883 he began the publication of the Cherokee Free Press, a weekly labor paper, and since then has published labor papers at Jefferson, Atlantic and Dahnque. During these years he has delivered many lectures on labor topics and has been active in politics. Governor Boies appointed him labor commissioner, and he assisted materially in the governor's election for a second term and was awarded with a reappointment.

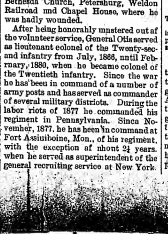
Mr. Sovereign isof medium height, has a sandy mustache and is affable and pleasant. He is a poor man and lives in Bonaparte, a suburbs of Des Moines, whither, it is said, he will try to have the general headquarters of the Knights of Labor removed from Philadelphia.

BEGAN AS A VOLUNTEER.

Military Record of the New Brigadier General, Elwell S. Otis.

Just before the close of his administration, President Harrison preemptorily retired Brigadier General Carr, who had refused to go voluntarily on the retired list of the army, and nominated Colonel Elwell S. Otis for the place thus made vacant. The senate failed to confirm the nomination, however, and when President Cleveland came in he appointed Colonel W. S. Carlin instead of Colonel Otis. The time for General Carlin's retirement for age came around very quickly, however, and Colonel Otis was again nominated for the vacancy, though he was outranked in point of seniority by Colonel Shafter.

General Otis was born in Maryland and was appointed to the army from New York. In the volunteer service during the late war he served as captain and lieutenant colonel of the One Hundred and Fortieth New York infantry and in March, 1865, was breveted colonel for gallant and meritorious services in the battle of Spottsylvania and brigadier general of volunteers on the same date for gallant and meritorious services in the battle of Chapel House, Virginia. During the war he participated in the battles of Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Rappahannock Station,



BRIGADIER GENERAL E. S. OTIS.

Bine Run, the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, North Anna, Totopotomoy, Bethesda Church, Petersburg, Weldon Railroad and Chapel House, where he was badly wounded.

After being honorably mustered out of the volunteer service, General Otis served as lieutenant colonel of the Twenty-second infantry from July, 1865, until February, 1880, when he became colonel of the Twentieth infantry. Since the war he has been in command of a number of army posts and has served as commander of several military districts. During the labor riots of 1877 he commanded his regiment in Pennsylvania. Since November, 1877, he has been in command at Fort Assiniboine, Mon., of his regiment, with the exception of about 21 years. when he served as superintendent of the general recruiting service at New York.

LABOR AND FREE TRADE.

A Vast Difference Between What Cleveland Says and Does.

Under our form of government the voice of labor as an element of national prosperity should be distinctly recognized, and the welfared the laboring man should be regarded as especially entitled to legislative care.

These are the words of Grover Cleveland, penned at the executive mansion April 22, 1888, in a message to the senate and house of representatives on the arbitration of labor disputes. He proposed a proper subject for the chief executive of the nation to deal with, and his sentiments, as expressed, were proper. But what was his meaning? Have his actions proved the honest intent of his words? Or were these words, like so many others that he has uttered, but mere catch pennies—mere bids for debunching the franchise "at the people's expense?" Let us see.

We now have before us the fear of free trade. The Democratic administration proposes to "reform" (save the mark!) the tariff that protects labor. "The welfare of the laboring man should be regarded," and Mr. Cleveland? All that he cares for and the free trade bosses care for is to get cheap foreign luxuries from Europe and wear foreign made clothes. They don't care for American goods or clothes made by American labor.

How will these changes in the tariff affect labor? If the Democratic administration adheres to its platform upon which it was elected to office, it will put a revenue tax upon coffee, tea and sugar. These are three articles of daily use in every household. It means an increase of nearly 10 cents per pound in the price of coffee, 15 cents more per pound to pay for tea and an increase of from 1 to 3 cents per pound in the price of sugar. Besides this the internal revenue tax on beer is to be doubled, so that the workingman will have to pay more money for his beer or else get less beer for his money. But what improved taxes are there to be on the house? Their champagne and other foreign wines will pay 25 per cent less duty than formerly, and their foreign clothes will cost them from 28 to 65 per cent less. The workingman will make this by pay ing more for his tea, sugar, coffee and beer.—American Economist.

Cheap Australian Wool.

During the three seasons ended June 30, 1892, the shipments of wool from Australia increased by no less than 266,000 bales, or 32 per cent of the total quantity. During the year ended June 30, 1893, there was an increase of 96,000 bales additional, making the total increase in the Australian wool clip nearly 500,000 bales within four years.

The consequence of this enormous growth in the Australian production has been a drop of 30 per cent in quality and protection alone has saved the American woolgrowers from being compelled to sell their wool for ruinous money. The Australian clip is liable to extraordinary and unprecedented growth in the future, because arteian wells have been sunk in New South Wales and Queensland, affording an abundant supply of pure water to irrigate the arid lands of the tropics, thus doubling the capacity of the soil.

The writer has lived and worked on a large Australian sheep ranch in the north of Queensland. There were 100,000 sheep running on 200,000 acres of land. One man, paid $5 per week and his rations of a little flour, tea, meat and sugar cared for every 10,000 sheep. He had a horse that fed itself as the sheep did. The sheep lands of Australia are valued at $5 per acre if they will not carry one sheep per acre, at $10 if carrying one sheep, at $15 if carrying one and one-half sheep, and at $20 per acre if the land carries two or more sheep.

There are over 6,000,000 acres of land in one colony of Australia alone, held by only 146 persons, or 30,300 acres to each person. The cheap value of the land has been shown. It is taxed at 1¼ per cent only after its value has reached $12,500, the amount below that not being taxed. Farmers in the United States cannot compete with these "rohher barons" of Australia unless they have protection.

MUST FACE DANGERS.

THUS OUR SOULS GROW AND OUR MISSIONS ARE FULFILLED.

Reflections on the Uselessness of Shallow Water Explorers—Where Should the Blame Rest For Many Disasters?—The Responsibility of Paternity.

What would be thought of a ship that was launched from its docks with flour, bulk of meat and flowing wine, built to sail the roughest and deepest sea, yet manned for an unending cruise along shore? Never leaving harbor for dread of storm. Never swinging out of the land girt bay because, over the bar, the waters were deep and rough. Can you would say of such a ship that its captain was a coward and the company that built it were fools.

And yet these souls of ours were fashioned for bottomless soundings. There is no created thing that draws as deep as the soul of man; our life lies straight across the ocean and not along shore, but we are afraid to venture; we hang upon the coast and explore shallow lagoons or swing at anchor in idle bays. Some of us strike the keel into riches and cruise about therein, like men-of-war in a nurse river. Some of us are contented all our days to ride at anchor in the becalmed waters of self-ish ease. There are grass at every port-hole of the ship we sail, but we use them for pegs to hang clothes upon or pigeonholes to stack full of idle hours. We shall never smell powder, although the magazine is stocked with holy wrath wherewith to fight the devil and his deeds. When I see a man strolling along at his ease, while under his very nose some brute is maltreating a horse, or some coward venting his ignobis wrath upon a creature more helpless than he, whether it be a child or a dog, I involuntarily think of a double decked whaler content to fish for minnows. Their uselessness in the world is more apparent than the uselessness of a Cunarder in a park pond.

What did God give you muscle and girth and brain for if not to launch you on the high seas? Up and away with you then into the deep soundings where you belong, O belittled soul! Find the work to do for which you were fitted and do it, or else run yourself on the first convenient snag and founder.

Some great writer has said that we ought to begin life as at the source of a river, growing deeper every league to the sea, whereas, in fact, thousands enter the river at the mouth and sail inland, finding less and less water every day, until in old age they lie aground and gasping upon dry ground.

But there are more who do not sail at all than there are of those who make the mistake of sailing up stream. There are the women who devote their lives to the petty business of pleasing worthless men. What progress do they make even inland? With nails set and brassy stanchions polished to the similitude of gold, they hover a lifetime chained to a dock and decay of their own useleseness at last, like keels that are sunk slugged. It is not the most profitable thing in the world to please. Suppose it shall please the inmates of a bedlam house to see you set fire to your clothing and burn to death, or break your bones one by one upon a rack, or otherwise destroy your bodily parts that the poor lunatics might be entertained. Would it pay to be pleasing to such an audience at such a sacrifice? We were put into this world with a clean way hill for another port than this. Across the ocean of life our way lies, straight to the harbor of the city of gold. We are freighted with a compassment from roomage hold to keep which is bound to be delivered over at last at the great Master's wharf. Let us be alert, then, to recognize the seriousness of our own destinies and content ourselves no longer with shallow soundings. Spread the sails, weigh the anchor and point the prow for the country that lies the other side of a deep and restless sea. Sooner or later the voyage must be made; let us make it then, while the timber is staunch and the rudder true.

When you look at a picture and find it good or bad, as the case may be, whom do you praise or blame, the owner of the picture or the artist who painted it? When you hear a strain of music and are either lifted to heaven or cast into the other place by its harmonies or its discord, whom do you thank or curse for the benefaction or the infliction, whichever it may have proved to be, the man who wrote the score or the music dealer who sold it? You go to a restaurant and order spring chicken which turns out to be the perennial fowl. Who is to blame, the waiter who serves it or the business men of the concern who does the marketing? And so when you encounter the bad boy, whom do you hold responsible for his badness, the boy himself or the mother who trained him? I declare, as I look about me from day to day and see the men and women who, play so poor a part in life, it is not the poverty of their performance that astonishes me so much as the fact that it is as good as it is.

With the parents that many boys and girls have and the training we give society I am perfectly amazed that they ever attain to even half way respectability. Did you ever stop to think, I wonder, what an awful responsibility is laid upon you with every child given to your honor? If you appreciate the case and take the responsibility I shouldn't think you would find much time for other callings. A man who is drawing up the plans for a new house attends to his business closely and doesn't go off on many picnics or sail over seas in pursuit of pleasure while his plans are pending. A man who has entered a young horse for the Derby spends most of his time training the colt. He doesn't loaf about town or read novels or lie abed late; he is alert and on hand if he expects to win the race. Carelessness and indifference never brought a winning horse under the wire yet.—Amber in Chicago Herald.

ARTISTS OF THE ROUNDUP.

Old Time Texas Cowboys Vastly Different From Those of the Present Day.

The old time cowboy is an extinct. He passed in his checks with the free grass and the big pasture and has introduced a new order of cowboy, who sleeps in a house and "obeys orders" or quits. The old cowboy was the companion of his hoss and shared his pleasures and his hardships.

No manager in this big headquarter rockhouse reminded him of his inferior rank in society, nor did any of the modern ranch accessories mar the common dangers, the pleasures and the freedom and equality of the whilom cowboy and cowman. But the ranch in the olden time was a cottonwood logbotse to cook in, and for roof and protection from the weather the slicker was used, and mother earth supplied their beds.

The big brand range and the overhanging sky answered for hoss and hoss. A roundup in 1867-68 was not bounded by wire fences, but the boys galloped out of camp after breakfast, made a wide sweep, and all then drove toward a common center, and lol directly at that point was gathered a herd of stock cattle of all brands, ready for the cut to begin.

The high toned man was unbooed. I remember such a man appeared at the ranch of J. T., in Shackleford county, in 1869. He was a city fellow, and would say "Thank you" and such like. His intense politeness and high toned nonsense aggravated the boys mightily.

Jim B. in particular—poor fellow—was especially fretted by his nonsense, as he called it, and tried to ridicule it out of him, but in vain. At last his resentment ripened into genuine hatred and it was hard to keep the peace between them, for the city fellow had grit too.

Well, one morning in 1869, at Mountain Peak, in Taylor county, long before any one lived in that section, Jim got awfully mad and gave the city fellow a cursing, whereupon a row resulted and bloodshed was barely prevented thers and then. We got the city fellow to ride off, and looked his pease had returned, but one hour later Jim B. and his amiable enemy met off at one side of the roundup. I happened to be near. In a flash the city chap ran before Jim, dismounted, leveled his gun on him and demanded an apology or death.

Jim jerked out two six shooters, but said nothing, and instantly the city fellow fired. Poor Jim rolled off his horse a dead man. I got to them just as Jim fell. He died instantly, shot through the heart. He never mounted his horse and "lit out." We buried him and went on with our herd, two men short, but with no discernible element among us.

Such was the old way. The boys were courteous and kind, they were generous and brave, industrious and honest, but they would not stand any high toned nonsense. A new era has set in. Which is the better we cannot say, but one thing, with all the virtues of Ararat and the neighboring mountains are buried in shadow, the white top of the Scriptural mountain gleams beautiful in the first beams of the sun.

The Armenian people tell this story about the inhabitants of Pharbee:

Once the devil and a Pharbee man laid a wager as to which should first see the sun. The one who saw it first was to hox the other's ears. "Very well," said the Armenian, and he lay down and slept sweetly, while the devil, itching to punish his enemy, stood looking eastward, and with eager eyes watched the white night for the sunrise. Early in the morning, the Pharbee man rose, and pointing to the top of Ararat, which was already shining in the sun, cried joyfully, "I see it!" The devil conveyed along the telegraph wire, "Here is a watching hyre of small. Ordinary shrubs will do." He received this fact; instead of treating the nerve centers for the cause of the disorder from the time they treat the part affected.

Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., the highly celebrated specialist and student of nervous diseases, and author of many noted treatises on the latter subject, has since realized the truth of this statement, and his Restorative Nervine is prepared on that principle. Its success in curing all diseases arising from derangement of the nervous system, such as Nervousness, Sleeplessness or unsolicited testimonials is positive proof of the efficacy of this method of treating the remedy annually.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a reliable remedy for all nervous diseases, such as headache, nervous debility, prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, hysteria, fits, epilepsy, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is sold by druggists on a positive guarantee, or address Dr. Miles' Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. Restorative Nervine positively contains no opiates or dangerous drugs.

HOW FLOUR IS MANUFACTURED.

The Various Processes Through Which Wheat Passes to the Mill.

The noises on the inside of the mill are deafening. One who has never been in a flouring mill of the largest size can not realize what a peculiar lot of noises are made by the machinery. As soon as the wheat enters the mill from the long spout which brings it down from the upper floor it falls between two rolls of iron—"chilled" iron they call it, and very hard iron it is too. One of these rollers revolves rapidly, the other more slowly, in order that the separation of the coat, or bran, from the kernel may be more easily accomplished. The wheat first passes between rollers separated just enough to allow the coat to be crushed. It is then carried away to the top of the mill again, to a room where the sun vainly tries to shine in through the flour coated windows far above the city's roofs. It next passes over a wire sieve which separates the bran from the kernel proper.

This bran, which contains much of the flour material, again passes down and is ground once more, this process being repeated four times, making five grindings, each one finer than the one preceding it. Each time the fibrous or bran portions are more completely separated, and at last the bran comes out a clean, brownish husk with every particle of flour removed.

The inside part of the kernel has meanwhile been going through an interesting process. After the first grinding or breaking it passes to a high speed revolving reel covered with a fine wire netting or sieve. Through this reel the finer portions of the kernels pass, coming out in what are called "middlings," a granulated mass which goes back to the rollers for another crushing. This process is repeated through five reels, all but the first being of silk. The last one has 120 threads to the lineal inch. The flour which comes out of the fifth reel, while white in hue, is yet not of this finest or "patent" grade, but is classed as "baker's" or second grade flour.

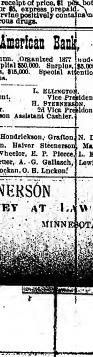
The middlings above referred to are purified by an interesting process. They are passed over a fine wire sieve, through the upper part of which a strong current of air is passed. This holds in suspense the tiny portions of fibrous matter which may have been in the flour, and at last, after this process of middlings purifying has been very carefully carried out, the flour appears a spotless snowy white—the "patent" flour, as it is called. In the process of grinding in this gradual and repeated way, the germ of the wheat, a tiny particle about the size of a mustard seed, is separated from the white flour. It is what one might call the life part of the wheat. If it were ground up, it would not leave the patent flour so white and powdery, so it is separated in one of the sievings and passes into the darker or lower grade flour. It contains, however, the best and most nutritious part of the wheat.

The last thing that happens to the pulverized kernel before it is ready for market is the filling of barrels or sacks. Down many stories through a smooth tube comes the white or "patent" flour. Under the tube is the barrel or the sack, as the case may be, and, as it begins to fill, a steel angur just the size of the tube revolves down into the flour, packing it carefully and solidly beneath the broad blades.—St. Nicholas.

SURROUNDED BY MYSTERY!

A Great Mistake.

A recent discovery is that headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion of the mind, etc., are due to derangement of the nerve centers which supply the brain and nerve force; that indigestion, dyspepsia, neuralgia, loss of stomach, etc., arise from the derangement of the nerve centers supplying these organs. Nine cases out of ten of nervousness arise from derangement of many diseases of the heart and lungs. The nerve system is like a telegraph system, as will be seen by the accompanying illustration. The little white lines represent the nerves which convey the nerve force from the brain to the organs. Disease is caused by the electric current is conveyed along the telegraph wire. If the wire is broken or severed, a message cannot be sent. Ordinary shrubs will do. To restore this fact; instead of treating the nerve centers for the cause of the disorder from the time they treat the part affected.



Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., the highly celebrated specialist and student of nervous diseases, and author of many noted treatises on the latter subject, has since realized the truth of this statement, and his Restorative Nervine is prepared on that principle. Its success in curing all diseases arising from derangement of the nervous system, such as Nervousness, Sleeplessness or unsolicited testimonials is positive proof of the efficacy of this method of treating the remedy annually.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is a reliable remedy for all nervous diseases, such as headache, nervous debility, prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, hysteria, fits, epilepsy, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is sold by druggists on a positive guarantee, or address Dr. Miles' Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. Restorative Nervine positively contains no opiates or dangerous drugs.

An Armenian Legend.

Ararat, one of the most majestic mountains in the world, rises 17,000 feet above the vast flat plain which bears its name and reigns over the surrounding mountains. Early in the morning, while all the valleys of Ararat and the neighboring mountains are buried in shadow, the white top of the Scriptural mountain gleams beautiful in the first beams of the sun.

The Armenian people tell this story about the inhabitants of Pharbee:

Once the devil and a Pharbee man laid a wager as to which should first see the sun. The one who saw it first was to hox the other's ears. "Very well," said the Armenian, and he lay down and slept sweetly, while the devil, itching to punish his enemy, stood looking eastward, and with eager eyes watched the white night for the sunrise. Early in the morning, the Pharbee man rose, and pointing to the top of Ararat, which was already shining in the sun, cried joyfully, "I see it!" The devil conveyed along the telegraph wire, "Here is a watching hyre of small. Ordinary shrubs will do." He received this fact; instead of treating the nerve centers for the cause of the disorder from the time they treat the part affected.

Congress Water.

How many people know that out by the Greenough statue of Washington, east of the capitol, is a vast and cavernous reservoir? Not one in a thousand, but there it is, down in the bowels of the earth, and covered deep beneath the smooth surface of asphaltum. Away back in the thirties congress purchased a spring over east of the present site of Howard university. It is now at the bottom of the unused distributing reservoir. From it pipes were laid to the capitol, and in a pond east of the building the water flowed and was held for the use of the early Solons of the land. In 1876 the reservoir was arched over and covered in, but there it is, and if congress has been neglectful of the people's interests as to a water supply, the reason is not hard to find. Congress has its own private tap. Pipes run into the capitol, furnishing the bathrooms, cellars and water for cleaning purposes. There is an overflow pipe that runs into the pretty little grotto below the marble wing at one side of the main sidewalk and tinkles over the mossy bank in a miniature cascade.—Washington Post.

Hose of Olden Time.

In the very long ago hose were not stockings as now worn, but made long, and were often drawn up even to the waist, and, oddly enough, had pockets in their sides. We read, moreover, that in the time of the Tudors and Stuarts they were of great variety, both of material and color, and for such as could command the luxury were richly trimmed and costly. They were often called "nether stocks."—Harper's Bazar.

IF THE democrats had been wise—if they had consulted the best interests of the country, they would have framed this tariff bill so as to make the change take place at some future date not earlier than '96. It is these sudden changes in the tariff—especially toward free trade that paralyzes the business interests of the country.

THE rumor that J. J. Hill had decided to cut down expenses by letting out some of his lawyers, Cy. Wellington, R. A. Whiteside and one or two others is emphatically denied by Mr. Hill, and the lawyers offered claim to have heard nothing about it. The rumor appeared in the Minneapolis Evening Journal.

THE Globe has opened the coming campaign with a fib (as usual) by stating that the Republican Central committee met to formulate a slate for the Republican State ticket. The Globe attempts to make big capital out of the plan and investigation business and prejudice voters against the Republican party. There's nothing like being on deck early.

IT was rumored that Scott, of the Chicago Herald had bought the St. Paul Globe which proves to be a false alarm as that gentleman denies the rumor emphatically. It is said that H. P. Hall wants to run the Globe and this would be more in accordance with the fitness of things for Hull has grown up with the Globe—made it all that it is, and deserves to own it—if he wants it.

THE selection of O. H. Myrum, of Ada as a member of the State Central committee was a wise one. Norman county was the only one in the new judicial district to give a republican majority for the head of the ticket last fall and thus receives proper recognition. The election of Henry Feig was also a good one. He has proved to be one of the most loyal workers in the party.

THE Republicans in congress will be wise if after they have recorded their votes against the Wilson tariff bill they decline to use obstructionary measures to delay the passage of the bill—which seems bound to pass anyhow sooner or later. If it is to pass at all the sooner it is done the better for the business interests of the country will it be to have this intolerable suspense ended.

THE leading articles in the North American Review for January are "Income Tax on Corporations," by Hon Wm. L. Wilson chairman of the Ways and Means committee; and "Tariff and Bashness," by Ex-speaker Reed. These two gentlemen present the tariff question from their different standpoints, and each makes out a strong case. Among the other contributions are "How to Prevent a Money Famine" by the comptroller of the currency, "The Hawaiian Question" by Frederic R. Coudert, "Are the Silver States Ruined?" by the governor of Colorado.

THE Republican State Central committee met at the Windsor in St. Paul last week to transact such business as might be brought before it. A. T. Koerner tendered his resignation for the reason that he did not think an active candidate for a place on the state ticket should be a member of the State central committee. The resignation was accepted and Henry Feig, of Atwater, was elected to fill the vacancy. The new judicial district consisting of Norman, Polk, Marshall and Kittson counties was recognized by the appointment of O. H. Myrum, of Ada as a member of the committee. It was decided to have a grand rally in Minneapolis or St. Paul sometime in February and to have Tom Reed or McKinley or some other big gun to speak. After some routine work the committee adjourned.

THE Tribune gave the county board a red-hot roasting because its bid was not accepted at about one-third less than the Times bid but did not mention the fact that the bid of the JOURNAL was one-third less than that even. Now we do not say that the county board is a corrupt mass of party hungry, but that the letting of the printing to the highest bidder was a rank, corrupt, political job or anything of that sort but, nevertheless, it is a cold, quiet, hard little fact that the JOURNAL'S bid was the lowest by at least $2,500 and nobody can controvert it—nor have they attempted. Perhaps there is nothing in the statutes to COMPEL the board to accept a bid that would save the taxpayers $2,500 of hard earned money, but n due regard to the interests of their constituents would seem to impel them to such a course. The average mind will still hold to the idea that the board should not recklessly expend the public money.

HOUSTON'S SANITY.

In the last issue of the Tribune appeared an article on "County Printing," in which the city of Crookston and her business men are disgracefully slandered—characterized as "thieves, robbers, gamblers," etc. Crookston is held up as about the worst place outside of Indies, and the farmers of the county are told that they should do all they can to disrupt the county and separate themselves from Crookston.

And all for what? Because Mr. Holston—the editor of the Tribune—was not awarded the county printing at the last meeting of the county board. Because three members of the board—Messrs. Kirsch, Rhinehart and Demers—voted the printing to McKenzie—and thus robbed the county of hundreds of dollars—Holston slanders the city of Crookston and vilifies her business men. The article in question is so ridiculous that no one who reads it and understands the circumstances but will admit that the mind of the writer must be deranged—if not permanently at least temporarily. Just look at the absurdity of the thing. Only one member of the board mentioned, Mr. Kirsch, is a citizen of Crookston —and we'll admit this is a sore enough affliction—the other two are farmers, one near East Grand Forks and the other in the town of Poplar River.

Editor Hoskins, of the Alliance Advocate, published at Heming, was adjudged insane and sent to the asylum at Fergus Falls because of certain libellous articles which he published, and on account of his "queer" conduct when in court. Mr. Hoskins never wrote such a crazy effusion as the tirade of the Tribune editor on "county printing."

MCKENZIE'S GRIEVANCE.

Crookston Times: The Steenerson case to compel the reduction of what rates which was to have come up on the 10th inst. has been postponed indefinitely. This is just what the Times predicted. Mr. Steenerson will keep the case dragging until after the next election. If he gets a nomination he will make a big show of prosecuting it during the campaign. If he gets left the case will be dropped. If the farmers want relief they must get it some other way than through the professional politicians.

The persistence with which McKenzie keeps pounding away at Mr. Steenerson would certainly brig success in any legitimate undertaking, but the animus of the former's actions is so well known that his little thrusts at Mr. Steenerson are only set as a boomerang on the thrower. It still further annoys the little man of the Times when he finds that after throwing slurs at Mr. Steenerson for several years, it has no more effect on that gentleman than the buzzing of a mosquito. McKenzie's grievance dates back to the time when Mr. Steenerson was alderman-at-large for the city of Crookston, and McKenzie wanted his co-operation to secure the city printing at a high figure. This Mr. Steenerson refused to do, and ever since McKenzie has been "getting even." He never loses an opportunity to belittle or besmirch his personal character or public record, hoping that Mr. Steenerson will finally become tired of this continual pounding and would contribute to the financial support of the Times in order to cease the annoyance. But the Times has for two years kept up the pounding—which might be called blackmailing—without the desired result. Unlike some prominent republicans, Mr. Steenerson has refused to contribute to the support of a democratic institution which never says a good word about a republican unless it is to the financial benefit of said institution to do so.

As to the postponement of the hearing in the freight rate case, it was at the request of Attorney Grover, of the Great Northern, who was attending court at Little Rock, Ark., who asked to have the hearing postponed until he returned. As far as Mr. Steenerson is concerned, he has submitted his side of the case, and has only waiting for the defendants to put in their answer. The case will be heard in the near future and whether they win or lose, the Steenerson brothers—Elias as complainant and Halvor as his attorney—will at least have exhausted the only possible means under our present laws, of getting a reduction in freight rates.

THEORY VS. PRACTICE.

The democrats will find before they get through with the making of a new tariff schedule that they have tackled a dreadful job. Protests against putting this or that article on the free list are pouring into Washington, and the democratic congressmen are hesitating between fealty to the democratic platform and loyalty to the best interests of their constituents. Take any one state, for instance. The people of the iron region do not want iron ore put on the free list as contemplated by the Wilson bill, and claim that such a result would be a heavy blow to the iron industry. The manufacturers of tow claim that a reduction of the tariff on tow would ruin the tow industry in the Northwest. Protests are also made against a reduction of the duty on barley, and the lumbermen don't want free lumber. Out in Montana, a loud and vigorous howl goes up from all parts of the state against putting wool on the free list. The Anaconda Standard, the leading democratic organ of that state, concludes an article on the prospect of free wool as follows: "The Wilson bill is hostile to the welfare of this state and in this declaration the Standard is sustained by the almost unanimous voice of Montana democracy." And so it goes all around; each state has some industry which it wants protected. Tariff reform is a campaign cry and tariff reform as an actual fact are two entirely different eventions, and the former is the only one which the democrats can work successfully.

THE attack of the Tribune upon the business interests of the city apon the business men—and the ladies —was one of the most ridiculous things we ever saw in print. That the editor was smarting under a well deserved rebuke by five citizens of Crookston, aided by a few who do not live in the city is no excuse for the dastardly attack upon the fair name of our city, and the writer should be compelled to prove his assertions or retract and make an humble apology. Especially do the members of Columbia Club owe it to society to see that the charge is duly refuted and the writer held to a strict accounting. Such articles as that, in the minds of right thinking people carry no weight but it is possible that, if allowed to stand unchallenged it might find weight in the minds of some to the injury of the fair fame of our city. No matter whether Mr. Holston is manically responsible or not the Columbia Club should not overlook so gross libel, but should promptly challenge him to prove his assertions or to make what reparation a retraction and apology will do.

At the alliance meeting in Minneapolis Donnelly and Doc Fish engaged in a wordy war (of several hours duration and Doc was emphatically turned down. The verdict was that the job too well put up for Doc to climb over and Doc ought to have known very well beforehand that he would and kept out of it. Donnelly was re-elected (of course) by acclamation.

The East Grand Forks Courier congratulates the people of Polk county upon having a board of county commissioners that will consent to award the county printing to the highest bidder. In the case referred to it will make at least $2000 difference in the amount, and this is the third time the same "economical" deal has been worked. It strikes us as a queer subject of congratulation to the taxpayers.

Congressman Fletcher favors the nomination of Robert Lincoln for president. Mr. Fletcher says of him: "He is the man that the Republican party can elect, and that is the one thing to consider. I have nothing to say against McKinley, but Lincoln is the man for me. Lincoln would make a good, safe president. He is a cool, level headed man, with no weak spots in his record. Every old soldier would vote for him, not only because he is the son of Abraham Lincoln, but for his own sake. Robert Lincoln has never attempted to make any capital out of his father's name."

Commenting upon the action of the Republican State Central committee upon the newspaper question the Duluth News Tribune says: The first thing to be done is to revise local papers. Local committeemen, local Republicans who wish to see their party's policies prevail, local officers belonging to the party, should give their first allegience to the local papers of their party. When public printing is to be awarded the party paper should be favored when election time comes or appointments are to be made. If Republicans habitually forget that their first support is to be given to papers of their own political faith, they must not be surprised if their party grows weak and divided and the enemy waxes strong in their city or county.

THE Moorhead daily News of the 6th inst. issued a double number full of statistics of the improvements in the city during the year of 1893. The total amount foots up the handsome of $161,635 which is indeed a good showing for such a year as the state has been. The News has all the time kept ahead of the procession, is a rattling good paper and deserves a hearty support.

THE JOURNAL is in receipt of Vol. I, No. 1 of the American Citizen, which seems to have sprung into existence on the question as to whether or no Mrs. F. B. Clark, a prominent society lady of St. Paul, has gone to Rome to join the Catholic persuasion.

THE decision of the Supreme court, confirming out the state warrants, will receive due attention from the State Alliance now in session in Minneapolis.

NEWSLETS

Samuel L. Copeland, charged with robbing the Moorhead National bank last summer, has pleaded guilty.

J. J. Rhodes, of Minneapolis, the secretary of the alleged coal combine sued the legislative investigating committee for damages for forcibly seizing and taking away his books. The members of the committee refused to answer the summons, and the district court sustained them; but the supreme court has decided against them and Mr. Rhodes has secured a judgment for $3,500 against the committee, which will have to be paid by the state. The legislature appropriated $10,000 for that investigation, and nothing has been accomplished except a little advertising for the only Ignatius, who was the head of the committee.

Fashion Notes for Holiday Toilettes.

Elegant tailor made garments or those for the promenade are of plain cloth. They are often beautifully braided or trimmed with a contrasting of another shade. A novel way of using fur is in perpendicular bands on the seams, starting from a fur head at center of the height of the knee. Odd combinations are encouraged, and black and white, though not new, still continue in high favor. The mingling of lace, embroidery and fur form the rich fashions of the present. These items of interest are only a faint idea of the many instructive points contained in the McDowell illustrated magazine from which they have been selected. If you are unable to procure any of these magazines at your newsdealer, do not accept any substitute from him, but apply by mail to Messrs A. McDowell & Co., 4 west 14th Street, New York.

The second edition of the December World's Fair Cosmopolitan brings the total up to the extraordinary figures of 800,000 copies, an unprecedented result in the history of magazines. Four hundred thousand copies—200 tons—ninety-four million pages—enough to fill 200 wagons with 2000 pounds each—in a single line, is close order. this would be a file of wagons more than a mile and a half long. This means not less than 2,000,000 readers, scattered throughout every town and village in the United States.

The Review of Reviews for January is particularly strong in its editorial review of the closing events of the stirring and turbulent year 1893. Dr. Albert Shaw, the editor, discusses tariff revision, the relief of the unemployed, recent strikes and labor questions, the Hawaiian question and the Administration's policy with regard to that subject, civil service reform as applied to our diplomatic and consular as well as other branches of the public service, and a great variety of other topics of the day. Portraits and dates are briefly but clearly presented, and this department, entitled "The Progress of the World," presents in some twenty pages a broad and yet frank treatment of affairs political and social from Canada to Cape town.

A Race of Giant Cannibals.

Unlikely as it may seem to some who read these lines, it is a fact nevertheless that there is an island in the gulf of California, not more than 60 miles from the Mexican mainland, which is inhabited by the remnants of a race of giant cannibals. This startling discovery was made by a west coast naturalist early in 1891 and has since been confirmed by both United States and Mexican explorers. Mr. McNamara, the scientist referred to, has a photograph of one of the skulls found by him on the island, that individual, although not one of the largest, being over 7 feet in height. The island upon which they were found is known as the island or isle of Lori, and the original discoverer says that there is every evidence of cannibalism among them.—St. Louis Republic.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Wednesday, Jan. 3.

Both houses of congress convened at noon.

The Democrats of the house tried hard to bring up the tariff bill for debate, but the Republicans broke a quorum by refusing to vote.

Friday and Saturday were set apart for consideration of the Hawaiian resolutions.

All leaves of absence in the house have been revoked.

In the senate Mr. Frye introduced a resolution declaring it to be the sense of the senate that the administration should commence at once and set of interference in Hawaii, pending the investigation of the minister by the senate committee on foreign affairs.

Thursday, Jan. 4.

The senate adjourned over till Monday.

Senator Gray gave notice that he would insist on taking up the federal elections bill Tuesday.

Democrats were again unable to get a quorum of their own in the house and after a short session adjourned.

Senator Hoar of the Republican side introduced a resolution calling on the secretary of the treasury for his authority for the payment of Special Commissioner Blount for his Hawaiian services.

Friday, Jan. 5.

A bill to bring express companies under the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission has been introduced.

United party action in favor of the consideration of the tariff bill was resolved upon at a caucus of Democratic members of the house.

Aided by a few Democrats, the Republicans of the house spent another day filibustering and blocking the wheels of the Wilson tariff bill again.

According to a rule submitted by the house committee the Wilson bill will be voted on Jan. 28.

Saturday Jan. 6.

The senate was not in session.

Republicans and a few Democrats filibustered in the house and successfully prevented consideration of the Wilson bill.

Monday, Jan. 8.

Senator Davis will make a speech on the Hawaiian question.

A quorum was finally secured by the Democrats in the house, and the tariff debate opened by Chairman Wilson of the ways and means committee. The final vote on the bill will be taken Jan. 27.

The senate consumed most of the day debating various Hawaiian resolutions.

The senate judiciary committee has reported unfavorably on the nomination of Hornblower as justice of the supreme court.

The senate passed the house bill for the relief of purchasers of timber and stone lands under the act of June 3, 1878, and subsequent legislatory acts.

THE SUPREME COURT.

Decision in an Important Northwestern Case Handed Down.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The United States supreme court yesterday rendered during the day for the first time after the holiday recess and handed down a number of short decisions. One of these was the action of Horatio G. Agle against the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha railway. Agle had a contract to build a section of railroad for the Portage railroad, but was banished from doing the work by the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha railway. Agle finally sued the Portage road, which was desirous of constructing the Portage road. Agle finally abandoned the contract and sued the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha for $200,000 damages for non-performance with his work. The lower court failed to sustain his claim, but the supreme court reversed the decision, holding that the road had so harrassed Agle that he was entitled to damages.

A Racking Cough

Cured by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Mrs. F. D. HALL, 317 Genesee St., Lockport, N. Y., says:

"Over thirty years ago, I remember hearing my father describe the wonderful curative effects of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. During a recent attack of La Grippe, which assumed the form of a catarrh, soreness of the lungs, accompanied by an aggravating cough, I used various remedies and prescriptions. While some of these medicines partially alleviated the coughing during the day, none of them affected me any relief from that spasmodic action of the lungs which would seize me the moment I attempted to lie down at night. After ten or twelve such nights, I was and had about decided to sit up all night in my easy chair, and procure what sleep I could in that way. It then occurred to me that I had a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took a spoonful of this preparation in a little water, and was able to lie down without coughing. In a few moments I fell asleep, and awoke in the morning greatly refreshed and feeling much better. I took a teaspoonful of the Pectoral every night for a week, then gradually decreased the dose, and in two weeks my cough was cured."

Royal Baking Powder Has all the Honors in Strength—over 12 per Cent Above its Nearest Competitor.

The Royal Baking Powder has the enviable record of having received the highest award for purities of its class—greatest strength, purest ingredients, most perfectly combined—wherever exhibited in competition with others. In the exhibitions of former years, at the Centennial, at Paris, Vienna and at the various State and Industrial Fairs, where it has been exhibited, judges have invariably awarded the Royal Baking Powder the highest honors.

At the recent World's Fair the examinations for the baking powder awards were made by the experts of the chemical division of the Agricultural Department at Washington. The official report of the tests of the baking powders which were made by this department for the specific purpose of ascertaining the exact strength and purity of each, and which has been made public, shows the leavening strength of the Royal to be 160 cubic inches of carbonic gas per ounce of powder. Of the creams of tartar baking powders exhibited, the next highest in strength that tested contained but 133 cable inches of leavening gas. The other powders gave an average of 111. The Royal, therefore, was found of 20 per cent greater leavening strength than its nearest competitor, and 44 per cent above the average of all other tests. Its superiority in other respects, however, in the quality of the food it makes as to fineness, delicacy and wholesomeness, could not be measured by figures.

It is these high qualities, known and appreciated by the women of the country for so many years, that have caused the sales of the Royal Baking powder, as shown by statistics, to exceed the sale of all other baking powders combined.

During the last half-century—since the discovery of Ayer's Sarsaparilla—the average limit of human life in civilized countries, has been considerably lengthened. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is every where considered the standard blood-purifier, the superior medicine.

The promptness with which Ayer's Cherry Pectoral stops hacking cough and relieves refreshing sleep is something marvelous. It never fails to give instant relief, even in the worst cases of throat and lung trouble, and is the best remedy for whooping cough.

DOLE DIDN'T OBEY.

PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT MAKES ANSWER TO WILLIS.

He Flatly Refuses to Allow the Restoration of the Queen, Although the Demand Was Made in the Name of the President — No Further Attempt to Change the Situation Likely to Be Made.

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 9.—The Canadian Pacific steamer Warrimoo has arrived here, bringing Honolulu advices to Jan. 1. Most intense excitement prevailed throughout Honolulu until the arrival of the revenue cutter Corwin. After that Minister Willis made his demand upon President Dole to surrender the government to the queen. The provisional government promptly refused and Minister Willis took no further step to force compliance with his order. The excitement then rapidly subsided and for a week before the sailing of the Warrimoo there was perfect tranquility. It is now thought the crisis has passed.

The Corwin Has Free Dispatches.

Since the sailing of the United States revenue cutter Corwin, at 8 o. m. on the morning of Dec. 24, no advices have left here for the coast. That vessel took press dispatches against the orders of the United States legation, but it is doubtful if any of them are landed, as a strict watch will be placed on the vessel as soon as she arrives near the harbor and that she will likely be ordered at once on a cruise.

Application was made by the Associated Press and the special correspondent of the New York World for permission to forward dispatches by the Corwin. This was in each case refused, and dispatches were posted about afterwards through the courtesy of those who shall forever be nameless, even though the United States should endeavor to investigate the matter. The Corwin took the demand of the provisional government to step down and out, but the reply of President Dole had not been made when the Corwin sailed.

Willis' Demand.

The demand of Minister Willis asking the Dole administration to give up the reins of government was made on Dec. 19. The demand is made in the name of the president of the United States and gives as the basis for such action the fact that the queen surrendered her power only through fear of the armed forces of the United States then quartered at Honolulu. Mr. Willis further stated that the provisional government was not established by the Hawaiian people, nor with their consent or acquiescence, nor has it since existed with their consent. A written document agreeing to President Cleveland's method of restoration and signed by Queen Liliuokalani was also included in the demand.

Dole's Reply En Route.

The reply of the provisional government was drafted by President Dole and contains between 500 and 600 words. It is an able document and states the case of Hawaii in no pleasing terms. It says the strong points of the reply is that the ex-queen's point of amnesty is not touched. The provisional government, being prepared for resistance, are of the opinion that side issues cannot be justly raised by either Mr. Cleveland or the monarchy.

Mr. L. A. Thurston, Hawaiian minister, leaves Honolulu on the steamer Pekin for Washington. He will take with him a copy of the governments reply to Mr. Willis, which, up to the present hour, has been Refused to the Press.

In conversation with President Dole it is learned that this refusal has been a diplomatic point not to publish the answer before it has been delivered in the hands of President Cleveland. They have been assured, however, that should the president of the United States delay the delivery of this document, it will at once be made public by Minister Thurston.

The news received here to date has received various comment. Royalists still assert that they believe the restoration will be accomplished by Cleveland and annexationists are confidently declaring no restoration shall take place. The situation has, in fact, settled into one of glaring defiance, in which the royalists themselves admit they would have to show unless aided by the forces of the United States.

GRESHAM TALKS.

No Dispatches Received at the State Department From the Corwin.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—For the first time since the arrival of the Corwin at San Francisco, and the recent alarming reports from Honolulu, Secretary of State Gresham submitted to an interview during the evening on the Hawaiian situation. He talked with great earnestness and his replies to the various questions addressed to him consisted almost wholly of denials.

He said if there was any trouble at Honolulu neither the president nor the state department knew anything about it. He declared the department had received any dispatches from the Corwin, but stated that dispatches by the regular course of the mails were expected from Minister Willis on Wednesday of this week. "And whatever dispatches are received at that time," said he, "will be sent to congress at once."

Secretary Gresham stated that neither the president nor the state department knew anything about the Corwin being anchored off San Francisco and if it was there it was not by any order of the executive or the department of state.

Regarding the reports that Minister Willis or the queen were on board the Corwin, he pronounced them fabrications.

THE MOHICAN GETS ORDERS.

Commander Clark Instructed to Prepare for Sea.

VALLEJO, Cal., Jan. 9.—Orders have been given to Commander Clark of the United States ship Mohican to make all needed preparations on board his ship for sea. Shortly afterwards the Mohican was ready and the navy yard tug steamed alongside, taking the Mohican in tow, towing her out in midstream, where she was moored to one of the buoys. Fires are hunked, and the steam kept up ready to sail in a moment's notice. Considerable anxiety continues to manifest itself among navy officers regarding the Hawaiian situation and fears are expressed that trouble has occurred. This opinion has gained credence from the reticence on the part of the Washington officials. Captain H. C. Cochrane, recently detached from the marine barracks, Mare Island, will leave on the next steamer touching Honolulu to take command of the marine guards on board the flagship Philadelphia now at Honolulu.

Bloody Summoned.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 8.—Hon. James T. Bloody has received a telegram from Washington calling him before the Hawaiian committee. He left for the capital during the afternoon.

THE IOWA CONTEST.

Senatorial Candidates Agree on a Caucus Date.

DES MOINES, Jan. 9.—The candidates for United States senator held a conference during the day to decide on a date for the nominating caucus. It was agreed to suggest Friday night of this week. Gear was ready for Wednesday night. Hepburn, Stone and Lacey wanted Friday, and Cummins wanted next week. The result was a compromise date. Perkins, Gear, Lacey and Hepburn want to get back to Washington, so they wish the matter settled as soon as possible. At every headquarters it was a busy scene. Lacey has a host of workers here from his district, and a large number of Des Moines people are on hand to help Cummins. Gear has, besides a lot of Burlington people, the members of the legislature from his district also members from the Third and Fourth districts.

The Legislature Convenes.

The legislative session opened during the day, but the proceedings in both houses were confined to effecting a temporary organization. Canvass to select permanent officers were held immediately after adjournment. At the senate caucus Mr. Conway was made Chairman. The following nominations were made for permanent officers: Secretary, E. R. Hutchins, The Meduse; enrolling clerk, Miss Capitola Marsh; engrossing clerk, Miss Olive Conger; doorkeeper, G. W. Hicks; sergeant-at-arms, S. W. Smith; bill clerk, Mrs. Evo Livingston. In the house caucus the nominations were as follows: Speaker, H. Stone, Marshall county; chief clerk, J. C. Wilcox; engrossing clerk, Miss Mollie Heist; enrolling clerk, Miss Pauline Metzler; bill clerk, Miss Belle Baker; sergeant-at-arms, S. F. Miles.

ALGER FOR SENATOR.

The Detroit Tribune Advocates His Selection.

DETROIT, Jan. 8.—The Detroit Tribune, the leading Republican newspaper of Michigan, publishes a column double leaded editorial advocating the election of the legislature that will be favorable to the choice of General Russell A. Alger for United States senator to succeed Senator Stockbridge. It says him "chiefly and particularly because the united action of Michigan Republicans on two great occasions in the history of the national Republican party has made him the logical nominee of the Republican majority."

PAWNSHOP ROBBED.

Three Men Secure Much Plunder in a Chicago Loan Office.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Three desperadoes captured between $5,000 and $10,000 worth of plunder in the Star loan office, 85 Randolph street, during business hours. The men escaped, though police officers quickly began scouring the city for the robbers.

Samuel Green owns the pawnshop. It was in charge of Lionel Greenburg, a cousin. He was bound and gagged before the men began operations on the stock. They were interrupted as they were about entering the plunder by 10-year-old Mary Clements, a neighbor's child. The robbers secured the girl and bound and gagged her. Her absence led to the discovery of the robbery. She and young Greenburg were found helpless in the rear of the building.

Forged Instruments.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The forgery of letters in cases of postmasters for appointment by the president is said at the department to be common. The postmaster general has received complaint and the forgery of a letter relating to an appointment in a Missouri postoffice, the name of which is not divulged.

To Create a Lieutenant General.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Senator Davis has introduced a bill providing that the senior major general of the army may have the rank of lieutenant general and receive the same pay and be entitled to the emoluments. The bill really revives the grade of lieutenant general. General Schofield will be the beneficiary.

Reinstated Judge Long.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The pension office has decided that in view of the act of Congress of [illegible] 21, 1892, it no longer has a right to withhold the pension of Judge Long of Michigan, and has directed that he be again placed on the pension rolls.

WORLD'S FAIR FIRE.

THE WHITE CITY THE SCENE OF A DESTRUCTIVE BLAZE.

The Fire Started in the Casino, Just East of the Agricultural Building — Music Hall Destroyed and the Big Manufactures Building Badly Damaged—Loss to Exhibitors $10,000,000—One Life Lost.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Fire started in the Casino of the world's fair grounds about 7 p. m., and before being brought under control destroyed the Casino, Peristyle, Music Hall and a portion of the Liberal Arts building. The letter contained exhibits valued at $1,000,000, the most of which were destroyed or practically ruined by the floods of water poured on the burning structures. A strong wind was blowing during the evening, and at one time the entire White City was threatened with destruction. A sad phase of the big fire was the killing of one fireman and the probable fatal injury of three others.

Started in the Casino.

The fire started in the Casino just east of the Agricultural building and south of the peristyle. The Casino was quickly devoured and the flames surged north on the top of the Peristyle, and, dropping, made a second line of fire along the base of the colonnus. The flames then sprang through Music Hall, which corresponds at the north end of the Peristyle to the Casino at the south. While the fire was burning there occurred one of the most singular and fascinating sights of the night. Along the top of the Peristyle were scores of statues. The spectacle for those people fortunate enough to be on the sidewalk just east of the Peristyle was that of a succession of gigantic human beings plunging one after another headlong into

The Waters of the Lake Below.

The origin of the fire is said to be revenge on the part of a couple of tramps. The solitary guard in the Music Hall says that just before the flames broke out he kicked two vagabonds out of the Music Hall and told them to find quarters elsewhere. They left in the direction of the Casino and soon, after the fire broke out and everything on the grounds was terror and confusion.

Fears of looting added to the horror of the scene. At about 10 o'clock with a possible loss of $10,000,000 by fire in the manufacturers' building alone, the authorities began to realize that a large element in the crowd was composed of idlers who, once started in lawlessness,

It Would Be Hard to Control.

Such proportions as could be hurriedly made were set in motion to remove goods and guard other buildings, but all such efforts were the merest child's play. The utter hopelessness of such attempts on such short notice were made apparent at once. The few officers on guard could hardly do more than stand with eyes and grit their teeth, hoping against hope that the flames would speedily be stayed.

The firebeats and engines on the lakeside had by this time subdued the flames in the aisles of the Peristyle, but in the lower colonnade of the southeast side of the Liberal Arts building, and the hopes were raised that the fire had been confined. But shortly after 11 p. m. the flames got beyond control owing up on the top promenade of the Liberal Arts building and the main aisle of the building was a mass of flames, arising from the blazing brands which came from above.

Saving Exhibits.

Remorselessly the fire was hurling itself through the interstices of the big iron arches at the dizzy height above. The flames would twine boa constrictor fashion in and around the mammoth electric light ornamentations which roll the roof. Below these fearful circles of iron, likely to drop at any moment, no man dared to go, even the firemen were venturing within 100 feet. Frantic horses, with heavily loaded trucks, were plunging through the aisles and becoming bored with wreckage or drenched with the falling cataracts of water, most of which fell far short of the topmost flames.

About 10:45 a great iron arch gave way directly above the French wares, and, falling heavily, buried them beneath the burning pile, and they were abandoned. Back of the French wares was the Japanese exhibit, and about it clustered a crowd of scared and frantic Japanese. This, like many exhibits, has not been released from bond and the goods could not be taken from the building.

Firemen Killed and Injured.

The great fire was not without its work of death and injury. For the second time within the history of the exposition the firemen risked life and limb to save the property of others and saddened home as the result. Two firemen, William Mackey and Frederick Ross, fell from the roof of the Manufactures building and Mackey was killed and Getzsecrionsly injured. Four other firemen were caught [illegible] a mass of falling timbers and three are said to be fatally injured. Chief Swenie, who is himself suffering from injuries received at a recent fire, came down about midnight, but Assistant Chief Musham, who had handled the fire from the start, had done it so well that the chief saw no need for changes in the arrangements.

President Higinbotham says: "The loss by water is much greater than by fire. The total loss to exhibitors will not exceed $100,000. All told, the contents of the Liberal Arts building are not exceed $1,000,000 in value. As to the Casino, Peristyle and Music Hall, there is no loss. We are not worried by their burning, as it is the cheapest way to remove them."

The fire was under control at 2:15 a. m.

SIX WEEKS' SKATING.

"THE HOOKS"; UNPARALLELED LONG COLD SNAP WITHOUT SNOW.

In Those Days the Crease Skate With Straps and Heel Cutlis Was Monarch of the Ice. Broiled Fish, Roasted Potatoes and Coffee Served Al Fresco.

The boys who lived in the village called by its inhabitants The Hook considered themselves especially favored in the matter of weather during the early part of the winter of 1836-7. Three or four days before Thanksgiving Jack Frost swooped down from the north by night and locked the smaller streams and spread over the big millpond around which the village was built a film of thick black ice, which for perfect smoothness far surpassed anything that had ever been seen there before. And as the old heads of the village prophesied that the cold snap was likely to be a long one, there was a general sharpening up of skates forthwith!

The skates of today would be vastly amused by the queer skates that were in the possession of the boys of The Hook 37 years ago. There was no club skate there. Most of the boys had crease bottoms with heel calks—"corks," they called them—and every one fastened his skates on with straps. There were a few flat bottomed skates, and most of them were fitted with screws in the heels. These were considered by their owners to be far superior to those of older style, especially as the screw in the heel rendered toe straps unnecessary, but in this opinion the owners of the creasers did not coincide. They held that the crease was a great aid to rapid skating, that it prevented "slewing around," and that those who had the flat skates were offensively devoted to new fangled notions.

When after repeated tests by the eager boys and some of the younger fathers it was found that a uniform thickness of two or three inches had formed, and the 50 or 60 boys of the village and neighborhood were let loose to enjoy the glorious delights of the ice, the contention waned, for it was soon discovered that the superiority rested in the skater and not in the skates. Besides every one was too busy skating to quarrel.

There is no doubt that the weeks between Thanksgiving and Christmas were among the most enjoyable ever vouchsafed to the youngsters of The Hook. Nor were the boys and young men the only ones who partook of the frigid pleasure of the time. As the days passed and the temperature remained steadily below the freezing point, almost without wind and with no fall of snow, and the ice got thicker and solider the middle aged men got out their skates or took them away from their sons and exploited themselves on the ice. By the time a fortnight had rolled around the old men took a hand, or rather a foot, in the sport, and there were as many graybeards as rosy cheeked boys daily skimming over the pond's frozen surface.

Great fires were built along the edge of the pond, where the skaters warmed themselves and from which they got light to enable them to skate by night, and finally the women and girls turned out every afternoon to view the fun vicariously and sometimes actually—that is, they "sled" and were pulled on sleds by the men and boys and stood about the fires and watched their sliding brothers and sons and sweethearts and fathers and husbands and grandfathers, and wished that women, too, might skate.

For, singularly enough, the girls and women did not skate. Such a thing was unheard of at The Hook. It was understood by some or the inhabitants of the village that in some places women did skate. Miss Luella Morse, the school mistress, said that in Holland women were quite as expert in their use of the gleaming steel as the men, and for her part she couldn't see why they shouldn't be. This was a very bold idea for any female of The Hook to propound, and the indign who heard Miss Luella declare her belief in the skating rights and abilities of herself and her sisters held up their hands in holy horror.

Miss Luella paled when she saw how her speech affected her hearers, for she had intended to try to learn to skate herself before the glorious opportunity should pass away. If she hadn't been a school mistress whose income was dependent on the pleasure of the villagers, there is no doubt she would have braved public opinion, no matter how strong, but as it was she didn't, to her lifelong regret, and the good people of The Hook saw no "lady skaters" that winter.

As time passed and the ice retained its strength and gloss the skill of the skaters increased, and feats therefore unattempted became common. The playing of "shinney" and "fox and geese" came to be regarded as celling into play no special ability, and the skater who could do nothing more difficult than the "Dutch roll" and skating backward was but an ordinary performer. The stars of the pond learned to write their names on the ice, to skate a long way on one foot and to perform what would now be called the "outside edge," besides divers other seeming impossibilities before not even heard of.

A few days before Christmas it was proposed to have some fishing through the ice, and all hands joined in the sport, and all said that it was strange no one had thought of it before. The result was gratifying. The pond was full of pickerel, and they bit greedily. So abundant was the take that when some one proposed that some of the fish be broiled et the log fires by the side of the pond and eaten by the skaters it was agreed to. The feminine contingent hailed this proposition with joy, for it gave them something to do. The second day of the fish broilings one of the women suggested that it would be a good idea to add coffee to the fish, and then some one proposed to bake potatoes in the ashes, and little by little the meals upon the ice grew in variety until quite a menu was served every day.

This plan was not altogether liked by the mothers of boys, who until then had been certain of seeing their sons at least twice a day when the youngsters got hungry, but it was found to be impossible to break up the practice, and finally everybody joined in the general mania excepting a few who couldn't find it in their hearts to indorse so long a period of devotion to pure pleasure. These persons said that the craze for the skating pond was ruining the winter term of school. The boys and even some of the girls, they pointed out, were prone to "play hookey" and make for the pond upon the slightest opportunity, and, they continued, Principal Jones and his assistant, Miss Luella, were greatly to blame that they did not find means to compel their pupils to stick closer to their books.

The wiseacres predicted that more than one evil would result from the prevalent craze. The joints would be strained unduly, they said, especially the knee joints, and the result would be case after case of "water on the knee," and they painted harrowing word pictures of how some of the most active skaters of the village would have to go through the rest of their lives crippled and dependent on crutches. There was also the danger that the ice would break. It was indeed thick, but the great weight it was daily called upon to bear in the shape of a hundred skaters might at any time prove too much for it, "and," said retired Sailor Tom Davies, "then there'll be sich a cotyclism as you won't never fergit—I say you won't never fergit." Just what he meant by "catyclism" no one knows.

Fortunately no one was drowned, though two boys did come near to it by skating into a square of water whence the tavern keeper had removed the ice for his icehouse. These youngsters went "plumb to the bottom to oucst," they said, and proved it, too, by the blue clay they brought up on their skate irons. They were rescued without much difficulty and hustled away to a big fire at the head of the pond, and their clothes dried on their bodies instead of being sent home to worry their mothers, who chanced to be among those most opposed to the sport. The prediction as to strains and bruises came nearer verification, but it ough the doctor did have a pretty good run of "millpond practice," as he phrased it, that winter no one suffered lasting injury.

Two days before Christmas a heavy snowstorm began and lasted for 24 hours, and there was no skating after that until paths up and down the ice had been shoveled clear. That was accomplished by noon of Christmas, however, and the holidays were enjoyed on the ice by all who could turn out. There was no more snow for a fortnight longer, and every day paths were extended a little further, till there was, after all, several miles of them.

On the 19th of the month, however, a storm began that lasted almost a week, and when the clouds cleared away there was quite four feet of snow on the level, and the weight that rested on the ice caused it to stink, become flooded and spoiled. A certain old diary filled with crabbed, boyish handwriting contains this entry for Jan. 21, 1807:

"No more skatting this winter. Think shall now studdy some nites and catch up with my clas."

Traditions of the skating season of 1806-7 are still current at The Hook and its vicinity.

AMERICAN DOMESTIC LIFE.

One Woman Work Too Hard to Suit Countess Salazar—Ideal.

According to Dudley Trollope and other eminent critics of the American character, we of this favored country have an insatiable curiosity concerning the opinions of ourselves and our institutions entertained by distinguished visitors from abroad and are pleased to hear those opinions, providing they are complimentary. It is probable that we have advanced somewhat since the days of the supposititious Mr. Jefferson Brick, for we are now able to listen to mild criticisms of our manners and customs without resentment and to profit by them if they be fair.

At any rate such criticisms are interesting, especially so when emanating from so accomplished a visitor as Countess Salazar of Naples, who represented Italy at the woman's congress in Chicago. She came here for the express purpose of studying the status of the American woman and intended to stay all winter, but could not stand the rigor of our climate and sailed for home a week or so ago. She says she found the domestic life of American women rather disappointing.

"I think I have gone backward rather than forward in some ways since I came," she told a reporter, "and when I go home I think I will write a very original book upon the subject. Your women impress me as being overworked. They have no time for living. They are constantly going from one lecture or reception to another. I met a woman in Chicago who had a charming family and culture and money, but nothing, afternoon and evening she was working and never able to enjoy them.

"The ideal life of women is to live for their families. I would like culture for them the same as for men, and I would like them to write and do decorative work, but all at home. It is sad to see women work. This rushing through life alone is very hard.

"I have seen so many women for whom I would like to find husbands. I have found the upper classes almost always extinct," she said, "idle, selfish and only thinking of spending money and of their own pleasure. They have no refinement of manner without refinement of soul. The working classes are intellectually superior in America."

Countess Salazar is well known in Europe as a lecturer and writer. She speaks English fluently, being the daughter of an English woman and an eminent Italian archeologist.

HE WEARS WHISKERS.

The Unique Distinction of Bishop Dunne of Dallas.

A bewhiskered bishop is such a rarity in this country that the hirsute adornments of Bishop Edward J. Dunne, the new head of the Catholic diocese of Dallas, have attracted a good deal of attention in some quarters. Although smooth faces are the rule among priests and prelates of the Catholic church, Bishop Dunne is not the only conspicuous exception, as Bishop Wigger of Newark, N. J., wears a full tuft of hair to protect his chin, and a few Episcopal priests might be mentioned.

When called to the Dallas diocese, Bishop Dunne was in charge of All Saints' church in Chicago. He organized the parish and built the church 12 years ago. He was born in Tipperary, Ireland, in 1846 and was taken by his parents to Chicago the following year. He studied for the priesthood in Milwaukee and Baltimore and was ordained 22 years ago. He is an eloquent and attractive speaker.

The Dallas diocese comprises more than 100 counties and an area of more than 100,000 square miles. In this vast tract there are 59 priests, 80 churches, 70 chapels and stations, 4 hospitals, 1 asylum, 13 academies, 17 parochial schools, 5 theological students and an estimated population of 85,000 Catholics. In Dallas, which is the episcopal city, there are a pro cathedral, which is dedicated to St. Patrick; another church, the Sacred Heart, and two chapels, one at the Ursuline academy and the other at the orphan asylum.

Bishop Dunne succeeds Bishop Brennan, who resigned the Dallas bishopric some time ago and is now bishop of St. John's, N. F. The Dallas diocese was created in 1890.

The Dime Came Back.

Mr. L. H. Livermore of Augusta, Me., has a 10 cent piece with which he has established unusually friendly relations. He date is 1827, and it was introduced to him for the first time in 1836, when he was 7 years old. He promptly marked his initials on it, but soon after spent it in Brunswick by mistake. In 1840, while in Mobile his old friend, the stamped coin, surprised him by returning to his pocket. Two years later he spent it again by mistake in Mobile. In 1847 he received it again in Denver. This time his proposee to hold on to it.

CHAPTER XXIX.

CAPTURED.

The long vivaced driver gesticulated.

"Mr. Kavanagh engaged this man, sir," said he, "and he'd been here, only he's just gone down to see that the boat was all right."

"That's a lie!" cried the watermen Gordon had found. "Why, him and his mates were in the 'Dog and Duck' when this gent come in, and he'd a seed him if he'd gone in the jug department 'stead of the bar side. Strike me pink, if he wasn't conscientively, holding his lantern in the other's face. 'You ain't no licensed watermen—you ain't nobody of these parts. Why, you ain't nothin but a bloomin furriner, as can't eat fish or drink fresh water like Englishmen!'"

"Anyhow," said Gordon decisively, "I shall take the man in charge, and he's more likely to get through this fog than a man who doesn't know the river well," and turning to me he would have persuaded me to return to the carriage and go no further, but I resolutely refused to accede to this proposal, feeling that the least I could do was to stand by him to the last.

"You will wait here till we return," said Gordon to the driver as he gave me his arm.

The man evidently regretted by the unlooked for turn of affairs, responded with a sullen nod. I looked around for the sea federate, but he had disappeared.

The waterman, carrying the lantern, descended to the water's edge with a swinging gait, and we followed at his heels. The tide was flowing, and as we slowly dragged my hand from Gordon's arm that he might be free to defend himself in case of attack, my reason being swayed by conflicting feelings. Anything might happen, I knew not what. Would these men, balked in the design to get Gordon into their boat, attempt to seize him now? It was possible, his it seemed to me more probable that in view of an alarm being raised by the waterman they would follow us to Fairyboat stairs and make the attempt nearer to the Jey, where they might have the assistance of Putty or any other agents employed in the affair. Nevertheless every sense was on the alert to catch u sign of movement in the still darkness that surrounded us.

The lantern hobbled up and down as the waterman scrambled from boat to boat until he reached his wherry and pulled into the shore. We got into the boat and seated ourselves in the stern. The waterman set the lantern at our feet and pushed off.

"The skiff ain't no manner of good to me," he explained. "I've got to feel my way across. The tide's a running out about three-quarters, and I shall know by the swash of it pretty well whether my boat's right for the Jey."

"Not much danger of being fouled by anything tonight," Gordon remarked.

"No, sir; there ain't nothin but the pollen boat movin tonight, and no craft lying in the Pool betwixt this and Dogness' crick."

Nevertheless before we had gone a couple of yards we ran into something—what it was could not be discovered, for by the time Peter Alexis had got the dark lantern nothing could be seen either ahead or along side of us.

"I lay it's them dangnation furriners aboulin us out of spite. If is had been a Englishmen, he'd 'a' answer us like a man."

He replaced the lantern and took the oars again. For some time he rowed in silence, then, after a pause, he grumbled out semi particularly strong words in an undertone and pulled with once or only. The muttering ceased, and he bled himself to both oars with redoubled vigor. Presently he paused again, and with considerable energy of voice expressions tugged at one oar viciously. After a brief repetition of this singular behavior he said, in reply to Gordon's question:

"What's the matter, master? Why, this is the most mysterious thing ever I knowed. I keeps on a-draggin and a-draggin of her up, and it's just as be as if she kep' on agoing down. I can't get any way on her anyhows. And we ought to be right over by this time. You don't see never a glimmer of light, do you?"

"It's as black as the deuce all round."

"Well, we're bound to get the way on her now if she don't mind. I'm muttered to be bored at the single oar. Then, after pulling in silence for a minute or two, "Mister, it don't seem to me as if you heard anything but my oar a-gole, do it?"

"No."

"That's a good un too. Bother me if I don't think I can smell that teller ship a-layin off Doggess' crick. Cuss me if it ain't taller too. Here, look at this," he cried suddenly, after feeling over the side and dipping his hand in the water. "We're a-goin quicker than the tide."

He caught up the lantern, and casting its light into the forepart of the boat he addressed, with a running accompaniment of expletives:

"If I didn't think so! It's them noder handed furriners playin this game on us. They've got a line on us, a-towin us down."

Setting down the lantern, he scrambled forward to disengage the grapnel by which we were being towed, and before he had time to accomplish this the boat in front backed, struck our bow and ground down alongside us. For a feeble moment the lantern was sufficient to reveal some dusky object bearing down upon us, and Gordon on the side of our boat and another stretched out to seize the lantern, the figure of the waterman kneeling on the thwart, and his face turned in exasperation toward the offensive "furriner." Then an oar swept down and struck him on the head, a man from the other boat trundled over the side into ours, the lantern was snatched out and dropped into the water, and we were left in utter darkness.

The waterman had fallen over with a grunt, stunned, and now lay quiet enough in the bottom of the boat. All we heard was a murmured command and the splash of oars in front of us.

Gordon had started to his feet at the moment Meech fell, shouting a hasty demand for an explanation, but he got no answer, and the extinguishing of the light rendered him powerless, and in brief consequence to assure me that no harm could come to me. The whole affair was inexplicable to him.

The watermen carrying the lantern descended to the waiter's edge.

not knowing that the object of this attack was to take him prisoner. I myself could not see how it was to end, for I still thought that Gordon was to be taken to the Marshalsea.

A whistle was blown in the boat that towed us, and another whistle was promptly on great distance, immediately replied. I concluded that this signal was made from the shore, and, in the darkness and the darkness let me to think that we were nearing Fairyhouse Stairs. But as we approached it the light took a reddish glare, not to be mistaken for the light of a gas jet. The whistle was blown again and replied to as before, only this time it sounded quite near, and at the same time a white light began to descend from the level of the red.

"This is the oddest thing in the world," said Gordon in a tone of perplexity. "That seems to be a ship's light in front of us, and the lantern is evidently coming down the side."

Then I understood the position of affairs. Gordon was to be taken on board the Russian vessel and not to the Mariner's Jey, as Kavanagh had intended.

In a few minutes we were drawn along side the dark hull of the steamer. On the little platform at the foot of the side steps an officer in a long cloak was standing, with a bright, bullseye lantern. The light dazzled me when he directed it in our faces. The man who had scrambled into the boat drew us close to the platform and held us in that position.

The officer raised his hat and said in Russian:

"Will the Prince Tarss Borgensky be good enough to step on board?" I knew enough of the language to understand that.

"What does he say, mademoiselle?" asked Gordon.

My heart sickened for an instant. Int unconscious my courage I replied:

"He says Tarss is on board and wishes to see us."

"Great heaven!" Gordon exclaimed, rising. "I see how it is now. They've got poor old Tarss. I'm afraid it's too late for us to help him, but we must go up and see."

"Here, where um I?" growled the waterman from the bottom of the boat. "What's all this here."

CHAPTER XXX.

A TRAP.

The Volga was already coaling up, and heard the clank of furnace doors and the scraping of shovels as we passed the engine room. The officer who had received us led the way to the deck cabin, a couple of men following close at our heels.

The cabin was well lit. An elderly, sharp visaged man, in a close fitting official costume, was seated at the table in the middle, with writing materials and a pile of documents before him. He was conveying his cap as we entered. The officer placed chairs for us near the table, and begging us to be seated quitted the cabin, the two following him.

The elderly man, with emotion, now that my part was played, but Gordon remained standing, his brows bent, his countenance overcast with pain. He knew that Tarss had been taken prisoner. Again the officer, speaking in Russian, begged him to take a seat. Gordon turned to me. I dropped my head ashamed to meet his eyes. "I don't know what he says, but I suppose he wants me to sit down," said he. "Will you tell him, mademoiselle, that we have come to see Tarss, and that's all we want?"

I made no reply, but remained silent with downcast eyes.

"I beg your pardon," he said with earnest solicitude, "I forgot that you—that that blow must naturally fall heavily upon you. You are ill?"

I shook my head.

Once more the courteous official offered a chair, and Gordon refusing it with a curt "No, thanks!" he shrugged his shoulders, and seating himself at the head of the table took up a paper and began to read from it in Russian. Gordon stopped him in the first sentence.

"If you are reading that paper for my benefit," said he, "allow me to tell you that you are wasting your time. I don't understand a word of Russian."

The old gentleman, who had seated himself on the left hand of the officer, leaned forward, and, speaking for the first time said in fairly good English and with a trace of accent, his shrill cracked voice:

"Surely the prince has not been expelled so long as to forget his native tongue!"

"I'm not a prince, and my native tongue is English," Gordon answered stoutly.

"Ah! I understand," she old gentleman responded with the same ironical blandness. "You wish to plead mistaken identity."

"I don't know what you mean. I have come on board to see Tarss—Prince Borgensky—as his request."

"Pardon me, I was at the head of the stairs when Count Rodersdorf invited the prince—addressing you, of course, in the third person—to come on board."

At the name of Rodersdorf I lifted my head in surprise to look at the officer. Was this the relentless enemy, the "bloodhound" that Kavanagh had gone to such lengths to outwit—this polite, middle aged, not unmerciful, certainly not ferocious looking man?

"What on earth does this mean?" asked Gordon, turning to me. Then, getting no response, he addressed the officer: "I will you answer me one question, please? Is Tarss on board this vessel?"

"If you are not Tarss, he certainly is not," was the direct reply.

"Then I am not Tarss. There is no necessity to stay here any longer."

He turned as if to go. To that instant Rodersdorf touched a gong and slipped his hand into the holster. Almost simultaneously the two burly fellows who had followed us to the cabin stepped in and stationed themselves before the door; each armed with a revolver. Gordon stopped abruptly.

"Pardon me," said the elderly gentlemen as if nothing had occurred to break the thread of the discussion, "there is a necessity to stay. We have a warrant for the arrest of Prince Borgensky, which Count Rodersdorf will proceed to read to you if you choose to hear it, and until you can give satisfactory proof that you are not Tarss Borgensky you must consider yourself a prisoner. Of course," he continued with a shrug and a smile, "I need not point out to you that resistance is perfectly useless and may be fatal."

"My name is George Gordon. I can give you my card."

The old man held up his hand derisively as he said:

"We are quite aware that you have adopted that name, and also that you have lately been living at Grandison Chambers, Adelphi terrace. The count has been watching you closely for some time. There is an accurate description of your person, if you would like to see it. We have taken the utmost pains to assure ourselves of your identity before taking this important step, you may be sure."

"Hang it! If you will not believe my word, what proof can I give you?"

"The simplest in the world—showing your papers."

"Papers!"

With a smile, as if at Gordon's affected ignorance, the old gentleman drew from his pockets a well worn document and shook it as he said:

"The papers which every one is compelled by police regulations to carry."

"Papers, sir!" Gordon cried fiercely, "what humiliation is only put upon those who merit it by their crimes."

"Do you wish me to believe that an Englishman is not obliged to produce papers of identification at the request of the police?"

"One unless he is a ticket of leave man." The old gentleman, in complete astonishment, communicated this information to Rodersdorf, who shook his head with no less a smile.

"This young lady will tell you that I am not Tarss," said Gordon.

"We cannot expect any young lady to incriminate her friend. We are very well acquainted with Mlle. Anna Soulikoff, and has saved you thrice from apprehension, but she will not succeed a fourth—and you may not by such simple means as you suggest."

"Will the evidence of another friend convince you?"

"Undoubtedly, if t'e friend is reliable."

"You seem to be pretty well informed upon some points," said Gordon after a few moments' reflection. "Perhaps you know a gentleman named Kavanagh?"

"Perfectly well."

"You will accept his evidence?"

"Without hesitation."

"Very well," said Gordon triumphantly "I will send for him."

"Perfectly needless," said the old gentleman despondently—"per-fect-ly. Perhaps you are not aware that Mr. Kavanagh, like myself, is the paid servant of the police?"

"A paid servant of the czar!" Gordon exclaimed, overwhelmed with astonishment.

"And the most trusted agent of his excellency, the minister of police."

A glimmering of the truth dawned upon Gordon, and his stertor nature taking the ascendant he turned fiercely upon me and said:

"Am you, too, a servant of the czar—a police spy?"

I bowed my head before his wrath; The old gentleman answered for me.

"Unfortunately Mlle. Soulikoff is our most determined adversary, and we would know who owe so much to her."

Gordon regarded him and then me in utter bewilderment. Rodersdorf took up the order of arrest, again saying a few words in Russian.

"If you have no other evidence to offer, Count Rodersdorf will proceed to read the warrant. Time presses."

"It's a farce, I tell you, reading the thing to us. You have no power to arrest me."

"The fact that you are a prisoner proves the contrary."

"That is an abuse of power for which you will be made to pay dearly. You have no authority to arrest even Tarss in British territory."

"No matter where we find the Prince Borgensky, we need no higher authority to make him our prisoner than that of the czar," the old gentleman, pointing to the seal on the order.

"I warn you again that I am not the prince, but a British subject."

The old gentleman shrugged his shoulders, raised his eyebrows and spoke to Rodersdorf, who gave a short, derisive laugh, and then losing patience replied in a few short, peremptory sentences which my limited knowledge of Russian did not enable me to follow. But he addressed Gordon rather than his companion.

"What does he say?" Gordon demanded with not less impatience.

"Count Rodersdorf wishes to know if you expect him to take your simple denial against the evidence of his own eyes. He says it is not the first time you have met, and he is somewhat astonished that you do not recognize him, as no further back than this morning you passed him twice in walking up and down the Adelphi terrace with Mr. Kavanagh."

Gordon started, and fixing his eyes on Rodersdorf seemed to recall his face to mind.

"And all this!" expostulated the old gentleman, raising the pile of identifying papers. "For example," he added, picking up a photograph that slipped out, "you would not have us believe that this is not your portrait?"

Gordon took up the photograph and regarded it in bewilderment. It was undoubtedly his own portrait, but mounted on a card, with the printed name and address of a photographer in Moscow. The only explanation was that the photograph had been removed from the Anglian passport and pasted on the Russian one. But for what purpose was still an unfathomed mystery to him.

"You perhaps deny your own handwriting?" said the old gentleman, handing a letter.

"That is not my hand. I cannot even read the character in which it is written.'

"Here is one written by you in the ordinary European hand."

"That is not my writing. I can prove it. Give me a sheet of paper."

Writing material was given to him, and he wrote a couple of lines quickly.

Rodersdorf and the old gentlemen examined it and exchanged a few observations.

"The prince has altered his hand ever deadly," said the old gentleman in a complimentary tone; "but, as the count points out, that is a slight achievement for one whose skill of hand is known all over the world."

Gordon dashed down the pen in a rage and thrust his hands in his pockets.

A humorous idea seemed to have occurred to Rodersdorf, and a rapid dialogue ensued between him and his secretary, at the end of which the old gentleman, turning to Gordon said:

"Admirably as you have played this little scene, you cannot expect us to take that exhibition of convincing proof that you are not Prince Borgensky. We are need to the very last degree, and we must be deceived. At the same time, to remove even the faintest trace of doubt, we shall be happy to facilitate the means of your power every means of immediately proving your identity. There is a paid reliable person with whom you wish to communicate."

"You shan't have a line of writing from me," said Gordon: "not a scrap that can be twisted into a snare to serve your purpose."

"In that case, relying on the evidence he has and the perfect honesty of our preference, Barry Kavanagh, we have only to request formalities and remove you to Russia, where you will be dealt with in accordance with the pleasure of the czar."

"As you please."

At a sign from the secretary, Rodersdorf again took up the paper, which he this time read through without interruption. Coming to the end, he nodded to the guard at the door, who at once opened it and laid hands upon Gordon. He made no resistance, but without a word passed out of the cabin, apparently too absorbed in thought to take heed of immediate circumstances.

I made a movement to follow him, but the officer laid a hand on mine and now stood by the door interposed.

"We have not done with you yet," he said with a smile. "Be seated a moment."

I seated myself in the chair he pushed to me.

For a few minutes he and the old gentleman conversed in a jargon that I could not understand. Then Rodersdorf addressed me in a courteous manner:

"I am sorry, mademoiselle, I suppose?" he continued rudely "You understand English?"

"Not such Russian as you two have been speaking together," I replied, speaking, as I had usually done, in broken.

"Oh, if you understand French, we cannot be overheard in that language. Now, then, your name is Aurn Solikoff?"

"I never heard the name."

"Ah! and you were not born at Kieff?" he said, glancing at a paper.

"No."

"And of course you haven't got my passport?"

"No."

"The same old game," he muttered, with a shrug, glancing at the old gentleman.

"And also, of course, you have not been living for nearly a year under the protection of Prince Borgensky?"

"Sir," I replied, with pride.

"Oh, come! It's something to get that admission out of you. Well, having lived with him so long, you must have also heard something about Siberia?"

"Yes," I replied, for I saw I acted in a bold a tone as I could assume, my heart pitabing at the hint.

"Who is going?" he echoed slowly. "You are if you're not prudent."

He gave me a look of threat to sink into my mind by speaking to his secretary.

"Now then, I want you to put your whole your life answer me this truly. Who is the man who has just left this cabin?"

"He is the minister of the country."

"Mademoiselle herself by her own word and act has raised a doubt—a very trifling one—whether we have captured the real Prince Borgensky or not. Of course, if he is not the prince we dare not take either him—whatever

'Round Home.

Three new cases of fever are reported in the Beckitt block.

Two children of Harry Norrie are reported to be down with the fever.

Little Lois, daughter of Fred and Mrs. Durand, is reported to be convalescent.

Monday and Tuesday will easily pass for the coldest days of the winter, so far.

W. E. Slocum returned last week from a two weeks visit at the old home in Iowa.

Sam Greenhalgh welcomed a young son and heir on Christmas week—a sort of a Christmas present.

McArty & Lash the painters, returned last Friday from Thief River Falls, where they have been engaged for the past month.

Prof. O. McClellis, principal of the Fosston schools, passed through the city Saturday on his way home from a trip to Iowa, where he spent the holidays.

T. J. Christensen associate principal of the Normal college, who has been struggling with typhoid fever for about four weeks, is able to be around again.

The second week in January opened out the coldest on record this winter. "When the days begin to lengthen the cold begins to strengthen."

The business men and citizens of Crookston who have been helping to keep alive the Crookston Tribune, must wonder what they have been paying out their money for.

Will Peterson and W. E. Walker drove to Fisher on Friday. Will says out of $400 that he had to collect he got $80 and thinks he never did see times so hard before.

Wheat opened the second week in January stronger, with an upward tendency. It commenced the week at 50 cents for 1 hard. It is the opinion of the best informed that very little wheat remains in the hands of the producer.

Rev. R. H. Battey will preach morning and evening at Mentor next Sunday, where he will lecture on Temperance on Monday night, and institute a Good Templars lodge. On the following Wednesday evening, January 17th, he will lecture at Fertile, giving an illustrated lecture at the Congregational church.

The American Good Templars lodge held open session this week Tuesday evening. A good audiance of those not members had the pleasure of listening to a rich program. Recitations, readings and debate with a spicy bundle of "news items" were given. By the way four new members have come into this lodge within the last ten days.

Benj. Benson came down from the town of Knute last week, and went up to the clerk of the court's office where he quietly took out a marriage license (all unbeknownst to everybody) and this week the happy ceremony that makes him a benedict will be performed—but nobody knows it—it is a profound secret so we cannot tell it till next week.

Geo. W. Truax writes from Cleveland, Ohio, that times are exceedingly hard there. He says: "It has been a relief to hear that times are not as hard in Minnesota as in Ohio. There are thousands of men out of employment here. I do not like it here as well as in Crookston; it rains about every day. The thermometer registers 62 to-day; the mud in the country is up to one's knees. Please remember me to all inquiring friends and especially to my G. A. R. comrades."

Postmaster Dawley informs the JOURNAL that in the latter part of December he received from the department at Washington 50,000 Columbian postage stamps, and early in January 80,000 more with the cheering intelligence that the office is still entitled to 20,000 more of the big Columbia masters. The government is making heroic efforts to work off its surplus of Columbian stamps and it looks like it would take about one year more to accomplish the task.

The numerous cases of typhoid fever in the city and the fact that new cases are continually developing, seem to suggest a cause that should not be difficult to ascertain. Some opinions ascribe it to the free use of unfiltered river water, while others think it comes from the fact that the sewerage in the manner has been pumped over the trench all summer at the outlet of the sewer. Whatever the cause may be, to the JOURNAL it seems plain that it is the duty of the proper city authorities to institute measures to ascertain the cause if possible so that the proper steps may be taken to prevent a further spread of the disease. A word to the wise should be sufficient.

A certain business man, (whose name for the present shall be called Mud,") said to a JOURNAL man, "I tell you that Holston is a slick one—deeper than any politician in this city! Why, he just dotes on that black eye goes around among the farmers and shows it to them as an evidence of how he is suffering in the cause of reform—got it while trying to secure a low rate for the county printing etc." But did he? If he had been acting in the interest of farmers he would have advocated the JOURNAL'S bid as that was by far the lowest as every sensible farmer can readily see at a glance.

Fred G. Rauch, who has been employed for the past year in the grocery store of his brother Adolph, has purchased his brother's interest therein and took control on Wednesday morning. Fred has grown up in our midst, is a young man of sterling qualities and the JOURNAL has no doubt that he will do well in business for himself. His brother, Adolph, has not yet announced what he intends to do in the future.

Chris. Houghton: "I think the notice of the county board on the printing contract was an outrage upon the business interests of the county, and was wholly for political reasons. There is no justice to the taxpayer in obliging him to pay two prices for everything he has and this notice of the board suggests something rotten in Denmark that deserves investigation."

The Tribune last issue had an article concerning C. P. DeMers and forgot to put head letters to Mr. DeMers' name, which so operated upon Mr. DeMers' sensitive nature that he rescinded the defect by putting a small cap head on the editor of the Tribune.

A young lody under her appearance at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Young this week, and now Tom is gently singing "After the ball," and wondering why it could not have been a christmas present.

The committee of citizens appointed to act with the council committee consists of H. Steenerson, John McKinnon, Ole Hagen, DeForest Buckin and H. E. Cooke.

Mrs. I. N. Simmons returned Sunday from Wisconsin, where she spent three months at the home of her brother, who died soon after her arrival.

Commissioner C. P. DeMers has sometimes been accused of dirty jobs but the one he did in Asselin's saloon, last Thursday evening seems to meet with universal approval.

County Attorney Holston is anxiously awaiting the outcome of the Corbett—Mitchell fight—wants to match County Commissioner DeMers against the winner.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Red River Valley Land and Investment Co., held Wednesday, the old officers were re-elected.

Miss Susie A. Schouweiler is quite ill with typhoid fever at the home of her sister Mrs. A. J. Rauch.

Hugh Thompson, who has been under the weather with la grippe is reported convalescent.

John Schlevolight was called to Red Wing last week on account of the ill-health of his parents.

The funeral of D. F. McDonald will be held at St. Mary's church to-morrow at 9 o'clock.

H. R. Nolan was registered at the Clarendon hotel, St. Paul, this week.

Policeman Tweten is again on duty on the force.

FIVE BILLION DOLLARS LOST.

What the Threat of Free Trade Has Already Cost the American People.

When we come to analyze the exact position of the country, comparing it with a year ago, the more we analyze it the less reason is there for being surprised at the result of the last election. The people have carefully examined into the condition that confronted them, and they have found that it is not a theory. The best indication of the actual business movement of the country is found in the clearing house returns of the banks. Let us see what these have been since the present administration assumed office last March, as reported to Bradstreet's:

March	$4,010,619,622	$3,000,671,400
May	4,244,261,220	3,014,220,127
June	4,024,006,737	4,015,128,293
July	4,127,603,264	4,057,261,170
August	3,946,213,088	4,013,405,513
September	3,911,655,497	4,072,264,170
October	3,993,590,193	3,410,207,253
Total	$32,057,567,175	$28,580,753,125

Here we see that, with the single exception of the month of May, there has been a decrease during each and every month from April to October inclusive in the volume of the banks' clearings of the country as compared with the business reported during the corresponding months of 1892. During the month immediately succeeding the occupancy by Mr. Cleveland of the presidential chair the decrease in the volume of trade throughout the country was $3,000,000. During May it gained, but during June it fell off by $360,000,000, during July about $100,000,000, during August by $1,167,000,000, during September by $1,448,000,000, until the climax was reached last month, October, when the loss of business throughout the country aggregated $1,487,000,000.

Thus within seven months there has been an aggregate net loss in the volume of trade throughout the country of $5,000,000,000 in those cities alone that reported their bank clearings to Bradstreet's. Five billion dollars less money circulated in the ordinary channels of trade and commerce in wages, in the manufacture of goods, in the employment of labor, in the demand for goods, all of which have found and round, diminishing in its daily course the earnings of the people—this is what the present administration has done to the country with its threat of free trade. It is not surprising, therefore, that there was an uprising of the people last election. The condition confronting them has proved to be vastly different from the anti-climax theory that was promised them, and they resented it.—American Economist.

The Traits of Protection.

The original wealth of the United States was in 1860 $16,000,000,000, one-half of which was destroyed during the civil war. In June, 1865, our wealth was exceeded the imperial figures of $60,000,000,000, earning $7,000,000 each day. In 1880 the wealth of the United States was $415 per capita; in 1887, $1,000 per capita. In these years of protection the United States has exceeded over one-half of the sum added to the world's wealth during that time. We nearly equal Great Britain in the production of iron and excel her in the production of steel. In 1860 manufactures in the United States amounted to $1,800,000,000; in 1887 to $7,000,000,000. Our total industries now amount to $11,000,000,000. The western states manufactured nearly as much in 1887 as the whole country in 1860. The southern states alone now make 10 per cent more pig iron than was made in the United States in 1860. The annual product of the United States exceeds that of England by more than one-half, and our trade is double that of England. England has increased her commerce less than six times since 1860; the United States has increased her commerce more than six times. While England has increased her export trade four times, the exports of the United States have increased eight times. In these years, from the third rank among powers, we have risen to the first. Up to 1860 the entire exports of the United States were $9,000,000,000; since then they have amounted to $14,000,000,000.

Defend the Homes of America.

Wherever the people had an opportunity to speak on Nov. 7 they condemned free trade. Wherever the voice of American citizenship was permitted to make itself heard it uttered an emphatic protest against the crime and folly of striking down American industry to serve the greed of foreign monopolists. The mendets of the strongest commonwealths of New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Ohio and Iowa were expressed in unmistakable terms. Last year New York voted for the Democratic national ticket by a plurality of 45,918. This year, leaving out of account the extraordinary vote against Maynard, the Republican plurality in New York is 24,194. New Jersey voted for the Cleveland electors by a plurality of 14,074. Last November she declared against free trade by a plurality of 22,152. Pennsylvania increased her presidential Republican plurality of 62,767 to a plurality of 156,198. Massachusetts increased her Republican plurality from 20,000 for Harrison to 85,818 for Greenhalge. Iowa, Republican by 22,685 last year, is now Republican by 82,886. Ohio, which voted for the Harrison electors by only 1,073, gave William McKinley the magnificent plurality of 51,847. Taken altogether, the total Republican plurality in the popular vote of these six states in 1892 was 83,318. This year it is 381,108.—New York Press.

Set the Wheels In Motion.

The process by which the vast industrial machinery of the United States can again be put in motion is simplicity itself. All that is necessary is for congress to strike out the enacting clause of the, starvation wages bill.—New York Press.

A Noble Spirit.

Last week the JOURNAL received a letter from one of its valued subscribers that is so full of pluck and a determination to succeed that we take the liberty to make extracts from it for the benefit of our readers. It is such a spirit as this letter breathes that conquers all difficulties and wrings success from the most untoward circumstances. The writer says:

"PRINCE COURT: I have been waiting time after time thinking I should get a little together for you for the Paper. I know I am several years behind time but this year seams Just as bad as Last year. And Again It was not I had 200 bushels of Wheat to sell this year. Last year the Hail Storm tuk Every Cereal that I had I could not pay all my debts then which comes on me this year so this years crop don't amount to Sheet. I for my part have wished many a times that I had you paid up the Money wont Resch but I wont steal them; if It was the case that I drunk them up but I don't; I have plenty of work on the farm year in and year out. Own No hired help to pay out Money to nor Cant Efford Nether top Buggies nor fine Clothes; I loves Cigar but I don't know when I last could Efford to by one, this year the Store keppers has turned Spot Cash and the makes it pretty tough and aught sake of Potatoes and sometimes a few dozen of Eggs thats how we get oure Coffee for it will Resch for very Little More. Now Mr. Cooke how do you think I feel around the heart when I meet with your little pieces in the JOURNAL going to put some hugh subscriptions and the hardest when I meet with Enny honest man I think feels as if he had the heart desese. At least I do. To-day I have one cent for stamps—have to borrow the other, but however bad It Loks I am not going to give up; I have got one son and it is now 16 year Old and Sune will be quite a little help I am not Rely disentfeasied with my home for All it has progressed Slowly; I have had several visits from the higher Powers Above—five Storms and Death have visited me but I manuged to hold my head above waters through it all and I am in hopes that if god gives me health will manuge to keep it Above for a while yet One thing I am glad of is that I have not got In vith the Mortgage Co. yet. It will now be 14 years since I started Farming here. I have not in that time been sued for a Dollar Nor Envy Amount and I am in hopes that you will save me from such Troubles as that. The only way I see is to give my note due next fall if that will do. I can't expect a newspaper man to work without his pay and while I do not want to get along without the JOURNAL I believe a man should do without what he can't pay for in some way."

Of how many homes in this broad land is the above true picture! But how many men think you are prepared to meet the vicissitudes of life with the unconquerable spirit of determination to succeed evinced by the writer of the above? Such an indomitable spirit as that would carry many a man through troubles which he now allows to conquer him and is well worthy of emulation.

Indignation Meeting

A mass meeting was held in the city hall last Saturday night, ostensibly for the purpose of passing resolutions condemnatory of the Tribune's recent attack on the business men of the city. A committee consisting of P. M. Rhodal, L. E. Gossman, Elias Steenerson and A. Bydal, was appointed to look into the matter of the letting of the county printing, which was the cause of the Tribune's attack.

The following notice was handed us by a member of the Salvation army:

The attention of everybody is called to the fact that Capt. Riggles and Lieut. Burge are to hold a "farewell" in the Salvation army barracks on Sunday evening, January 14th; also a swearing in of recruits during the evening. All are cordially invited to attend the farewell meeting. New officers will be on hand to take charge next week.

Don't forget Rev. Squire's 'Round the World lecture at the M. E. church this (Thursday) evening.

The Rebekah Lodge installed its officers on Tuesday evening after which an ample collation was spread for its many friends, followed by a social hop in the lodge room until the wee sma' hours.

GRINDING AGAIN.

The Adjourned Term of the District Court Convened Last Monday.

Haivor Steenerson Wins His Case Against L. Waterbury & Co.

Mrs. Johnson and Her Mare claim the Attention of the Court.

MONDAY, JAN. 15TH 1894.

Court convened at 10 a. m. after a vacation of three weeks.

The first case called was that of H. Steenerson vs L. Waterbury & Co. This is an action brought by plaintiff to recover for services claimed to have been rendered to the defendants in the fall of 1888. In the Fred Buse matter, with which many of our readers are familiar.

Mr. Buse was in the mercantile business at Red Lake Falls, and bought twine of L. Waterbury & Co. to the amount of about $6000 and gave his notes for the same. Waterbury's agent, Mr. Bennet, came up to look after their claim and employed Miller Foote & Sweatt to proceed to collect the same. They issued an attachment and sent the sheriff to take the property of Buse. In the investigation it was found that Mr. Buse had acted fraudulently in the disposition of his property. Seeing that criminal proceedings might grow out of the matter, Mr. Steenerson was called in by Mr. Miller to take a hand in the criminal proceedings. Two conversations were had with Mr. Steenerson. A few weeks later the attachment proceedings were dissolved and a receiver appointed, who took charge of all the property. Buse was afterward arrested at the instance of another creditor, C. Anltman & Co., for taking a false oath. Soon after Mr. Steenerson desired to be released from his arrangement with Mr. Miller. This Mr. Miller refused to do. Mr. Buse was brought before justice and gave bond. He then skipped to Canada and has not been within the jurisdiction of this court since. No further proceedings could be had against Mr. Buse. In March of 1888 Mr. Steenerson told Mr. Miller that he had not yet received nay pay for his service in the Waterbury case. Mr. Miller thereupon gave him a check for $50. Later Mr. Steenerson wrote a letter to Waterbury Co. in New York, claiming $1,000 for his services in the above case. They refused to consider his claim, and in 1890 he brought this suit. The ground for the claim is that he was prevented from rendering services in favor of Buse by being thus retained by Waterbury & Co.

The case was tried in the court in March, 1892, and a verdict for $500 rendered in favor of Mr. Steenerson. The defendant moved for new trial and it was granted. Plaintiff appealed to Supreme Court, but the order of the district court for a new trial was sustained.

A jury was then called in the case of C. Stuhr vs John Rae. This is an action on a promissory note. The defendant gave the plaintiff his promissory note, some time in June, 1892, for $130.33, payable October, 1892. The defense set up was, no consideration. No appearance on the part of the defendant. The court directed a verdict in favor of plaintiff for $130.75.

In the matter of the presentment against F. J. Duffy of East Grand Forks, found by the Grand Jury at the May term, on motion of the county attorney it will be brought before Justice Gossman for a hearing.

This case of Bank of Fosston vs Ludvig Olson is an appeal from justice court by defendant. It is an action on notes. The defendant claims usury and asks that the judgment of the lower court be reversed. The court took the matter under consideration.

TUESDAY.

The jury in the case of Steenerson vs Waterbury & Co. brought in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, and assessed his damages at $50. E. M. Stanton for plaintiff, and A. A. Miller for defendant.

Kendt Markinson vs Emil Johnson settled by arbitration.

A jury was next called in the case of Kary Kilpatrick vs Great Northern Railway Co. This is plaintiff, and action brought by plaintiff to recover damages for having been put off the train between Crookston and St. Hilaire. The plaintiff claims that on November 23, 1892, he purchased a ticket for first-class passage from Crookston to St. Hilaire; that when he boarded the train to go there was only one car for passengers, that being divided into two parts, one a smoker and baggage department and the other for passengers; he could not get a seat, and refused to deliver or show his ticket, or pay any fare until supplied with a seat; at Shirley he was put off the train by the conductor. He brought suit for $1,000. After the evidence was all in, a verdict was directed for the defendant on the ground that the plaintiff had failed to prove facts sufficient to allow him to recover. H. Steenerson for plaintiff, and J. W. Mason for defendant.

The case of Knute Quandre vs A. T. Ilng et al was next in order, and a jury was called: A. R. Holston acting as counsel for plaintiff, and Wm. Wurts for defendants. The action is brought to recover damages claimed to have been caused by defendants, as town officers of the town of Sanders, opening ditches that drew the water from its natural course, and thereby flooding plaintiff's land. The plaintiff prays for an injunction to have the ditches closed, and for damages to the amount of $150.

During a recess in the afternoon the parties came to an agreement, the case was settled and the jury discharged. The injunction to keep the ditches closed is made perpetual, the plaintiff allowed damages to the amount of one cent, and each party pay his share of the costs.

A jury was called in the case of Nettie Johnson vs Amy Grandquent, Mortagne & Buckler for plaintiff, and H. Steenerson for defendant. The action is brought in replevin. About ten years ago the painter A. Woods Co. got judgment against Bertham Johnson, Nettie Johnson's husband. Last summer Mrs. Johnson sent a mare, "Maud," owned by her to Crookston to take part in the races. The judgment that the Woods' A. Wood Co. had against Mr. Johnson was assigned to Steenerson Bros. and they attached the mare while she was in Crookston. Mrs. Johnson replevied the animal, and brought suit to replevin. The value of the mare is put at $1,000. Mrs. Johnson claims ownership, having bought the animal for $165.

A verdict was given in favor of plaintiff, allowing her the possession of the mare.

Queer Phenomena of Valting Bodies.

I am unable to say who first noticed the peculiar caprices of a suspended heavy body dropped from the top of a high tower, but it is nevertheless a certain fact that such objects deviate more slightly to the east of the perpendicular line. Persons of inquiring turn of mind who ask why this is as it is may find answer in the following: All falling bodies partake of the earth's eastward motion to a greater or lesser degree. Therefore during the time occupied by a stone in falling from the top of a high tower or other eminence the earth's rotary motion has carried it an appreciable distance to the east. The initial impetus of the stone has carried it to the eastward also, therefore it strikes the earth to the east of the perpendicular, varying in degree according to the height from which it has fallen.

A curious article on this subject can be found in the Leipzic Zeitungof May 6, 1889, page 8. The author of the article, who has given it the title of "A Nonperpendicularity of High Towers," claims that the tower on St. Peter'sschedral at Rome leans 18 inches to the east.—St. Louis Republic.

Removing Glass Stoppers.

Sometimes it is very difficult to remove a glass stopper from a bottle. A cloth wet in hot water generally is sufficient, but if this does not succeed the principle is to expand the neck of the bottle by heat and not the stopper. With hot water the latter is affected equally with the neck, and thus the desired effect is not produced. By holding the neck of the bottle about half an inch above the flame of a lamp or candle, however, in a few seconds the most obstinate cork will generally be moved. Care must be taken to turn the bottle rapidly and not allow the flame to touch the glass, as it might crack it. When the glass is thoroughly heated, a steady pull and twist will almost always bring out the stopper.—Exchange.

Bobby Burns and the Mayor.

On one occasion, arriving at Carlisle on horseback, Bobby Burns is said to have turned his steed out to graze for a while, and the animal strayed as to a messlow belonging to the corporation as got impounded. Although the horse was given up to him, the poet retaliated upon the mayor, whose tenure of office was to expire on the very morrow of the incident, as follows:

Was e'r puir poet sae befitted?
The matter drunk—the horse committed;
Puir hawkless beast! Tak' thee nae care;
Thou'll be a horse when he's nae mair mayor.

A STUBBORN BLAZE.

The St. Louis Hotel Falls a Victim to Flames on Sunday Afternoon.

The Firemen Work for About Eight Hours on the Burning Building.

No Insurance on Building—$2,000 on Furniture and Fixtures.

About 2:30 o'clock on Sunday afternoon the department was summoned to attend to a right healthy blaze that had opened up a flourishing business at the Hotel St. Louis and for about an hour it was a matter of doubt which would conquer—fire or water, but at about 10 o'clock the last spark seemed to be extinguished and leaving one line of hose attached to a hydrant ready for instant use, and two watchmen, the boys sought their supper and their beds, leaving the hotel practically a wreck with the third story entirely consumed and the lower stories and basement thoroughly drenched and very much demoralized. When the department first reached the scene, dense smoke was pouring from the roof, and very soon the entire cornice along the south side was in a blaze. Between the plastering and the sheathing boards, sawdust had been filled in, when the house was built and this becoming dried out, afforded the finest kind of a chance for the fire to work and for some time baffled the best efforts of the department to reach. The house was full of guests at the time the fire broke out several of whom were sick in bed, and so quickly did the raging element spread that some of the sick ones had to be taken down the fire escape which is in the rear end of the building. Mrs. Cox, the landlord's wife, Miss Porter Parsons, a teacher in the Stewardson Normal School, and Mrs. W. D. Wheeler the assistant cook's wife, and Frank Farnham, the Main street barber, were all sick and had to be taken out by friends. Most of the boarders lost all of their wearing apparel, and the entire outfit of furniture and fixings were ruined either by fire or water, upon this there was an insurance of $2000 in companies represented by Cook & B. Gorgas. This house was built in 1886 by Frank Jerome, opened by him as the Hotel Jerome. He ran it awhile then leased it to M. Pillatmuit who re-named it Hotel St. Louis. Isadore Fortier next took charge, conducting the house for two years or so when E. Le Page leased it for awhile, surrendering to Mr. Jerome who last spring leased it to M. E. Cox, of Grand Forks, the present landlord. There was a mortgage of $7,000 upon it which, we believe was foreclosed less than a year ago. Unfortunately there was not a cent of insurance upon the building. Our reporter interviewed Mr. Cox soon after the fire but at that time, in the unsettle state of things existing, that gentlemen could not say what steps he should take in the matter. Mr. Jerome being away in Dakota we could not learn what his plan about attempting to reconstruct the building is. We should have estimated the loss upon the building was thoroughly overhauled, raised up and repaired and at the time of the fire contained 56 rooms and was one of the most completely hotels in the city. The loss of it will be a severe blow to our city in case it should be found impracticable to rebuild. The department worked like millers, hour after hour and many of our citizens joined in the good work. Had this fire occurred during the prevalence of a high wind no earthly power could have saved adjoining property and no knowing where it would have ended.

SORES.

Most of the boarders at the St. Louis hotel lost all or nearly all of their wardrobes. After the fire was discovered the smoke became so dense it was all some of them could do to get out before smothering. That's one of the good effects of sawdust in the walls.

The sick ones taken from the hotel found temporary shelter at the residences of Frank Bivins Esq. Later Miss Parsons was taken to the Commercial and Frank Farnham to the hospital.

The boys poured about four feet of river water into the Hotel St. Louis cellar. They poured in five streams continuously for about eight hours.

The cause of the fire is a mystery. Some say a pipe, some a cigar stub and some one thing and some another, but no man can say for sure what was the cause. One thing there is no question about—It was the most stubborn fire in the history of Crookston.

The guests of the hotel, who lost their effects in the fire are: Miss P. Parsons, Geo. N. McGregor, O. K. Berget, J. F. Fanulmu, J. A. McWilliams, Axel Swanson, S. C. Johnson, Cyrus Sweet, F. E. Lowe, Dan McCarty, Annie Anderson, Carl Kruug, M. A. Bratrand, Misses Etta and Maggie McRoberts.

Boen's Attitude

Commenting on Boen's attitude the Minneapolis Evening Journal says: "Congressman Boen, of the Seventh district, has been giving some Populistic views on the Wilson bill and the income tax.

Mr. Boen says the Populists would like the whole estimated deficiency in the revenue, growing out of the reduction of duties, to be supplied by the income tax, but he certainly enough states in the same breath that "as Populists we believe in indirect taxation." As the income tax is essentially direct taxation it must be concluded that Mr. Boen favors indirect taxation for the Populists and direct taxation for the other fellows. The income tax is a great fad of Populism. They have been clamoring for it ever since the party was organized because they think that such a tax will fall most heavily upon "Eastern plutocrats." Anything which will give "Eastern plutocrats" any trouble the Populists will endorse. So many Democrats entertain the same idea that the ways and means committee, through the Populist affinity, decreed such a tax.

Mr. Boen says the Populists will support the Wilson bill, provided the income tax measure goes with it, although he says his party regards the Wilson measure as "the first step in a series of reforms." Mr. Boen's position is peculiar. He is opposed to the Wilson measure as it stands, but he will support it if the income tax is added. Evidently Mr. Boen is not a Populist of the first water."

Mistreprecat the Taxpayers.

—Thief River Falls Press—At the meeting of the board of commissioners of Polk county last week the following resolution was introduced by Commissioner Kirsch:

Whereas, The Crookston Daily Times and St. Hilaire Spectator and East Grand Forks Courier were awarded the county printing—theirs being the highest bid put in and their proprietors having a collusion and string on Commissioners Kirsch, Rhinehart and Demers. The bids of the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL and Crookston Tribune ranged all the way from one to two-thirds lower than the successful combination. Thus again do our honorable (?) commissioners disrespect the law and continue to misrepresent the taxpayers.

Populism on the Wane.

Rev. Squier will give to-night the lecture which he attempted to give last Thursday night. A new lot of tickets have been obtained, and another supply of gas has been procured, so there will be no hitch about the stereopticon part, of the entertainment this time. No admission fee will be charged, but those holding course ticket should go early, as seats will be reserved for them until 7:45. Lecture begins promptly at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Squier will take his audience from New York to Japan via Hawaii. The talk on Hawaii, and the views to be shown will be especially entertaining at this time.

TUESDAY FEB. 6th

Is the Date Agreed on For the Hearing in the Freight Rate Case.

The G. N. Ry. Co. Will Then Put in Its Answer to the Complaint

The attorneys of the Great Northern railway company have agreed that they can make their answer to the complaint of Ellen Steenerson in the freight rate matter, by February 6th, and that date has been fixed upon as the time when the matter will come up for hearing and argument before the state board of railroad and warehouse commissioners.

Moen's Prediction.

On the 8th inst. the Times announced that the hearing of the freight rate case has been postponed indefinitely, and with the wonderful foresight and penetration which Mac has gained in the occupation of slandering Haivor Steenerson for two years, he predicts that the case will be kept dragging along till after the next election.

On the 11th inst. the Times announced that the hearing has been set for February 6th.

'Tis too had to spoil a valuable prediction like this, and the only way you can retrieve yourself Mac, is to make another one.

No Indictment Found.

Attorney Steenerson returned Friday from St. Paul, where he succeeded in getting a verdict of acquittal in the cases of C. J. Orvik, of this city and Thos. Hougerud, of Fosston, charged with selling liquor to Indians. No indictment was found against Larson, the man held on a charge of counterfeiting, for passing a store order.

Populism Everywhere.

Beginning with a small local sale in a retail drug store, the business of Hood's Sarsaparilla has steadily increased until there is scarcely a village or hamlet in the United States where it is unknown.

To buy Hood's Sarsaparilla stands at the head in the medicine world, admitted in prosperity and envied in merit by thousands of would-be-competitors. It has a larger sale than any other medicine before the American public, and probably greater than all other sarsaparillas and blood purifiers combined.

Such success proves merit.

THE PARKS OF PARIS.

A FOREST OF TREES AND FLOWERS IN PROFUSION.

An Immense Perspective Unequaled in Any Other City In the World—The Champs Elysees, the Loveliest Thoroughfare in Paris—Wonderful Gardens.

There are not less than 130,000 trees in line within the walls of Paris, without including those which are found in private gardens, so vast and numerous in certain aristocratic quarters, nor those of the public gardens. And note this further fact that outside the public ways there exists in this city, in the form of parks, gardens and public squares, a total service of about 3,000 acres.

Beside trees, there are plants and flowers throughout the town. When it is time for Paris to take off her winter toilet and make her appearance in spring attire, it takes nearly 500,000 flower plants, distributed by hundreds of gardeners and their assistants. The total number of plants often employed for the toilet of this town at one time is about 2,000,000.

The rare exotics which produce them are situated in various parts of the city. In the Bois de Boulogne, near the race course of Longchamps, are the nursery grounds of trees with caduceus leaves. At Auteuil, on the road to the village of Boulogne, in a sandy soil, excellent for their propagation, are placed a collection of ruminous trees, plants with persistent leaves and heath mold plants. On the banks of the river Marne, at a village called Petit Bry, the plane trees that are planted along the boulevards are cultivated, and finally, ont at Vincennes, near the barrier and just beyond the fortifications, a large assignment of land is reserved for ornamental plants.

The central establishment is near La Muette, ont at Passy. It is one of the most considerable horticultural laboratories in the world, and has 30 conservatories.

In some of these Paris gardens there are so many diversities of plants that I dare not attempt to enumerate them. Without them, and the hundreds of thousands of others in Paris, many persons would bend over their daily labor and pass their lives having had not any other spectacle before their eyes than that of narrow streets or the somber courtyard of tenement house, workshop and factory.

I wish my readers could see Paris between the Louvre and the wide avenue end of the Bois de Boulogne, a distance of about five miles, and full of trees.

They begin with two pretty little garden spots in a narrow open space between those two edifices. Here plants are occupied on one side by the ministry of finances, on the other by the National gallery. Then comes a wide, bare space, badly paved with great blocks of stone and called the Place du Carrousel. Beyond its small arch of triumph that Napoleon once topped with booty from the Vatican begin the gardens of the Tuileries.

Here there are orange trees in immense wooded tubs planted green, and there is almost no grass at all. At its beginning is a part of the Jardin des Tuileries, which was only opened to the public in 1859, and it covers the ground where once stood the palace. Thence, seen through trees, through marble statutes and statuary of many kinds, an immense perspective slowly rises and gloriously terminates with the Arc de Triomphe. The details are ravishing, the ensemble is of extreme grace and grandeur; no other city on earth can show its like. West of the Tuileries gardens is the grand open space known as the Place de la Concorde, and after that comes the Champs Elysees, an elysian field where wide belts of varied shrubs are encircled with choicest flowers, where the grass spreads widely out here and there, and where great clumps of rhododendrons and lofty trees shroud buildings that are occupied as cafe concerts, restaurants, dioramas, a circus and the Palais de l'Industrie.

The Champs Elysees was thus laid out in 1800, but the work were so well done that it looks as if they were always thus established. This garden park of street and public garden finishes at the Rond point, a circular open space, where several streets end, and where there are fountains, beds of flowers and rich mansions. From the Rond point to the Place de l'Etoile, or triumphal arch, where all is breadth, dignity and airiness, the avenue of the Champs Elysees is built up with private mansions. Though here and there a grocery, a carriage storeroom or a drugshop have crept in to mar this aristocratic bearing of the loveliest thoroughfare in Paris. On either side of the roadway stretches a row of trees, and these, turning around the arch of triumph, continue their way down the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne, which leads to the park of that name.

It is a thoroughfare that grandly shows to what beauty avenue gardening can be brought. It was made entirely through private land, half the expenses being borne by the state on condition that an iron railing of uniform design was to be constructed along the whole length of each; that a strip of about 50 feet in breadth he left for the gardens between this railing and the main road, and, further, that no kind of trade or manufacturing should be carried on in any of the buildings adjoining. The total length of the Avenue du Bois de Boulogne is 1,350 yards, and its width is 155. It consists of a central roadway 120 feet wide, of two asphalt sidewalks each 40 feet wide, of a "rotten row" for horseback riders, of two long pieces of garden with grass and trees and flowers and of two bordering roads in front of the private residences.

I cannot begin to tell you of all of the beauties of trees and shrubs and plants which Paris can boast of, much less can I describe in full those other promenades called the Bois de Vincennes, the garden of the Buttes Chaumont, the Parc de Montsouris, etc. In all, Paris possesses 6 parks, 44 squares and 97 gardens.—Boston Herald.

THE ATCHISON FAILURE.

Some Interesting Facts About the Road and Its President.

A disastrous year for railroads, as well as for many passengers who rode on them, was 1893. Seventy-one roads, representing about one-eighth of the railway mileage of the country, passed into the hands of receivers. Of all these failures the downfall of Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe probably created the greatest financial sensation. The road has been a favorite with foreign investors, and its collapse has considerably impaired their faith in American securities. The Atchison system has over 9,000 miles of track and has had an immense influence in the development of the southwest. It fairly gridirons the state of Kansas, and its ramifications embrace such widely separated centers as Chicago, St. Louis, Galveston, Guaymas on the gulf of California, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Denver.

J. W. REINHART.

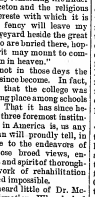
Mr. Joseph W. Reinhart, the young president and one of the receivers of the road, is the author of the famous Atchison reorganization of 1889, by which the various branches of the line were amalgamated. He came to the road as an expert railroad accountant, having served in that capacity with striking success under the receiver of the New York, West Shore and Buffalo railroad. Mr. Reinhart's plan for reorganization was not only accepted, but he was promptly made fourth vice president and general auditor of the Atchison. In 1891 he was elected first vice president, and when President Manvel died last winter he was placed at the head of the system.

Mr. Reinhart was born in Pittsburg 42 years ago and has been in the railway business since 1869, starting in the offices of the Richmond and Allegheny road in July of that year. After being auditor of that road he went to the West Shore and afterward to the Lake Shore. Mr. Reinhart introduced many economies in the Atchison system during the past year, but says the road was unable to cope with the general business depression, which reduced its earnings to such an extent that it could not meet the January interest on its bonds.

Senators Plumb and Pomeroy were prominently identified with the early history of the Atchison line, which was established on the old Santa Fe trail. It was originated by Colonel Cyrus K. Holliday, one of the founders of the city of Topeka. He drew up the charter and procured its adoption by the territorial legislature in 1859. The first 29 miles of road were built completed in 1869, and then the line was opened for business in Feb ... y, 1873.

DR. M'COSH IN RETIREMENT.

How the Venerable Ex-President of Princeton Passes His Declining Days.



DR. M'COSH.

Since he resigned from the presidency of Princeton college over five years ago the venerable Dr. James McCosh has continued to reside at the college in a plain, substantial little house built especially for him from his own designs, calmly waiting that great event which he foresaw 25 years ago, when, in his letter accepting the presidency, he wrote from Queen's college, Belfast, "I devote myself and my remaining life under God to old Princeton and the religious and literary interests with which it is identified, and I fancy will leave my bones in your graveyard beside the great and good men who are buried there, hoping that my spirit may mount to communion with them in heaven."

Princeton was not in those days the institution it has since become. In fact, it is well known that the college was weak and fast losing place among schools of the first class. That it has since become one of the three foremost institutions of learning in America is, as any old Princeton man will proudly tell, in great measure due to the endeavors of Dr. McCosh, whose broad views, enlightened methods and spirit of thorough-ness achieved a work of rehabilitation that many believed impossible.

The world has heard little of Dr. McCosh since his resignation. When he had shaken off responsibility, he settled publicity and settled down to enjoy a hale old age and well earned rest. He is 82 years of age and has just completed his twenty-first book, and it is not to be wondered at that he does little writing but enjoys what whatever he may do hereafter will be merely fragmentary in its nature. He still walks a mile every day, and attributes his physical preservation to the fact that he has always lived plainly and never neglected exercises. He is fond of telling how he used to walk 60 miles a day when he was a young man in Scotland, and his mind apparently dwells a good deal in the long ago.

Dr. McCosh was born in Ayrshire in 1811. He was educated at Glasgow and Edinburgh and ordained a minister of the Church of Scotland in 1835. He took an active part in organizing the Free Church of Scotland in 1843 and in 1851 was made professor of logic and metaphysics at Belfast. He was elected president of Princeton in 1868.

Football Salaries In England.

The members of the British Football league have resolved that $700 shall be the maximum salary for a league player. No club shall pay more than $50 bonus. If a player desires to be transferred, and his club agrees, the management of the league shall fix the amount to be paid for such transfer. For a violation of these rules the guilty club is to be fined $1,000, have six points deducted from its score and be liable to expulsion.

THREE CLOSE CALLS.

NARROW ESCAPES HAD BY WORKMEN IN A PULP MILL.

One of Them Crushed to a Shapeless Mass Between Iron Rollers—Another Whirled Around on a Belt—Thrilling Experience With a Log Jam.

"I never hear of persons narrowly escaping death or surviving extraordinary injuries," said the New York representative of a big pulp mill company, "that I do not think of some remarkable instances of the kind that have occurred at one of our mills in the northern part of this state. On one occasion a workman named Wolf was engaged in cleaning a machine used at a certain stage in the process of pulp manufacture. The principal feature of this machine was two very heavy iron rollers—one above the other. When in operation, the upper roller was pressed closely down on the lower one, and they revolved in opposite directions. To clean these rollers the upper one was raised seven or eight inches, the machine of course being at rest.

"In the course of his work Wolf, who was a young German, thrust his head and shoulders between the rollers to see better to clean the lower roller. While he was in that position some careless person turned on the water power. The rollers started at once, and before the alarm could be given and the water turned off Wolf was drawn closer through between the rollers and dropped on the other side, as much life gone out of his appearances went, as anything could be. I happened to be in that part of the mill at the time and saw the frightful mishap.

"I ran to where the limp form of the workman lay and dispatched a messenger at once for a doctor, merely as a matter of form, however, for that anything could be done for the shapeless mass of humanity never entered my mind. It was impossible to lift the body. We shuffled it on to a blanket and carried it to the unfortunate man's home. I noticed that, although there was not the slightest evidence of consciousness, Wolf was still breathing and that his heart was beating. When the doctor came, he declared that from the shoulders down there was positively not a single whole bone left in Wolf's body. He said there was not one chance in ten thousand of the man living.

"It would take 10 doctors a week to set his bones," he said.

"He incased the body in plaster from the neck down, and when he came next day was amazed to find that Wolf was still alive and had regained consciousness. Wolf lay incased in plaster for several weeks. His bones knitted and grew together again, but in such a way that when he was able to get around he was covered with knobs and ridges and angles and corners and angles from head to feet. But he was alive. He was our night watchman for 10 years after that and is alive today.

"Another time a workman in a different part of the mill named Sonneman was caught in a big belt by a cloth apron he wore, and before they saw what had happened he was whirled seven times around the pulleys, striking the ceiling with tremendous force each time. When he was taken up for dead. I examined him before the doctor came, and there wasn't even the skin of an abrasion or bruise on his body. Ten minutes later; when the doctor came, he was as black as coal all over. There wasn't a spot on him that was not discolored.

"The doctor examined the man carefully, and to his amazement found that there was not a bone broken anywhere about him. His injuries were so slight that he was at work again within two days. Yet he had passed seven times through a space between the pulley and the beam not over seven inches wide.

"Once the dam of one of our mills became so clogged with logs that they interfered with the water power. It was necessary to release the jam or shut down the mill. The work would necessarily endanger the lives and limbs of all who engaged in it, and volunteers were asked for, handsome extra pay being offered. Plenty of men were ready to take the risks, among them Pat O'Brien, an Irishman, 61 years old. He insisted on being one of the gang and joined it against the protest of the superintendent.

"The work of releasing the log jam went all right until the key log that held the main jam was to be removed. There lay the danger. The key was removed, and the men made a wild dash to escape the rush. They all got out safely with the four, among them the old Irishman, Pat O'Brien. These four were caught among the logs and went over the falls, a sheer descent of 85 feet. Men and logs went over together, and everybody supposed that the men would be ground to atoms. But a most astonishing thing happened. In falling a number of logs fell on end in a group, their upper ends coming together, forming an almost perfect tent, or peaked hut, with the down stream side open. The men had escaped injury, not only from the logs in the fall, but from the tremendous plunge itself, and it was as they landed in the water and in the tent of logs formed with them, beneath its shelter. They saved them from being drowned by the water that poured down from the great height.

"There was constant danger of the shelter of logs being forced from its lodgment by the pressure of water. In view of the latter danger, and to cause to rescuing them, the three young men of the party urged old Pat O'Brien to be hauled up first. He objected, preferring to be hauled up until his companions had been rescued, when he took his chance and was hauled safely up. He had scarcely been lifted above the shelter of the logs when it gave way, and the logs went crashing and timbering on down the stream. I have heard of wonderful escapes of death, but never anything so wonderful as that."—New York Sun.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

THEY VOTED FOR PROTECTION IN THE FIRST CONGRESS.

Loss of One Billion Dollars In the Value of Farm Products Since Last Year—The Effect of the New Duties—A Very Gloomy Outlook.

A large majority of the first congress of the United States were farmers. They saw the necessity of encouraging and protecting manufacturers in order that they might be free from servile and dangerous dependence upon foreign nations, for the arms, the implements of farming and other machines needed for their own safety, production and independence. They also saw the necessity for providing a market for crops they had raised, which could best be done by building up the home factories and increasing their home industries. The result was that a protective tariff was passed and signed by Georges Washington, July 4, 1789. Subsequently agriculture became more extensive and prosperous, commerce increasing with wonderful rapidity. Old industries were renewed, and many new ones were established; all branches of domestic trade were prosperous, and our revenue soon became sufficient to pay the expenses of congress, which it is not now with the fear of free trade.

The secretary of agriculture in his annual report, just submitted to congress, points out that a very large share of our imports of foreign goods consist of agricultural products, which he thinks should be grown in this country. Among others he mentions wool, tobacco and sugar, all of which are directly and deliberately attacked by the new tariff measure before congress. If Secretary Morton be sincere in his desire to build up agriculture, there is evidently some difference of opinion in the cabinet, because the president has expressed his approval of "my" measure submitted in the shape of the new free trade bill.

The object lesson of free trade has been thoroughly and practically brought home to farmers by the publication of the December crop report by the department of agriculture. This shows that as compared with a year ago there has been a decrease of 2.4 cents per bushel in the price of corn, of 10.1 cents in the price of wheat, of 3 cents per bushel in the price of rye, of 2.9 cents in the price of oats, of 3.6 cents per bushel in the price of barley, 7.3 cents per bushel in the price of potatoes and 1.41 cents per pound in the price of cotton. The aggregate value of this loss to farmers will reach very nearly to $1,000,000,000, an enormous loss to our agricultural industry. Farmers will have that amount of money less to spend, but the effect of this decrease in their purchasing power has not yet been thoroughly experienced either in our wholesale or retail trade.

The department of agriculture has shown our farmers that they have lost nearly $1,000,000,000 under the present free trade administration, so that they may in a measure be prepared for what is to follow. It appears from recent English statistics that the value of farm products which have been imported into England has increased by almost $500,000,000 since 1855 in a few of the leading staple crops. Within the past seven years the increase has been 44 per cent, while the increase in population was only 5 per cent, thus showing that the development of the agricultural industry in a free trade country is both rapid and complete.

The difference between the duty upon foreign horses imported under the McKinley tariff and the duty fixed under the new free trade measure is $11 per head; the difference in the duties on sheep is 82 cents per head, and on hogs 25 cents per head, so that farmers who raise stock for market must look for lower prices.

The price of barley this year is the lowest ever recorded, and in order to keep it low in the interests of the English brewing monopoly in this country it is proposed to reduce the duty by 20 per cent, thus giving Canadian farmers a better opportunity to supply the British beer trust in this country.

With the price of oats down below 20 cents per bushel and the duty reduced from 15 to 6 cents per bushel, as is proposed under the new free trade tariff, our farmers may look for a price of about 20 cents per bushel for the next season's crop of oats.

There is great rejoicing in Canada over the proposed reduction of 15 cents per bushel in the duty upon potatoes, and the same enthusiasm exists in Germany and the United Kingdom. This does not only mean that farmers will receive 15 cents per bushel less for potatoes grown in this country, but it will probably be a much greater difference, because the potatoes grown in our coast states, which have hitherto supplied the seaboard market, and those grown along the Canadian border, which have supplied our northern markets, will be forced farther east and south, in competition with potatoes grown in the largest potato growing sections of the country. Then the dealers will have to change their own way and will force prices down to any point they please; probably one-half of what they have been recently paying.

The importance of free apples to foreign farmers has not yet been discussed. It is a matter of fact, however, that for upward of 10 years past the fruit growers in Australia have been agitating more or less for the removal of the duty on apples, claiming that they could at least supply the Pacific coast markets with apples in our winter season, when the fruit of good keeping

TRAINING BOTH HANDS ALIKE.

No Good Reason Yet Advanced Why It Should Not Be Done.

In one of his essays in a book entitled "Brushwood," the late James T. Fields wrote: "If I was a boy again, I think I would learn to use my left hand just as freely as my right one, so that if anything happened to lame either of them the other would be all ready to write and handle things just as freely as if nothing had occurred." And undoubtedly a great many of us would learn to use both hands alike if we had our lives to live over again. Of all the young women who came under my instruction while in charge of the School of Domestic Economy of the Iowa Agricultural college, not more than one in twenty-five could sweep properly. The ratio in this respect of those who came under my instruction at Purdue university was about the same. And as far as my observation extends this ratio will hold in regard to women generally.

As a rule, women, old and young, do not know how to handle a broom. Their right hands only have been trained. Their left hands have been neglected. When a women takes hold of a broom it is with the right hand near the top of the handle and the left hand toward the corn, and instead of changing and reversing them as occasion demands she always keeps them in the same position. Whether she sweeps to the right or to the left, the position of her hands remains unchanged. And her body is contorted and her muscles strained in the performance of an operation that would exercise these organs harmoniously, if the hands were so trained that each could be used at will and were changed as demanded by the changes in the position of the sweeper.

I refer to women sweeping merely to illustrate my point. The same can be said concerning the training of the hands in numerous other branches of women's work that it is unnecessary to mention, and so far as the use of the left hand is concerned men are in no better condition than women. Men and women are in this respect maimed and handicapped alike. Why should such a state of things exist? Why, in this age of manual training, should we overlook and neglect the education of the left hand and continue to train the right hand at the expense of the left? No physician or physiologist has ever given a sensible reason for so doing, and we seem to adhere to the custom merely because it has been ever down to us by our ancestors.—Jennees Miller Monthly.

A Smuggling Scheme.

Passing through Bledsoe street with a friend, I chanced to pass the establishment of a firm of "dolders and repackers" of dry goods. Before the door were a hundred or more little bales of goods, bearing odd markings, but showing that they were destined for a firm in Texas, doing business in a town near the Mexican line.

"Do you know," asked my companion, "why those goods are put up in such small packages?"

Upon replying in the negative he continued: "They are to be smuggled across the Mexican line. The goods are purchased in their original packages and delivered here. The wooden boxes are discarded, and the goods subjected to hydraulic pressure and haled. Each bale contains about 30 pieces, or half the contents of an ordinary dry goods box.

"The goods are then shipped to Texas, and all marks removed. When all is arranged some night the little bales are slung across the backs of mules, two bales to each animal, and with an armed escort the train proceeds along the border to some distributing point in Mexico, where the goods are sold to Mexican traders at a good profit.

"Smuggling in this manner is quite extensively carried on between this country and Mexico, the United States getting in return for its dry goods, which are the most easily handled, cheap Mexican coffee and cigars."—New York Herald.

America's Only Frontier Belt.

What is supposed to be the only treeless belt in the United States lies between the city of Los Angeles and the Pacific ocean. It traverses the foothills of the Cahuenga range and has an elevation of between 200 and 400 feet. Its breadth it is perhaps three miles. The waters of the Pacific are visible from it, and the proximity of the ocean has of course something to do with banishing frosts. During the winter season this tract produces tomatoes, peas, beans and other tender vegetables, and here the lemon flourishes, a tree that is peculiarly susceptible to cold. Tropical fruits are also cultivated with success, and in connection with this fact it is interesting to know that a part of the covered territory has been acquired by Los Angeles for park purposes, and it is only a question of time when the city will be in the unique distinction of possessing the only tropical park in the United States. Strange to say, only the midway region of the Cahuenga range is free from frost, the lower part of the valley being occasionally visited.—New York Evening Post.

Oscar Wilde's Latest.

The way of the wit is hard. Oscar Wilde, moved by the ready appreciation of the English people, has been led to make some remarks which even his admirers are not applauding. He has been making some observations on the subject of Puritans and the theater. After devoutly hoping that he would not be offered a baby carrie," Mr. Wilde added, "I quite expect to see any day in the evening papers, 'Great Discovery in Egypt. Ten more commandments by Oscar Wilde.' "—Exchange.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her limbs. The nerves in such a condition that we had to keep her in bed. Our family physician, Dr. Miles, of Elkhart, Ind., prescribed Dr. Miles' plutos, and are positive we owe our daughter's life to them. would have had that terrible affliction. She had employed physicians, but we received no benefit from them. Our daughter is now rapidly gaining weight, having taken three bottles of Restorative, now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and sympathetic troubles have entirely left her, and she attends school regularly, and enjoys life with comfort and ease. She has recovered entirely from her nervousness, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her.

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines and would not allow him to buy it, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, and before it was all used I could see a change was wrought. Mrs. DIKEMAN, Box 62, Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle; six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

PROBATE NOTICE.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk—ss. In Probate Court. Special term, January 10th, 1894.

In the matter of the guardianship of Zida I., Henry E., Charles T. and Arthur M. Mathelda, minors.

On reading and filing the petition of Mathelda Lee, guardian of the above named minors, setting forth that the estate of said minors contains but has come to her hands for the disposition thereof, and how much remains unbound of the amount of debts outstanding and owing against said wards, so far as the same can be ascertained, with the charges of administration; and the taxes, assessments and other charges which are or existing upon said real estate, and the improvements which are necessary for the preservation thereof, and praying a description of the lands of said minor wards which it is proposed to mortgage; and praying the license to her granted to mortgage the lands of said so described.

And it appearing by said petition that the personal estate of said above named wards, is insufficient to pay all debts which may accrue of administration, and to pay any taxes, assessments and other charges which are or may be-come due on the estate, or for the improvements which are necessary for the preservation of the real estate, or any part thereof.

It is therefore ordered, that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday, the 29th day of January, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the probate office in the city of Crookston, in said county, then and there to show cause why a license should not be granted to said Mathelda Lee, guardian aforesaid, to mortgage the said real estate of said wards for the purpose of obtaining funds for the payment of such debts, charges, taxes, assessments and liens, and for the making of such necessary improvements.

And it is further ordered, that this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 10th day of January, A. D. 1894.

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE IN THE payment of the sum of one hundred and eighty dollars, interest due upon a certain note and mortgage executed and delivered by Ole Lundahl and Thorsteen Ellefsen to Annie Lundahl bearing date the 1st day of December, A. D. 1890, and given to secure the payment of the sum of one thousand and eight hundred dollars interest thereon specified, which said mortgage with the power of sale therein contained was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Polk County, Minnesota, on the 3d day of January, A. D. 1891, at 9 o'clock a. m. in Book 26 of Mortgages, on page 1, and no suit being expressly provided, and the said mortgage that if default be made in the payment of the interest or any part thereof or said mortgage indebtedness by the said mortgagors, it shall be lawful for the said mortgagee to declare the whole amount of said mortgage indebtedness due, and whereas the said mortgagee has elected to declare the whole amount of said mortgage due, and has given the notice and according to the terms of said mortgage and to collect the same, and no action or proceeding having instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises therein described and conveyed by said mortgage, viz: The southeast quarter of section three, township one hundred and forty-nine, range forty-eight in Polk County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk County, at the front door of the court house in the city of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on the 2nd day of March A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon at said day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt and interest, and the taxes if any, on said premises and fifty dollars attorney fee as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, which has become operative by reason thereof, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

WOMANKIND.

FOR WOMEN AND HOME.

This well-known journal, a union of four leading women's papers, has won its fame because it deals with what really interests the women of America. Fashions from the standpoint of good taste and economy. Fiction of a pure and helpful kind. Music and Art suitable for non-professional tastes. Household hints written by practical women. Suggestions and aids for self-supporting women. It is a paper for women, by women, and its writers are among the most noted authors. Every line is original, every engraving a gem.

It is a paper of to-day without espousing the great questions of religion, politics and temperance, it gives all the news regarding them. It is universally quoted by the press because its views and articles are bright and unique. Send to Springfield, Ohio, for a sample copy. Formerly $1.00, it is now but 50 cents a year. Elizabeth Cherry Waite, Editor.

The Journal will give one year's subscription to WOMANKIND FREE to every new subscriber to the JOURNAL who pays one year in advance, or to old subscribers who pay all arrearages and one year in advance.

Egerton L. P. Hunt is a candidate for auditor on the republican state ticket. Hustler early in the day yet for anything except a still hunt we should say.

THE State editorial association meets in Minneapolis on the 15th and 16th of January.

DOC FISH'S paper, The Great West will be moved to Aberdeen, South Dakota and take a national scope. Doc is getting too large for a small bailiwick like Minnesota since he downed the ange.

H. A. Foss formerly editor of the Normanden, published at Grand Forks, has started a paper at Mooshead, which he calls the Nye Normanden. (New Normandon.) He has taken into partnership a Mr. Lund, who was formerly with him in Grand Forks.

AND now it is said that Queen Lil intends to sue the United States government for a big pot of money, alleging big damage to her character. Before what tribunal she will bring her case is not stated and it is a matter of conjecture what tribunal would have jurisdiction. Why don't she bring suit against Grover for breach of promise? That's the only chance she has for recovering a cent.

THE president finds that his efforts to right the deposed queen Lil upon the throne at Hawaii and undo the work of the previous administration is a bigger job than he thought and has given it up—refers the whole business to Congress, where it should have gone in the first place. His actions in this matter have been very peculiar to say the least.

MCKENZIE never neglects an opportunity to slur the Norwegians. In his attempt to whitewash the board's action on the printing deal, he says that our offers to print the proceedings in the Red River Dalen amounts to nothing because nobody but Norwegians read that paper anyhow, and they don't amount to anything in Polk county.

THE boys do not take kindly to the "educational" idea by means of the New York Tribune. While theoretically it might be a very pretty idea, practically it would be the most absurd thing the committee could do. Local papers can and do do more good for the cause in a week than any foreign paper could do in a month. Local papers can get at the seat of the disorder and apply the remedy every week while the foreign paper would not hit it once a year.

MISLEADING STATEMENTS.

Again the Times attempts to excuse the commissioners for awarding the county printing to the highest bidder, and tries to mislead the people as to the amount paid by the county for printing. The financial statement of the county treasurer shows that in 1892. W. E. McKenzie drew $3,126.39 from Polk county for printing and stationery, and that $1,172.65 was paid other concerns, principally for blank books, blanks, stationery, etc., making a total of $4,297.04 paid out under this head in 1892. The financial statement for '93 is not out yet, but it is safe to say that the printing and stationery account will not fall short of $4,700, and there is no question but it will exceed $6,000 for '94. The acceptance of the Times bid this year requires that all books, blanks, stationery and printing required by the county shall be furnished by the Times, therefore that institution can reasonably expect to get over $5,000 out of the county this year.

As the Times, for obvious reasons, failed to publish the bids, even in the commissioners' proceedings, the JOURNAL prints them in this issue, so that those who care anything about this matter can compare them, and approximate the difference, taking $6,000 as the estimated amount to be paid by the county for the work. With the exception of stationery, which is but a small part of the county printing, the JOURNAL'S bid is one-half, and in some things almost one-third that of the Times.

As to the matter of circulation, if the JOURNAL didn't have a bigger circulation than the Times it would have ceased to exist long ago, as the Times has been built up and carried along at the expense of the county, while the JOURNAL has had to depend on its own resources.

The Times—on the advice of its legal advisor, Mike Kirsch—says the JOURNAL'S bond was illegal. This is news to us and to the attorney who drew it, and we would like to find out wherein it is illegal. The Times gives this as one reason why the board could not accept the bid of the JOURNAL. This is very, very funny. When the bids were opened and read by the clerk he announced after each one: "This bid is accompanied by a sufficient bond," and then without for a moment considering the bids or the bonds, Commissioner Kirsch produced his little resolution—which had been prepared beforehand—it was read and the printing voted to the Times.

As will be noticed by the bid of the JOURNAL, the commissioners' proceedings—the most important matter to the taxpayers—were to be published in the Red River Dalen in the Norwegian language, not in English as claimed by the Times.

Take the Times article right through, and it is a mass of misrepresentations and misleading statements, and on a par with other articles which concern the welfare of that institution.

THE DEADLY PARALLEL.

In the Daily Times of January 16th, 1892, appeared an article in defense of the county commissioners for awarding the county printing to the Times whose proprietor had agreed to publish the proceedings three lines and financial statement in the Times and Red River Dalen, which latter sheet was held up by the Times as being a good medium through which to reach the people.

The JOURNAL'S bid this year proposed for the publication of the aforesaid items in the Red River Dalen at a much lower rate than was paid McKenzie in 1892, and the JOURNAL also agreed that the official proceedings of the board should be published in the Norwegian language in the Dalen, whereas under the Times contract in 1892, they were published in English.

In the Times of January 11th, 1894, is another effusion about county printing, and the publication of any county work in the Dalen is held to be absolutely worthless.

A comparison of the two articles is amusing to say the least, and below will be found extracts from each:

1892.	1894.
The object of the law requiring the publication of the financial statement and other official notices of this county, was to get them before a reading taxpayers. The Times has a very full circulation, supplying with the spirit as well as the letter of the law, and meeting the publication requirements made through medium that reaches nearly, if not quite, all of the taxpayers, and at a slight additional expense. The Times has always been prompt in fulfilling their pledges to their constituents, and in doing their duty to the taxpayers, than by accepting the infinitely inferior offer at slightly reduced rate. There is no further room for any question but that the superior circulation of the Times and Red River Dalen is worth the extra consideration, over four times as great as that of the JOURNAL and the 140 concern (McIntosh and Fisher Bulletin) is the reason why any doubt that the commissioners did their full duty in awarding the printing to the Times at the much lower bid, according to circulation.	The JOURNAL asserts that its bid was almost one-half that of the Times. The JOURNAL offered to do the work for 25 cents a description, and publish it in English in the Red River Dalen. The Times, according to McKenzie, charged for an item, whether it consisted of a word or a column, the publication in the Norwegian paper was worth nobody's dollar, as those who take the paper, as a rule, do not read English, and would not be able to comprehend a word of what was published. Practically then the JOURNAL'S bid was 25 cents a description for one paper.

The Increase of Gold.

Minneapolis Journal: The forthcoming report of the director of the mint contains some figures about gold production which show the thorough weakness of the silver men's reiterated statement that gold is becoming very scarce and dear, and its retention as the commercial money standard of the business world is "impossible" to the farmer and everybody else.

The report, as foreshadowed, shows the total gold production of the world in 1892 to have been $181,817,000 an increase of 10,000,000 over the product of 1891. The estimate for the present year is $142,000,000 at the lowest calculation, and the United States' contribution this year is $36,000,000 as compared with $33,000,000 in 1892 and $27,000,000 in 1891. The Australasian mines have produced $30,000,000 in 1893, as compared with $22,000,000 in 1892. In Russia and Australia there is an increase. When it is recalled that before the California gold discoveries 45 years ago, the world's product averaged only about $42,000,000 a year in this same period it now produces within $6,000,000 of that sum, it is evident that gold is not getting scarce. The supply of gold is keeping fully up to the demand for it as the commercial standard of money value throughout the business world. There is for this country no difficulty about maintaining the gold vaule of all our currency so long as we keep silver in its proper places as money but not the money standard.

Factories and Farmers.

Wherever southern manufactories have been started and sustained, southern farmers have changed their modes of farming. The increased factories around them indicate increased profits, and it is an undoubted fact that their lands have increased in value not less than 25 per cent. Personally I can testify, if need be on oath, that having an iron furnace to the south and to the south of my farm has increased its market value 50 per cent, and that the profits at this increased value are larger than before the furnaces were built. The furnaces have not interfered with my labor, but by importing labor have given me more labor. I am glad to say that the market price of labor has been increased, but with greater profit to me.—Hugh McElderry.

Protecting Vegetables In Winter.

It does not seem to be generally known that light in the winter time is the chief agent in the destruction of vegetables otherwise hardy, and especially light shining brightly on the frost before it is thawed. Water has, of course, to be sprinkled, and if the vegetable plants are set closely together and covered with branches, to keep out the rain, it is generally all that is required. Water must be sprinkled, or else rotting may result. For this purpose it is good practice to invert vegetables. The cabbage especially bears exercise this attention. They are almost always inverted when placed together under boards or covers for protection, and, in fact, where no covering at all is used they will keep perfectly well when placed. IT RAINS.

It rains
And the leaves fall thick and fast,
As the bough, bare of its autumn blast;
The sparrows flutter, a sheltering cave,
And the voice of the wind is like one who grieves.

It rains.

It rains.
And the team goes on afield
To tend the soil for another yield;
The farmer sits by the kitchen fire
And smokes his pipe—or calls his hire.

It rains.

It rains.
And the fire burns merrier and bright,
And she smiles that the twilight shimmers by her;
Her babes at play by will, their tops on the floor.

It rains.

It rains.
And with voice with emotion choked,
A mother, in grief, bends her great white throne,
"Oh, Father, leave me not alone!"

It rains.

It rains.
And the tall trees sadly state
Their drenches by the new made grave,
And the grief-stricken hearts burst forth again,
As they think of the dear one cold in the rain.

It rains.

Betsy Patterson Bonaparte.

Mme. Betsy Patterson Bonaparte, the sister-in-law of an emperor, was born in Baltimore, and after living many years abroad returned to her native land, where she passed the last years of her life.

One of the old lady's crack stories in her latter days was of a lesson in etiquette given her by the hotel butler on her host. At breakfast she motioned to him and handed him her cup, wishing a second cup of tea. Uncle Bob, instead of taking the cup to his mistress, at the head of the table, put it down with a great flourish on the sideboard.

"But I wanted another cup of tea," said Miss Bonaparte.

"Did you, mum?" bluadily asked Uncle Bob. "You see, mum, you put your spoon in de saucer, an' that means you doan' want no mo' tea. When you wants some mo' tea, de s'ect way is to put de spoon in de cup—like dis," and Uncle Bob gravely illustrated the "s'rect" method of procedure.

The family were on thorns, expecting an outbreak from the sister-in-law of an emperor, although there is no doubt that a black skin in the white man's kitchen would face an emperor himself, but Betsy was only amused and laughed heartily.

After 50 years of money getting and money saving, she realized in the latter part of her life how little it all was and explained grimly, "Once I had everything but money! Now I have nothing but money."—Boston Transcript.

What Decided Him.

"It's no use," said the poet to the barber, "I will have to get my hair cut."

"All right. Want it pretty short?"

"Close up. I want the job attended to thoroughly."

"Long hair ain't in style any more, ventured the barber in an effort to be genial.

"It isn't the style I care for. Just a few minutes ago I was introduced to a man and heard, 'Which do you play, football or the piano?'"—Washington Star.

His Wife's Sum.

An old farmer, intent on making his will, was asked by a lawyer the name of his wife, when he gravely replied: "Well, indeed, I really don't recollect what it is. We've been married for upward of 40 years, and I've always called her my old woman." The lawyer left a blank to be filled up when his old woman's name was ascertained.—New York Mail and Express.

FIFTEEN KILLED

AND TWENTY-FIVE OTHERS BADLY INJURED

In a Rear End Collision On the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western—One Express Train Crashed Into Another During a Dense Fog.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Jan. 16.—About two miles from Hoboken and a few hundred feet from the drawbridge across the Hackensack river at 8:20 a. m., the Orange accommodation crashed into the rear of the Dover express on the Morris and Essex branch of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad. The scene of the accident was on the long meadows through which flows the Hackensack river. At least eleven lives paid the penalty of some one's carelessness and the list of known injured is 27, some of whom will probably die. So far as learned, one cause of the accident was the heavy fog which prevailed. Both trains were well on their way to their daily avocations and it seems a miracle that the death list was not increased many fold. The Dover express had slowed up to make sure that the drawbridge was all right. The Orange accommodation engineer, who should have done likewise, failed to take this precaution and crashed into the rear of the preceding train. The last car on the express was a combination baggage and smoker, and into this plunged the huge engine, cutting through the woodwork and sending splinters in all directions, with a force that showed the tremendous speed at which the train was traveling. The coach ahead of the smoker was telescoped by it, the roof torn out and the seats as though they were made of paper. The roof was thrown ahead and partially telescoped the third. For a moment the passengers did not realize the awful situation, but in the next the shrieks of the wounded and dying and the noise of escaping steam told them that an awful calamity had occurred.

Filled With Passengers

After a few minutes something like order was followed in the work of rescue, and the victims were rapidly taken out from amongst twisted iron and splintered timbers. The dead were so covered with dust and blood that it was almost Impossible to Identify Them.

The dead and wounded were placed on the train and taken to Jersey City, where many friends and relatives who had heard of the accident had already gathered. Ambulances were there in readiness, and those of the wounded who were unable to go home were taken to the hospitals, while the dead were taken to the different morgues to await identification. The dead are as follows: William Ferguson, Summit, N. J.; William R. Adams, Summit, N. J.; William Turner, Basking Ridge, N. J.; Edward Kinney, Barnardsville, N. J.; John Fish, Summit, N. J.; Walter K. Parrinton, Short Hill, N. J.; John M. Bilmer, Summit, N. J.; J. F. Ryan, Milburn, N. J.; Edwin Morell, Summit, N. J.; James Doty, Barkerville, N. J.; Donald Cameron, Newark. Of the injured six will die.

THE BRIDGE GAVE WAY.

Five Men Killed in a Railroad Accident Near San Rafael, Cal.

SAN RAFAEL, Cal., Jan. 16.—A frightful railroad accident occurred at Austin creek bridge on the North Pacific Coast railroad. An engine with six men on board was crossing the bridge when the bridge gave way and the engine crashed down a distance of 40 feet into the stream below. The stream was greatly swollen by heavy rains. All the men were drowned except Conductor Brown. The dead are: Frank Hart Sahins of Cazadero, Engineer Briggs, Fireman Collister, Rice Brenner, Tom Gonld.

CONFESSED MURDER.

Proprietor of a Milwaukee Hotel Strangled a Guest and Fired the House.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 16.—Rudolph J. Pechmann, proprietor of the Cream City hotel, in Walker's Point, has confessed the killing and burning of his guest, Frank Schlim. Schlim was found dead after the building was partly destroyed by fire last Friday morning, confessed at once that he strangled his aged guest for the purpose of robbing her, and afterwards fired her room. He failed to secure the woman's money. Pechmann is now in jail.

INSURGENTS VICTORIOUS.

They Capture the Island of Negenbo, Killing Forty of the Garrison.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 16.—The insurgent forces have captured the island of Engenho, killing 40 of the government garrison and taking 80 prisoners. The insurgents in Rio Grande Do Sul are burning villages and strangling all prisoners who fall into their hands.

Strike Probably Settled.

HURON, S. D., Jan. 16.—Reports from Black Hills mining districts indicate that the trouble culminating from employment of non-union men by South Dakota mining companies will be adjusted and work resumed. Up to noon Governor Sheldon had received no notice that troops would be needed to protect life and property.

In a Worse Raid Log.

DAWSON, Jan. 16.—Several sportsmen from Jamestown, including Dr. Dupuy with his pack of Italian greyhounds and a number of the Dawson Gun club, had a grand wolf hunt. Ten wolves were killed by the dogs. The party was mounted and not a shot was fired.

Universal Suffrage Rejected.

DRESDEN, Jan. 16.—The diet by a vote of 60 to 14 has rejected the motion of the Socialists for universal and equal suffrage at the district elections.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Tuesday, Jan. 9.

Friday has been fixed for the consideration of the Hornblower nomination in the senate.

The senate after a secret session took up the federal elections bill, but it was laid over informally until Monday.

In the house Mr. Wilson finished his speech on the tariff, and Mr. Burrows opened the debate for the Republicans.

Senator Pettigrew called up and secured the passage of his bill appropriating $200,000 to pay settlers on the Crow Creek Indian reservation who were deposed from their lands by an order issued by President Cleveland during his first administration.

Wednesday, Jan. 10.

Senator Davis delivered a speech on the Hawaiian question and denounced the administration's policy.

Representatives Johnson of Ohio and Dalzell delivered tariff speeches in the house. Johnson's was an outspoken free trade argument. He denounced the delay of the Democratic party.

Representative Holman has prepared a resolution declaring it to be the policy of the United States to conclude a treaty for a protectorate over Hawaii.

Thursday, Jan. 11.

Commissioner Blount was before the senate committee investigating Hawaiian affairs.

Hawaiian affairs occupied the senate most of the day. Senator Davis finished his speech and excited the mirth of his colleagues by his description of what he termed the "harlequin shoe."

Except for a two hours recess there was ran uninterrupted flow of tariff oratory in the house again from 11 a. m. until 10:30 p. m. The principal speeches were those of Mr. Breckbridge of Kentucky, Mr. Springer of Illinois, Mr. Dingley of Maine and Mr. Harter of Ohio.

Friday, Jan. 12.

The senate was not in session.

The house discussed the tariff bill to the exclusion of other business.

Saturday Jan. 13.

The senate was not in session.

The house, after listening to the president's Hawaiian message and correspondence, again took up the tariff discussion.

Monday, Jan. 15.

The consideration of the tariff bill under the 5-minute rule began. Only three amendments were disposed of, some of material moment. The attempt of Messrs. De Forest and Sperry (Dem., Conn.) to secure the adoption of an amendment increasing the duty on Sumatra cigar wrappers above the present rates was defeated. The debate concluded on a lobbying charge between Mr. Cockran and Mr. Reed.

The legislative session of the senate was short and uneventful, nearly the whole day being devoted to executive session in consideration of the Hornblower nomination. The morning hour was consumed by the introduction of petitions and bills. In executive session Senator Hill opened the fight against Hornblower for associate justice of the supreme court, and Senator Vilas of Wisconsin, the only Democratic member of the judiciary committee who supported Mr. Hornblower in the committee room, made a strong appeal for confirmation. After a general discussion, lasting throughout the afternoon, Hornblower's nomination was rejected by a majority of six.

TREASURY CASH.

Carlisle Says He Will Have to Issue Bonds Very Soon Again.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Secretary Carlisle has written a letter to Senator Voorhees in which he makes a statement of the condition of the treasury, and of the necessity for measures being taken for its relief. He says that the time of the house has been assigned to the tariff bill until the 20th inst., and for this reason he appeals to the senator to take the initiative in a measure to replenish the treasury. He odds that if prompt action is not taken by congress, it will be necessary for him to issue bonds under existing laws.

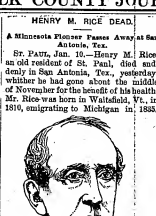
HENRY M. RICE DEAD.

A Minnesota Pioneer Passes Away at San Antonio, Tex.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 16.—Henry M. Rice, an old resident of St. Paul, died suddenly in San Antonia, Tex., yesterday, whither he had gone about the middle of November for the benefit of his health. Mr. Rice was born in Waterford, Vt., in 1816, emigrating to Michigan in 1835.



HENRY M. RICE.

He came to Fort Snelling in 1839 and was connected with that post as entier for some time. Later he became agent for a trading company and established trading posts from Lake Superior to the Red River of the North. Mr. Rice settled in St. Paul in 1848 and was one of the townsite owners. In 1849 he was elected to congress as delegate from the territory, and was re-elected in 1853. He was elected United States senator in 1858, serving until 1863. Mr. Rice's remains will be brought to this city for burial.

EVERY MEMBER PRESENT.

Executive Committee of the Republican National Committee in Session.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The executive committee of the national Republican committee met at the Arlington hotel at noon. Every member was present or represented by proxy. Thomas H. Carter resigned the chairmanship of the executive committee on account of business. Joseph H. Manley of Maine was chosen temporary chairman of the executive committee, and Mr. Carter continued as chairman of the local committee.

General Clarkson offered a resolution of thanks for ex-Chairman Carter "for his superior and faithful service," and it was adopted.

The report of Treasurer Bliss was read and a vote of thanks tendered him.

Mr. William M. Hahn of Ohio was elected secretary of the executive committee, and it was decided that five members should constitute a quorum.

JACKSON INAUGURATED.

Iowa's New Governor Takes the Oath of Office.

DES MOINES, Jan. 12.—It was Republican day in Des Moines. Frank D. Jackson was inaugurated in the presence of fully 10,000 Iowa people. It was a fine day for the event—bright, sunny, clear and cold. Republicans from all over the state came here for a two-fold purpose—inaugurating Governor Jackson and helping swell the senatorial fight. The inaugural parade formed at the Savoy hotel shortly after 2 p. m. and marched through the principal streets to the state capitol, where the inaugural exercises were held, Lieutenant Governor Bestow presided.

GEAR THE WINNER.

Iowa's Congressman Named in Caucus For United States Senator.

DES MOINES, Jan. 16.—The Republican caucus for the nomination of United States senator assembled during the evening in the hall of representatives. The public was excluded from the floor, but was allowed seats in the gallery. Several candidates originally entered the field. Of these Gear had the largest number of supporters, and as expected, had the largest number of votes on the first ballot. It was voted that no nominating speeches would be allowed and that the ballot be taken. Gear was nominated on the third ballot, receiving 57 votes.

BENNETT'S SUCCESSOR.

Judge Fuller Appointed to the Supreme Bench of South Dakota.

PIERRE, S. D., Jan. 16.—Governor Sheldon has appointed H. G. Fuller as a member of the supreme court to fill the judicial circuit to fill the vacancy made by the appointment of Judge Fuller. Both newly appointed judges appeared before presiding Judge Carson and were sworn in.

Re-Elected Donnelly.

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 11.—Donnelly is again president of the state Farmers' Alliance. The election took place amid great enthusiasm, and Mr. Donnelly responded to calls for a speech by stating he desired re-election as an endorsement. There were three ballots for secretary, the place going finally to A. E. Henderickson, who got 105 votes to 54 for C. H. Johnson. State Senator B. M. Probstfield was unanimously elected treasurer and L. C. Long state lecturer.

To Amend Iowa's Liquor Law.

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 16.—Bills were presented in the lower house to allow the manufacture of liquors in Iowa, to amend the prohibitory law, to pay bounties for the manufacture of beet sugar and to prevent and punish prize fighting.

STATE BANK TAX.

Opponents of Repeal Score a Victory in Committee.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The opposition to repealing the tax on state banks scored a victory in the committee on banking and currency, and it was agreed that the entire question be put aside until after the tariff debate closed. This was carried and the meeting summarily ended with the state bank men in a minority.

Two Deaths in a Bi zzard.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 12.—Two deaths are reported in the Northwest district from Wednesday night's blizzard. Robert Mills, a farmer, was returning home from this city to Headingly. He lost his way and was found dead in the morning. James McHorrister, while drunk, laid down on the river bank and perished in the gale.

$200,000 for Unemployed.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 12.—The city authorities have sold $200,000 in 4 per cent municipal bonds at a premium of $11,000 to the Citizens Savings and Loan association. The funds derived will be used in improving the parks and thus furnishing employment for a large number of idle men.

Smashed the Record Again.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—The total of eastbound shipments last week again broke the record, being 129,035 tons against 126,700 for the corresponding week of last year and 79,700 tons for the corresponding week of 1892.

A SYMPHONY IN SNOW

PREPARING FOR A WINTER CARNIVAL IN QUEER OLD QUEBEC.

A Week of Frigid Festivities in Which Snowshoe Clubs Storm an Ice Fortress and Fight a Mimic Battle—Quebec's Attractions to American Visitors.

The historic and picturesque town of Quebec is preparing for an ice carnival —one of those frigid festivals that have long been associated with the name of Montreal, and which were for a time successfully imitated in St. Paul until the winter climate of that thriving city grew too hot to support an ice palace.

In previous winter carnivals an ice palace modeled after those of St. Petersburg has been the center of attraction. Quebec proposes to substitute for this feature a vast ice fortress on the old walls of the city. Here will be given a spectacular representation of the memorable assault of 1773, in which General Montgomery lost his life.

The assault will take place at night and will be made by the combined snowshoe clubs of the city, gorgeously caparisoned and led by an experienced officer. The fortress will be defended by regular troops, and much is expected of the illuminations and pyrotechnic display which are to follow.

Another interesting military event will be a sham battle on the historic plains of Abraham—the troops on snowshoes and the artillery on traineaux. Other novel spectacles will be provided, and as a testimonial of good will toward their American neighbors a statue in ice to General Montgomery, modeled after the one in front of St. Paul's church in New York, will be erected on the spot where the general's remains lay for 40 years before their removal to the American metropolis. Altogether the week beginning Jan. 29 promises to furnish a festival of unusual interest and magnificence.

But aside from the novel spectacles in ice and snow, the picturesque pageantry and mimic warfare, there is much to interest American visitors in quaint old Quebec. The city is situated on a high ridge on the north shore of the St. Lawrence river and from its impregnable position has been called the Gibraltar of America. It is divided into Upper and Lower Town.

A large part of Upper Town is taken up with the grounds and buildings of religious societies and corporations, prominent among them being the site of the Jesuit college, founded in 1632. The suburbs of St. Louis and St. John extend southward and eastward. Lower Town takes in the suburbs of St. Roch, St. Sauveus and Boissenville, extending to the junction of the St. Lawrence and St. Charles rivers. The business part is near the wharves, is the market place, in which can best be seen every type of the Canadian, from the country folk to residents of the city. Women are in the majority, and the French and English languages are mingled in the babel of tongues. The most original characters are the peasants, who are genuine ones in gray homespun—the man wearing long legged moccasins and felt hats, while their wives look easy and comfortable in straight skirts, loose sacks and broad hats, all homemade.

One of the striking contrasts between ancient and modern Quebec that impress the visitor is the view of Chateau Frontenac from Lower Town. This magnificent building is one of the newest structures in Quebec and is surrounded by houses more than two and a half centuries ago.

Near the market is the little Church of Notre Dame des Victoires, one of the first churches built in America, the walls dating about 1600. Quebec's first building and the first garden in Canada are also near, and in the same locality Champlain founded Quebec by erecting his house in 1608. It was on Champlain street that the houses were demolished and people killed and injured by the landslide from Dufferin terrace a few years ago.

St. Roch is the pure French quarter. The houses are generally small and of irregular shape to suit the street angles and quiet tastes of the occupants. But, although small, they are most invariably built of brick or stone and have a comfortable, substantial look, with no suggestion of the shanty. Nearly all the shops and stores are under the living rooms of those carrying on business. There are scarcely any signs on the streets. Even the corner grocery store does not blaze with golden letters. It dis- ·s in a window a broom or at the door a bunch of birch bark.

Midwinter is the city's grandest season. There are blockades of snow, trees are bare and country houses buried beneath the white mantle, but the people light their fires, and all is sociability. The market place is thronged with sleighs and peasants in furs. A snowy twilight gives Quebec a still more striking aspect. The distance is hidden in the gray obscurity; gables, dormers and chimneys loom out in single groups, and the view of picturesque individual forms changes suddenly at every step. The place is muffled and veiled. People creep into their collars, bow their heads or even turn their backs to the wind to get breath as they hurry on to shelter. The women of Quebec are always attractive from their healthy and wholesome appearance. They are not at all hours going to or returning from mass or confession. Their manners are unobtrusive, their voices sweet and low and their bearing toward the opposite sex modest.

WARWICK CASTLE.

A Peep Into the Famous English Palace of the Kingmaker.

One could spend days looking at the pictures at Warwick and at the sculptures and curios. There is a table, the slab of which is made of fine marble mosaic, lapis lazuli, and precious stones which belonged to Marie Antoinette. In the red drawing room are rare specimens of Limousin enamels, also Bohemian glass and Venetian crystals. This room leads to the cedar drawing room, whose walls are 10 feet in thickness. One of the many valuable and beautiful ornaments in this room is a bust of Proserpine, by our American sculptor Power.

The "living rooms" of the castle extend 330 feet in length, and each window gives charming views of the grounds. In one of these rooms, the gilt drawing room, is a Florentine mosaic table, enriched with precious stones, brought from the Grimani palace in Venice. Its value is £10,000, which, pleaso remember, is $50,000 of Yankee money. The Grimani arms, the pope's triple crown, lion of St. Mark, doge's cap, keys of St. Peter and cardinal's hat are illustrated in jasper, onyx, amethyst, malachite and cornelian on its surface.

A moment after leaving the gilt drawing room and wo are in the state bedroom, where good Queen Anne slept, and in which her big dreary looking bed still stauds. We don't seem to know much about Queen Anne's belongings, thae her bed and traveling trunks at its foot aronse our interest. In these trunks were her majesty's clothes. They are sensible, ponderous trunks, covered with brown leather and studded with brass nails. Even an American baggage smashing porter would have found Queen Anne's trunks "too large an order" to destroy. George III presented this bedstead, with its faded crimson curtains and its 15 feet high posts. Over the fireplace hangs a fine portrait of the queen herself painted by Sir Godfrey Kneller. It is in this state bedroom that Queen Victoria slept when she visited Warwick castle with the late prince consort. I don't know whether she occupied Anne's bed, but if so I hope it was more comfortable than it looks.

From the bedroom is a boudoir, literally crammed with paintings. Here is Holbein's "Henry VIII;" "A Bear Hunt," by Rubens; "Head Christ," on copper, by e follower of Correggio; "Charles II's Beauties," by Lely; a "San Sebastian," by Vandyke; "Card Players," by Teniers, and a Salvator Rosa landscape.

Mr. Kelly has always been an earnest Catholic, and a few years ago Pope Leo XIII appointed him chamberlain of the cape and sword, an honor which has been conferred upon but two Americans. Mr. Kelly was compelled to decline, as his health would not permit a journey to Rome.

Mr. Kelly's castle's state dining room was harned out in 1871, but it has been reprodnced on the old lines and is a truly regal apartment. On either side of the massive fireplace, where mony a Yule log has slowly burned itself out to white ashes, there are gilt Venetian figures. Above the fireplace hongs Ruben's sketch of Henn. There is also in this room a droll portrait of George III in the arms of his mother.

The castle boasts a Shakespeare room, designed and added by the late earl, and to which the county of Warwick presented the Kenilworth bed'st in ancient oak. Into this room have been collected all procurable Shakespeare relics, and resting on an old clav footed oak table are all the works, with the admirable edition of Shakespeare of the late Halliwell Phillips.

The place has been called the castle of the kingmaker. Who can visit this historic home and not desire to reread Lord Lytton's—or Bulwer's, as you please—"The Last of the Barons," whose text or composition is furnished by the annale of this wonderful castle and its powerful earl, Richard Nevil. —Boston Herald.

Your Best Young Man.

"You can't always just tell what your best young man is going to develop into," said the girl in the blue jacket. "Now, I know a young man, and when I first met him I said to myself: 'At last! Here is a real live man without a fad.' And I was happy in the thought that he wouldn't talk football or theosophy to me. But it didn't take mo long to find out my mistake. Of all the fads I ever heard of that man's fad is the very worst.

"He does tricks with cards and can juggle things," continued the girl in the blue jacket, as her eyes grew bright and her cheeks pinkish. "At luncheons he fishes his handkerchief out of my sant and finds his gloves in my jacket pocket. If you hand him a glass of water, he'll turn it upside down and ask you blandly why the water doesn't run out. At home he makes life miserable for me, and he goes every day and tells this girl and have her sweep up the remnants of the teacups that he breaks. He balances peanuts, guitars, swords, in fact, everything that he can find—on the end of his nose. I can't do anything with him. I am trying very hard to make him angry so he'll quit calling, but he is so absurdly good natured that I fear I shall never succeed."—St. Louis Republic.

Butler and Father Ryan.

When General Butler was in command at New Orleans during the rebellion, he was informed that Father Ryan, priest and poet, had been expressing rebellious sentiments and had said he would even refuse to hold funeral services for a dead Yankee. General Butler sent for him to Lodge and began rounding scolding him for expressing such un-Christian and rebellious sentiments. "General," the witty priest answered, "you have been misinformed. I would be pleased to conduct funeral services for all the Yankee officers and men in New Orleans."—San Francisco Argonaut.

"Yes; it bought me too."—Newport News.

READY TO RETIRE.

Eugene Kelly's Millions and How He Made Them.

Of more than ordinary interest to a great many readers all over the country is the announcement that the New York banking firm of Eugene Kelly & Co. will dissolve in the spring, and the aged founder of the house will retire from business. For many years Mr. Kelly has been known as a liberal philanthropist and a generous friend of the needy home rule. He once contributed $20,000 to the parliamentary fund and was very active in securing contributions from others.

Eugene Kelly is a son of Thomas Boyne O'Kelly of Mullaghmore and was born in County Tyrone in 1808. The family had once been very wealthy, and one of its members served in the Irish parliament in Dublin in 1585. The O'Kelly estates dwindled until finally Thomas Boyne felt constrained to drop his "O" as a luxury he could not afford, though he always lived on his rent roll and was never obliged to engage in business of any kind.

Eugene Kelly was fairly well provided for when he came to this country 50 years ago and took a clerkship in the store of Donnelly & Co. in New York city. He soon went west to Kentucky and afterward to St. Louis, where he married and soon after became a widower. Mr. Kelly established the New York house of Eugene Kelly & Co. in 1850 and in 1857 married Miss Margaret Hughes, a niece of the late archbishop of New York. When the gold fever broke out in California, he assisted in establishing at San Francisco the banking house of Donohoe & Kelly, a firm that still exists. All of Mr. Kelly's business ventures have been prosperous ones, and he retires with a fortune estimated at about $10,000,000.

A WORTHY MEMORIAL.

A Public Library to Commemorate William Blackstone of Branford, Conn.

The ambition to live in the esteem of posterity has probably done more for the diffusion of a knowledge of literature, art and science than any other cause. To this honorable impulse we owe most of our colleges and academies, libraries, art galleries and museums, as well as hospitals and charitable institutions of all kinds. A new benefaction which is worthy of notice and commendation is the James Blackstone Public library, which is being built at Branford, Conn., by J. W. Blackstone, president of the Chicago and Alton railroad.

Mr. Blackstone was born in Branford, and though he has long lived in Chicago time, distance and prosperity have not effaced his love for his native town. When this library is completed, he will present it to Branford as a memorial to his father, James Blackstone.

Branford is a town of about 5,000 inhabitants, beautifully situated on the shore of Long Island sound about eight miles from New Haven. The library will occupy a prominent corner and command a fine view of the village and its environments. It will be a fireproofed steel building in the pure Ionic style of Greek architecture. The exterior will be light pink Tennessee marble with a finely rubbed surface. It will have a frontage of 129 feet and will be 102 feet deep. The library proper will have a capacity of 100,000 volumes, and beside this will be a lecture room 40 by 60 feet, art galleries, a gymnasium, reading and students' rooms.

The main entrance will lead through a marble portico and vestibule to the rotunda, which will be in the form of an octagon finished in marble and surmounted by a semicircular dome supported on eight marble columns. From the rotunda will open the library and reading rooms, the librarian's room, the catalogue room and the students' room. Opposite the main entrance will be a side entrance and staircase hall, also finished in marble, from which will open the lecture hall. From the staircase access is obtained to the gymnasium in the basement and picture galleries and parlors on the second floor and also to the gallery of the lecture hall. The entire woodwork of the building will be antique quarter sawed oak, with the exception of the lecture hall, which will have a finish of natural mahogany. The rotunda will have a mosaic floor, which will contain a series of mosaic panel pictures illustrating the origin and development of printing and bookbinding. The completed building will cost about $250,000.

CHAPTER XXXII.

I CONFESS TO COWARDICE.

"My dear girl," remonstrated Gordon, "is any one slaying it in a stuffy cabin, with nothing to breathe but yellow fog, in a position to see things in anything but a gloomy light? Are you yet in a condition to form an important judgment on theaffair? Now, if you had been pondering the matter with a clear head, as I have been doing for the past week"—

"But you don't know all the facts," I said, interrupting him.

Pulling his beard, he reluctantly admitted that that was true. "And," he added: "it's a fact that I've had to draw a good deal on my imagination to squares things comfortably. However, we are not going to discuss the matter today. It can easily stand over till you are stronger, and then if it's necessary we'll have all the facts and make the best we may of 'em."

I assented to this proposal with a sigh, knowing that the truth must be told, but I was grateful for the delay, feeling so feeble and downhearted.

We staid upon deck until the sun sank in the golden west, but the kind hearted fellow said not another word on the subject that obviously caused me such depressing anxiety. He knew a great deal about ships and the sea and told me many stories of his adventures in a yacht with a small launch on my imagination to squares things comfortably. However, we are not going to discuss the matter today. It can easily stand over till you are stronger, and then if it's necessary we'll have all the facts and make the best we may of 'em."

I assented to this proposal with a sigh, knowing that the truth must be told, but I was grateful for the delay, feeling so feeble and downhearted.

We staid upon deck until the sun sank in the golden west, but the kind hearted fellow said not another word on the subject that obviously caused me such depressing anxiety. He knew a great deal about ships and the sea and told me many stories of his adventures in a yacht with a small launch that more than once I was forced to smile.

We were cheered by Rudersdorf and the old gentleman, who, seeing by the openness of our manner that we were not hatching plots, marked their satisfaction by promising that we should come on deck the following day if the weather held fair.

The wind freshened in the night, but the sea was not enough disturbed to prevent my going on deck after breakfast, though I found it difficult to keep my feet under this novel condition of things.

Gordon was waiting for me at the head of the stairs in a fur jacket he had brought from one of the sailors. He had a pipe in his mouth, and his face was radiant with boyish delight.

"I'm glad to see you have not been ill," said he, taking my arm to steady me.

"Oh, that's all past."

"Seasick, I mean."

"I don't know how any one can be sick on the sea," I replied, looking out over the dancing waters. They seemed to me as broad in their strength as they had been beautiful in their calm repose, and the fresh air gave me newlife.

He glanced at me in perplexity as he steered me across to the corner he had already prepared. We seated ourselves, and Rudersdorf sent us a couple of rugs and a tarpaulin, with which we made ourselves very snug and comfortable.

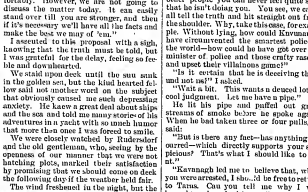
"You a bit puzzled, mademoiselle," said Gordon, when Rudersdorf and his secretary had left us. "Frenzied one or two marks you made yesterday, and what you said just now, one would think you had never been on the sea before."

"I saw it for the first time yesterday."

"Then how in the world did you get across from Russia?" he said, in amazement.

"I have never been in Russia. I fancy I was born in Shudwell. Anyway I lived there so long as I can remember and have left it till last year."

"But—you speak French like a native."



His pipe went out as he listened.

"That's because I speak nothing else at home, because I could not speak English," I like you or anyone else who has been chivalrous, because Taras wished me to begin a new life, and break away from all that had gone before."

"Look here, mademoiselle," Gordon said stopping me with apprehension in his tone, "if this sort of thing will upset you, you know"—

"No, no. I'm strong now. I must tell you what I had not the courage to tell you yesterday. I ought to have told you the first thing, because I'm going to ask a favor by your kindness until I know whether you can forgive me or not."

"Oh, I say, don't you know"—Gordon expostulated uneasily.

Disregarding his remonstrance, I told my story as simply as I could, relating all that had taken place between Rudersdorf and myself truthfully and with a desire to say nothing which might hide his judgments.

His pipe went out as he listened. Satisfiment holding him spellbound. We looked each other straight in the eyes until I had spoken the last word. Then I dropped my head and waited in trembling uncertainty for his verdict.

He did not leave me long in doubt as to his present feeling.

"You are a brick," he said; "a regular brick!" and taking my hand he pressed it warmly.

"I—I didn't expect you to think so," I said.

"Why, you don't think I could have any grudge against you, do you? Why, you have helped me to do me more than I should willingly have done to save you? Think of it I had not risked, and if it were otherwise that would not alter my esteem for you—not a bit. It's this deception that I admire you for. A real, genuine, womanly woman, don't you know, should stick at nothing, but go bang through thick and thin for a man. Judith, I believe, would go as much for me if it came to the stick. If not (and know it)—well, she would be my Judith, that's all. Don't give way, little woman," he continued, seeing my lips tremble perhaps, for his generous enthusiasm touched me greatly. "You have done all that you could do, and it's bound to turn out right. I have unbounded confidence in Kavanagh."

"Have you?" I asked hopefully.

"I should think so! Why, he's one of the finest, shrewdest, cleverest men I know. Don't be such a fool, I can tell you."

"No, I didn't think he might be that exactly, but"—

"I see. You thought it possible that he might be something worse. Well, that's excusable, for when a man owns up to doing other people's pay can mean fee'd quite sure that he isn't doing you. You see, we can't all tell the truth and hit straight out from the shoulder. Why, take this case, for example. Without lying, how could Kavanagh have circumvented the smartest police in the world—how could he have got over the minister of police and those crafty rascals and upset their villainous game?"

"Is it certain that he is deceiving them in that?" I asked.

"Wait a bit. This wants a deuced lot of cool judgment. Let me have a pipe."

He lit his pipe and puffed out great streams of smoke before he spoke again. When he had taken three or four puffs, he said:

"That is there any fact—has anything occurred—which directly supports your suspicions? That's what I should like to get at."

"Kavanagh led me to believe that, when you were arrested, I should be free to return to Taras. Can you tell me why I was brought on board with you?"

"You would come, you know."

"That there is evidence enough that he did not come of my own accord I should have been brought here by force. From the very outset it was known on board here that I was to be taken away with you."

"Hang me if I can explain that arrangement. Can you?"

"Yes; it was necessary to get rid of me."

"Why?"

"That I might not tell tales."

"But if the whole story is to come out"—

"It is not to come out." I said, with the emphasis of conviction. "He never intended that it should. If this affair were made public, inquiry would lead to the discovery of his share in it, a discovery that would be fatal to him."

"But the truth must come out at some time," he remonstrated, still with his face turned from me.

"Why, whom can we tell in Russia? Who will hear our voices when we are in Siberia?"

"But the police must learn in time, by his words, that Taras is still free."

"Is it likely that they will send you back to England to prove their fault?"

He knocked out his pipe and stood on the deck before he made any reply. Then, drawing a long breath, he said:

"Well, we shall see if you are right, mademoiselle, when we get to Archangel."

"Too late," said I, with deep contrition in my heart. "I ought to have found that out before."

"Oh, my dear girl!" he cried, turning again quickly to me with the genial warmth that characterized him, "whatever turns up you must always be held blameless. You're not the only one deceived. Here am I to justify you, lel its a lamb by the men I professed to know, so no more self reproaches." Then, giving my hand a hearty shake, he added, "Are we not companions in adversity?"

CHAPTER XXXIII.

WE ARE ALLOWED TO SEE.

We were allowed to see each other no more until we reached Archangel, and then only at a distance, as we were hurried from the train which brought us from the port into the vast square barracks in which we were suttled off to prison.

In that moment Gordon waved his hand to me and smiled encouragingly, but I knew that the merciless, despite his sanguine temperament, could find no comfort or ground to base hope upon.

About an hour after my arrival I was taken down to an office, where the minister of police sat at the head of a writing table. The only other persons present were Rudersdorf and the old gentleman. Their manner was obsequiously deferential toward their chief, sharp and severe toward me.

With a slight inclination of the head he told me to take a chair, and fixing his dark, penetrating eyes upon me he said:

"Mademoiselle, do you deny that Taras, Prince Dimitri, is your friend?"

"No," I replied proudly, for in the dearest friend I have in the world." These words were spoken in a low tone, so that I saw everything as in a mist, but I breathed them into Rudersdorf's ears, and with the minister's eyes firmly, and with the resolve to keep my emotion down.

"Then you admit," the minister asked, "that your have aided in bringing him here?"

"I have done no such thing. The man you know here is not Taras, but George Gordon. If you are the minister of police you will know that when you see him."

"Admitting that this is George Gordon, why did you aid in bringing him here?"

"To set Taras free after being murdered by your agent, Rudersdorf."

"Is this the first time you have endeavored to save your friends?"

"No; I have balked Kavanagh in two if not three attempts to secure my ruin."

"And you hoped to save Taras a fourth time by substituting George Gordon, to mislead our agents?"

"Yes."

"You thought to throw off the pursuit by making us believe that we had captured Taras?"

"Yes."

"Then what are you so anxious now to make us believe that he is not Taras?"

"Because Kavanagh made me believe that the moment you discovered the mistake Rudersdorf would be banished in disgrace, while a public outcry would compel you to abandon any further effort to remove Taras from England."

"You are candid, at any rate," said the minister, after exchanging a swift glance with Rudersdorf.

"I want you to know the whole truth."

"In that case, will you be good enough to give me the particulars of the attempts made by Mr. Kavanagh to kidnap Taras?"

I narrated the events as simply as I could. When I came to an end, the minister wrote a few lines, handed the paper to Rudersdorf, and rising took up his hat.

"What are you going to do with me?" I asked.

"During the inquiries which must necessarily be made to ascertain the truth of your statement you will be detained. You will be provided with every available comfort, and in consideration of the straightforward manner in which you have given information, if there is any reasonable concession I can make"—

"George Gordon—I want to see him," said I, for I felt the need of a companion.

The chief looked grave then, after giving some instructions to Rudersdorf, he said to me:

"You shall see him tomorrow morning," and with a slight bow left the office.

I was taken back to the cell, and as the door closed with a clang, and I looked around the four bare whitewashed walls, with their one barred window high up, showing but a few lashes of leaden sky, I placed myself where was the corner that had been promised me.

In the evening the warder brought me a bundle of thick serge clothes and a greasy sheepskin coat, telling me that I should have to wear them for my journey, and that I must get up when I was called. Then was the usual intimation I had received that we were to be removed from St. Petersburg. The minister had spoken only of a detention. He had said that I should see Gordon the next morning, but was it only to say "goodby?"

Before it was light the warder entered my cell, and wearing a candle on the shelf which served as a table told me I must be dressed in 10 minutes. In 10 minutes I was dressed in my ill fitting clothes, looking more like a white bear than a human creature in the great sheepskin coat which touched the ground at my feet and was furnished with a hood and a collar band, which left nothing visible of my face except my nose and eyes. A pair of enormous boots lined with sheepskin and great disfigureless gloves of the same kind added still more to the unsightliness of my appearance. The warder brought me a mug of tea and some cried fish and bread, and while I ate my breakfast made up the clothes I had worn into a bundle for me to take with me.

I was taken down into the yard, where, to my great joy, I found Gordon arrayed in a suit similar to my own, by which I concluded that he was to go away also. I think he was us less pleased to see me. He gave me both hands, and we stood there for a few moments, perfectly grateful for "You are going with me?" we said, at last and simultaneously.

"Yes," said he, "though where we are going I can't say."

"Orkutsk, I believe."

"Orkutsk, hey? Well, that's got a sort of outlandish sound about it. But what does that matter? We shall come here again before very long, that's a certainty."

the minister have it pretty straight, I can tell you. Threatened him with The Times and all sorts of punishment."

A sledge was brought into the yard, for the ground was already covered with snow. It was drawn by three horses, and with a bell in the arc over the saddle. Inside there was a lot of baggage and letter bags, for this, I believe, was the mail sledge. The driver arranged it so as to form a comfortable seat under the hood, and gave us a couple of pillows, he himself sitting in front. When we were ready to start, a couple of mounted Cossacks came out.

"This is our bodyguard," said Gordon. "Didn't I promise you that we should be treated like princes? A prince! Wait till I've lit my pipe, and one of us, I know, will be as happy as a king."

The Cossacks, peering in at us, were the queerest expression imaginable. Never before perhaps had they seen an exile indulging out for Orkutsk with such a jovial happy-go-lucky air as Gordon's.

"Five o'clock," said Gordon, looking at his watch as we passed under the lamp which was the entrance of the prison. "They haven't taken a thing from me, though of course I was searched for incriminating papers—not a thing. That's a conviction proof that our detention was merely formal and that we are bound by nothing more than red tape—in fact, I don't feel like a prisoner. Do you, Darcy-Vaux?"

It was indeed hard to realize that we were still in the iron grasp of the police when the Cossacks, drilled into silence, were out of sight. My despondency mingled with the hopeful light which was cast upon me by my friend, and my spirits rose under the exhilarating influences of the journey. The air, though intensely cold, was perfectly still, the stars shone sharp and bright in the sky, the snow was firm, and the horses sped along swiftly to the musical clash of the bells over their necks.

We did not stop until we reached the guardhouse, where the horses were changed. There we had a very good meal, and after that the indispensable cup of tea we started afresh, quite pleased to go on.

"This is something like a journey disgrace enough!" said Gordon as he lit another pipe and nestled up in his corner.

"Yes, if there's nothing worse than this!" said I, but not at all in a tone of misgiving.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

WE MAKE OUR ESCAPE.

It was getting dark when we overtook a train of miserable looking men carrying pelts and clanking chains along the road. About an hour later we reached the stage, where we were to stay for the night.

I had learned much of the horrors of these stations and the loathsome "lazarets" or sleeping places, in which the convicts were herded, and I had seen them in the sketches of paintings exhibited by Taras. It was therefore astonished to find that but in which I passed the night so decent and habitable. It was not overcrowded. There was a rough carpet on the floor, and the only real hardship was the absence of bed and bedding, for we had to sleep on a sloping board and in our clothes.

I was much better off than my companion, who was thrust into a den built to accommodate 250 prisoners, with no less than 170 inmates of all sorts, and the horrors of that night were many, I believe, than he could make light of, for he was extremely reticent upon the subject. All that he said to me was that he had found no room to lie down, and had breathed a little atmosphere of his own by smoking all night.

"However," he said cheerfully, "that's all past, and I shall make up for a sleepless night by a good long snooze this afternoon—if we don't see the end of our journey before."

But we were on by another mail sledge, but with the same guard who had left St. Petersburg with us.

The Cossacks never left us throughout our long journey, which continued without any break, save the nightly halt at a convict station, for three weeks after we had passed through Moscow. Snow fell frequently during this period, without a change in poor Gordon. His spirits seemed to be inexhaustible, his buoyancy, his gayety to be a little forced, his pipe more frequent.

But despite the bitter reflections that would force themselves upon me, I was grateful toward me disguised my own feelings.

Sufficed to the smoke, I reeled and should have fallen, but Gordon, grasping my arm, forced me to bend down—for he dared not open his mouth to speak—and dragged me on. Almost unconsciously I staggered on until at length we got air to breathe and saw the plain stretching out, and all red in the light from the fire, to the dark line of the forest trees.

We waited there until another fall of roof or walls within the palisades caused a further glow in the brightness of the light.

"Now's the time," whispered Gordon, springing to his feet. "I can't see three fellows, nor they us. If this only lasts a couple of minutes, we may get out of their range."

I rose quickly, and greatly restored by the few minutes of rest we spent over the hard snow, haud in haud.

CHAPTER XXXV.

WE MEET WITH A SQUADRON.

Darkness compels us to keep on the outskirts of the forest, for within the obscurity was an impenetrable that we should have had to grope our way from tree to tree, only maybe to find, when light came, that we had been traveling in a circle. The noise of the smoldering kamenas at least indicated the direction we were not to take, and the light of the stars was sufficient to enable us to keep a tolerably straight course. We were cheerful enough as we plodded on. Only, as it began to grow light, we cast apprehensive glances behind us for pursuing Cossacks, but not a speck rose out of the great white plain. The remains of the stage were last to be seen. There were a couple of habitations or living creatures between us and the dark line of far distant forest which bounded the horizon.

"It's odd," said Gordon in a tone of perplexity, after looking about on the snow around us, "it's odd that there are no marks of feet. I saw by the taket on the wall last night that there were 600 and odd in the lazarets, and one would think that some of that number would have taken the path we have chosen. There were but two ways to go."

It was a mystery to me also, but I thought it an advantage, for the majority of the convicts we had passed on the road were looking villains, the number of unshackled prisoners nearly equal to the brutal officers—being very small indeed. Besides this, it seemed to me that the fewer footprints there were in the snow the less were the chances of a single convict being in our direction, as there would certainly be a better chance of making captives in the other. We had a large start, and seeing that into the forest and sat down under a canopy of the snowy branches over the meeting boughs of the great pines.

We were not cold, for there was no wind, and exercised and thoroughly warmed by blood, but we were tired, and already before we suggested the question, "What are we to eat?"

But we said nothing on the subject for some time, fearing to betray our own misgivings. At length Gordon, after looking back at the forest, said:

"Awfully quiet in here, isn't it?"

"I should call it a horrible grim wood to me. Indeed the stillness was, in the true sense of the word, awful.

"Taras told me there were wolves in the forests. Are they good to eat?"

"Well, I've never tried 'em," he answered evasively, concessing whatever disagreeable reflections this question may have suggested, "but one thing is certain, they wouldn't eat us if there were nothing for them to eat. If we could knock over a rabbit now, or even an old crow, we could soon make a fire to cook him, and then we should be right as rain."

He had mechanically filled his pipe and was now about to light it. He stopped, and with his head carefully concealing the small number of vestas that remained in his box. When they were gone, there would be no yet awhile.

"I say, do you think you could smoke a cigarette without a match?" he asked, with a wonderful comfort at all times, but when you're in a hit pinched, you know."

He pulled out his tobacco pouch temptingly. I told him I would rather not try it yet awhile.

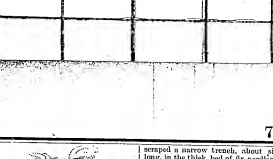
"I think I shall enjoy it more presently," said he, returning the pipe in his pocket.

Then I noticed by the limpness of his mouth as he put that away that his tobacco was nearly all gone.

When we began to feel chilly, we walked on again, keeping under the shelter of the trees, for we dreaded the smoke," said Gordon as we skirted that way.

We waited one breathless minute, and then as a roof fell in, throwing up an oddying column of sparks, which drew off the attention of the warders, we slipped quickly behind them and rushed into the smoke.

We were seen. A voice called to us to stop, and a shot was fired after us. But we were already lost to sight. The smoke, blinded us, and stumbling over the bodies of those who had been trampled to death in the frantic struggle to escape we reached the open gateway.



Stumbling over the bodies of those who had been trampled to death.

Here we found the gates open, and the guard who had left St. Petersburg with us lying dead across the threshold, his head battered in with the butt end of a musket. Gordon declared that it was not yet time to think about changing the watch; so, not unwillingly, but perhaps selfishly, I dropped off asleep.

I awoke a second time to find him still patiently sitting on guard at my feet, but he got down in the same manner and would not permit me to take his place. And when, after a third space of sleep, he allowed me to come out, I saw by the grey light between the trees that the night was past. Then having gained more wood on the fire, and handed his stick over to me with instructions to give him "a crack over the toss" with it if I heard the slightest sounds or detected any movement in the surrounding trees, he crawled into the trench, and in a few minutes was snoring sonorously.

I was thoroughly awake now, and protesting that he could sleep no longer, and that there was nothing to disturb us we reconmenced our onward march.

I have no need to dwell on this part of my history for further testimony to the patient courage, generosity and unceasing kindness of George Gordon is unnecessary, and nothing occurred to break the terrible monotony of our journey through the dreary forest until the fourth day of our escape. In the afternoon of that day we came upon a road cut through the forest, and debouching upon the plain. This discovery threw us into a state of excitement. It was like a vision of water in the desert.

Not a soul was in sight, but there were marks of sledge runners in the snow which had fallen the day before.

"It's not a main road—that is evident by its narrowness," said Gordon, grasping my hand.

"What shall we do?" I asked, trembling violently.

"If it only leads to a town, we're all right. And so one would be as dangerous as to refuse us food, seeing how pinched and done up we are. It's the right road, it leads to a town—why, then, we stand a good chance of being mode prisoners again. What do you say to following it for a while I go on and reconnoiter?"

"No! no! If you go on, I will go with you."

And hope for the best," he added stumbly, pressing my arm to his side and stepping out.

The road seemed as endless and deserted as the forest itself. Then, leaning more heavily on Gordon's arm, I plodded wearily on, with feet that seemed to clog the ground, until my companion, seeing that my strength was well nigh spent, said:

"Do you hear that bell?"

"I thought I had got to sleep and never woke again," I murmured faintly.

"Ah, you'll not say that when we get a load of black bread and vodka before us," he replied, smacking his lips. We cursed for nothing beyond that simple fare.

We made our usual preparations for the night.

"One more," said Gordon, closing his face after taking out a match to light the fire.

We sat down on the windward side of the blazing sticks and began to pick fir cones to pieces, having discovered by accident that some were full of kernels and seeds that were eatable. From this engrossing occupation we were nearly startled by hearing a low laugh, and looking up we saw a man standing near us with a sack slung over one shoulder and a bow and arrow in his right hand.

"Who are you?" cried Gordon, springing to his feet.

"Evan Demremember," the man replied in tolerable English. "You've seen me before—[illegible] better than this."

As he spoke he pushed back his hood and thrust out his chin, showing a red beard, an impish face and a merry twinkling, disproportionately large for the size of his head, but perfectly bald. I recognized him as the man who had stood beside us by the burning kamenas.

"You have been an odd place for your fire," he said, with another chuckle, as he threw down his sack carefully and seated himself on it. "One can see you are novices. An old hand at this sort of thing—one of the large family of Demremembers, for instance—would have taken the precaution to see whether a hollow tree would blow into the road or not before lighting up. But perhaps you are tired of liberty and savine food. Are you?"

"Why do you ask?" Gordon demanded.

"Because your smoke is blowing straight down, and the posthouse is not 500 yards distant. You must have been unknown to the prisoner or shoot any refugee that comes within his reach."

Lots of wood coming in on the Fosston line these days. It is very much cheaper this year than last and cheaper fuel than coal.

January 13th and 14th were bright, beautiful days, warm and balmy as spring time. Such days help wonderfully to while away a cold winter.

O. L. Lawson came in from Fosston Tuesday evening. Speaking of the printing deal, he said: "I consider that an outrage upon the taxpayers of Polk county."

Iver A. Krohn has purchased Fuller's restaurant in the McKinnon block and takes possession in a day or so. It will be remembered that Mr. Krohn started this restaurant a few years ago and made money enough to retire to his farm and run that for several years.

McKenzie belongs to the Columbia club yet he takes Holston's assault upon that institution very quietly. He don't call him into the courts to prove his assertions. Perhaps, for reasons best known to himself, and not many other members of the club, he don't want to hear what Holston might have to say in court.

McKenzie's claim to have had the only legal bid before the board is all balderdash—the veriest rot. He says the JOURNAL'S bonds were not right, insinuating that as one reason why our bid was not accepted. He knows that our bid and our bonds were as good as his own and he also knows that not a single mother's son of that board saw nor even one of the bonds until after the printing contract was awarded. He knows that not one minute of time was spent in considering which of the three bids was for the best interest of the county. He knows that the three commissioners met somewhere outside of the auditor's office and agreed to support the Times before one of them had seen a bid or a bond or say thing about it and yet he has the effrontery to say that the business was honestly attended to.

The stereopticon business at the M. Something less than 1,000 of the personal friends of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. O. The occasion was a very enjoyable one.

Talk about short crops! Why the wheat nint a patchin to a cord of wood that was sent us on subscription that was so extremely short that we could only make ¾ of a cord of it by measure the very best we could do. However, there is one consoling thought about it—it is liable to last, for about half of couslets of logs too big to go into our largest box heating stove and we will bet the price of the wood that no living man can ever reduce it to a proper size with an axe—and to use dynamite (the only thing that ever would phaze it) would be worth more than the first cost of the wood. We don't very often kick and we have seen some extremely tough samples of wood before now, but we must say that this is a little the toughest all 'round wood we ever did encounter —it looks like the buck-logs of the revolutionary fathers.

It is rumored that E. LePage will succeed Postmaster Dawley in due season. Mr. Dawley has been one of the best postmasters Crookston ever had, and it will take a mighty good man to beat him. The Grand Army boys and the janitor's many friends have been hoping that Fred Mix would get the plum—but Grover don't have much time for old soldiers.

The dwellers on Simpson's Wood land addition are wondering who originated the brilliant idea of going to the great expense of grading the streets over there in these hard times. The council committee promises to thoroughly investigate the matter and report on its merits. If they will do that they will find that no one over there wants the work done at present. The streets are good enough for all practical purposes at present, and the idea of adding this burden to the taxes is extremely unwise and absurd. No one seems to know just who did originate the brilliant (?) idea.

JAPANESE CLANSMEN.

Sons Who Died to Avenge Their Fathers. The Forty-seven Ronins.

No crusader of the west, no viking of the north, cherished a higher ideal of loyalty and chivalry than the clansmen of old Japan; no Corsican more ruthlessly handed down a feud from generation to generation or exacted from son and brother the execution of a sterner vendetta. The Saxon man of today triumph in the fact that their own swords have avenged in this generation the defeat inflicted on their forefathers in the year 1,000, by the Todengawa clan. "

Legend and drama recount every day to eager ears the stories of sons who died to avenge their fathers, unaware that they might slay the foeman who had caused the death of their lord. The favorite heroes, well in keeping with estimation the place assigned by us to Robin Hood and his men, are the 47 robbins, a name given to men who have lost their clanship.

Their lord was obliged to commit hara kiri, or felicitel suicide, for having within royal precincts drawn his sword on a noble who had insulted him, and these stanch vassals decided to sacrifice and his young son and visiting cards stuck into little tablets above them as tokens of the respect in which they are held by those who know their story and deplore their doom.

Mr. Black records that at a review of British troops in 1864 at Yokohama a great daimio was watching with interest the maneuvers of their regiments and batteries of artillery stationed there. At the conclusion he was asked to allow the escort of his retainers who had accompanied him to go through their drill and tactics, to which he readily consented.

Turning to Sir Rutherford Alcock, who was inspecting the troops, he promptly said:

"My retinue is small, and their tactics are not worthy of notice after what we have seen, but there is not one man among them who, if I say die, will not unhesitatingly sacrifice his life at my command."—Nineteenth Century.

The Repairs Were Made.

The Rev. Mr. Adams of Leominster was an eccentric character and had no hesitation in speaking his mind, either to congregation or to individuals. He was about to exchange with a neighboring minister, a mild and inoffensive man, who knew the blunliness of his disposition and said to him in advance:

"You will find some panes of glass broken in the pulpit window, and possibly you may suffer from the cold. The cushion, too, is in bad shape, but I beg of you not to say anything to my people about it. They are poor and disinclined to think of repairs."

Before Mr. Adams left home that Sunday morning he filled his pockets rags and took it with him. When he had been in the pulpit a few minutes the draft began to make itself felt, and he deliberately took a handful of rags from his bag and stuffed them into the window. The sermon dwelt upon the duties of congregations toward their ministers, and as soon heonne very sentimated, and brought down both the with tremendous force upon the pulpit cushion. The feathers scattered in every direction, hat passing boly to exclaim, "Why, how these feathers fly!" he proceeded with his discourse.

He had fulfilled his brother minister's request of not addressing the congregation directly on the subject, but all the same he had effected his point. Next Sunday the window and cushions were found to be in excellent repair.—Youth's Companion.

THE GOLDEN SALVE.

HAWAII'S EX-QUEEN WANTS A LARGE AMOUNT OF MONEY.

She Has Abandoned Hope of Getting Back Her Throne, but Will Ask Uncle Sam to Pay Her a Large Sum For His Failure to Restore Her According to Promise—Grounds of the Action.

SAN FRANCISCO Jan. 15.—The Australia brought a statement from a correspondent in Honolulu that ex-Queen Lilinokalani has entirely abandoned all hope of ever regaining the throne of Hawaii, and is now pushing arrangements for bringing a claim against the United States for an immense amount of money. The correspondent says that this information comes from a source which makes it trustworthy; that agents of the ex-queen now in the United States have informed her that American sentiment generally is against her restoration and in favor of the annexation of the islands, and that all further effort on her part to regain her lost position

Will Be Utterly Useless.

It is stated that, acting on this information, and in view of the stubborn stand taken by the provisional government, Lilinokalani has concluded to abandon the struggle to restore former conditions, and will seek pecuniary reward in a claim for heavy damages against the American government. It is understood that her action will be taken upon statements made in her favor by President Cleveland in his message to congress; by Secretary of State Gresham in his letter to President Cleveland, and by Commissioner Blount in the report of his investigations, and upon the further fact that the recognition of the justice of her cause and acknowledging that a wrong has been done her, the United States endeavored to induce the provisional government to surrender in her favor.

QUEEN LIL'S CLAIM.

It Would Have to Be Submitted to Congress for Approval.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The rumor that ex-Queen Lilinokalani is about to bring suit against the United States for a large sum of money, basing her claim for damages on the president's recent Hawaiian message and Secretary Gresham's letter, has created a good deal of interest in official circles. The claim cannot be brought by an individual against the government, and there is no method of procedure through the courts by which the ex-queen could present her claim. The only course which Lilinokalani can pursue is to submit her claim against the United States. This congress would have to approve before the claim could be considered by the court of claims. In fact, the only recourse of the ex-queen is to congress, where, in view of her present unpopularity, she could hardly expect to meet with satisfaction or success.

THE HAWAIIAN PROBLEM.

A Solution Will Soon Be Offered to the House by the Majority.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Chairman Holman of the house committee on foreign affairs and Representative Hooker conferred as to the proposition which would be submitted in congress for the solution of the Hawaiian problem. After the talk Mr. McCreary said:

"The solution to the question will undoubtedly be ready to submit to the house on Jan. 29. Regarding what Holman said: 'I will not present my Hawaiian resolution pending my talks with Mr. McCreary for the members of the foreign affairs committee are acting very fairly in trying to solve the problem. One thing is certain—that the question of restoring Lilinokalani to the throne is for all time abandoned, not only in executive, but in congressional circles. It will never be heard of again."

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Latest Hawaiian Correspondence Sent to Congress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—The president sent a message to congress Saturday on the Hawaiian question. The document contained all the correspondence on the subject not heretofore transmitted, including the latest instructions to Minister Willis and the reply of President Dole declining to entertain the proposition of the president of the United States to surrender in favor of the ex-queen.

DISTRICT COURT.

Doings of the Justice Mill, in Detail, Since Our Last Issue.

The Jury in the Swift-Withers Case Disagree and are Discharged.

Several Other More or Less Important Actions Disposed Of.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 17th.

The case of the State of Minnesota vs Carl Anderson was called. The defendant was charged with selling mortgaged property. Mr. Laughlin of Fisher was the prosecuting witness. Two notes were given for the indebtedness, and a chattel mortgage given to secure the notes. The notes were not in court, and when it came to the matter of the amount due on the notes the counsel for defendant, Mr. Goss man, objected, and the case could not proceed without the notes in evidence, as they were the basis of the debt, and the case was dismissed.

A jury was then called in the case of Sarah Swift vs John Withers. This is an action in replevin. It appears that Mr. Withers was a dealer in horses, having shipped a car load or two from Montana in the fall of 1892. He sold them around through Polk county. In the spring of 1893 he had twelve head left, and of these he sold a pair to Mrs Swift. Early in the spring, it is claimed, Withers bargained to sell the remaining ten to the plaintiff for $350, and Mr. Swift was to dispose of them, taking cash and approved notes, and turn the same over to Mr. Withers. The plaintiff, it is further claimed, if she could not dispose of them, was to give her note for them. The defendant claims that he was to sell them to plaintiff for the amount if she would secure her by a mortgage on her farm. The horses were brought up from Fertile to Mrs. Swift. Defendant claims she refused to secure the payment for them as desired, and the bargain was off. The horses and other property belonging to Mr. Swift had been taken from him under that claim on the chattel mortgage sale. He needed horses to put in his spring crop. Defendant claims he was to stay and sell what horses he could, and Swift was to use some of them for the cost of his board and keep for the horses. He traded and sold six of the horses, getting for them money, oxen, cows and sheep. Some time in the spring he drove off this stock and the unsold horses. Now Mrs. Swift brings suit to recover possession of this stock under the claim that she was the owner, having purchased the horses for which they were exchanged. On Thursday morning the case was summed up and given to the jury. After being out all day they were unable to agree and were discharged by the court. E. M. Stanton for plaintiff, and Ed. George for defendant.

THURSDAY.

Another jury was called for the consideration of the case of Catherine Snelling vs John McLennan. L. E. Goss man for plaintiff and Ed George for defendant. This action is brought by plaintiff for $756 for board for her father and mother whom she kept from the fall of 1888 sometime in '93. Plaintiff claims that her father agreed to pay her $8 per month after he came there. The defendant claims he did not agree to pay anything for his and his wife's board. The jury handed in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $250.

Hervier Tessier vs Town of Lake Pleasant was next called. The plaintiff sues the town for keeping one Miss Arnaeus DeMars whom he claims was public charge and the town should pay the expense. The point at issue was whether she had resided in the town of Lake Pleasant one year prior to her dependance. She went to the house of the plaintiff on August 12, '91 and considered that her home thereafter, her trunk and little wordly possessions were also at the house of the plaintiff. She did some work with different peoples at different times after that. Early in the spring of '92 she became unable to do further work and was sick for eleven months at the house of plaintiff after that time. She is now and has been for some time past at county hospital. Plaintiff sues for $250. A. R. Holston counsel for plaintiff and Wm. Watts counsel for defendant. The case was given the jury just before adjournlaw, and Friday morning returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $189.

FRIDAY.

In the case of Bank of Fosston vs Ludvig Olson, argued before the court a day or so ago, the court reversed the judgment of the court below, and held that the cashier of the bank is the proper officer to loan the money of the bank and the bank is liable for his acts.

A jury was next called in the case of James P. Marcum vs Polk county. Wm. Watts counsel for plaintiff and A. R. Holston for the defendant. The plaintiff appeals from the decision of the appraisers in estimating the damage to his farm by reason of the drainage ditch which runs along the western edge of his farm taking about four and one-fifth acres of his land. The damages awarded him by the appraisers was $160. The plaintiff claims $400 damage. The case occupied all the day up to five o'clock when it was given the jury and on Saturday morning a verdict was returned in favor of the plaintiff assessing his damages at $336.

A motion to dismiss was argued in the of J. P. Johnson & Co. vs Otis J. Vaule. The plaintiff was allowed to amend his complaint and the case went over to the May term; plaintiff paying five dollars cost.

SATURDAY.

Fontaine & Anglin vs City of Crookston is an action wherein the plaintiff sues to recover for the use of an engineused by the defendant in pumping water and sewerage out of the sewer on Third street next to the Great Northern R. R. tracks during the time of the cave-in of the sewer. The cause was used day and night between December 10th 1892 and March 17th, 1893. Plaintiff sued for $294 and got a verdict of $275.

The case of Victor Robinson as assignee of Mast, Buford & Burwell Co. vs W. G. Hunt and John S. Klug was next called. A. A. Miller for plaintiff and Wm. Watts for defendant. This action was brought to recover on a promissory note for about $200. Action by attachment on the goods of Huggard, Larson & Co. for a threshing outfit. The defense was that the engine, being a second-hand one, was not a good one, and that the note of was transferred to the plaintiff after maturity. The evidence showed that it was transferred to the plaintiff, and that the engine was used all one fall and part of the following season. A verdict was directed for plaintiff in the sum of $211.76.

M. Monson vs J. W. Galloway et al, H. Steenerson for plaintiff, and Wm. Watts for defendant. The plaintiff brings suit against Board of Supervisors in the town of Rosebud to vacate a road along the line of plaintiff's property, and to recover damages for injury to his crops by reason of the fence being torn up and thrown on his wheat field. On Monday morning a verdict was given in favor of defendant.

MONDAY.

Ludvig Olson vs. M. P. Losey is an action in replevin to recover ownership of one car. Later plaintiff sued under chattel mortgage. Plaintiff set up the claim that the mortgage was void for usury. Not having pleaded usury he was not allowed to introduce evidence on that point, and the case was continued to the May term, with twenty days to answer his complaint. Os Vaule for plaintiff and H. Steenerson for defendant.

The case of J. P. Johnson vs. Ole J. Vollnal, appeal from justice court, was taken up next. This is an action of account. The plaintiff is a merchant at Mentosh. He sold goods to defendant. Defendant gave a note against him for something like $60. Defendant paid plaintiff $25.75 and agreed to endorse the balance of his account on the note and settle up. Defendant afterward sold the note and plaintiff had to pay it in full. He brings this action to recover. A verdict was directed in favor of plaintiff for $58.18.

The cases of Merchants' National bank of Grand Forks, vs. J. E. Sullivan, were continued by defendant paying five dollars in each case.

The case of Millers and Manufacturers Insurance company vs. Gilbert Olson, Appeal from lower court. Plaintiff moved to dismiss the appeal and motion granted. Appeal dismissed and judgment of court below sustained.

TUESDAY.

The case of Miller & Manufacturers Insurance Co. vs Fred Edenholm was called. Appeal from justice court by defendant. The appeal was dismissed by appellant.

John Peterson vs B. A. Wahl was the next in order. Neither plaintiff nor defendant were present. Mr. Vaule for the defendant moved dismissal. Mr. Holston, counsel for plaintiff, failing to show sufficient cause for continuance, as he proved, the case was dismissed without prejudice.

WEDNESDAY.

The case of James Morrissey vs Chas. H. Smke was taken up. A. A. Miller for plaintiff and Ed George for defendant. This action was brought by plaintiff to recover $160 yet unpaid on work done by him on the patent car coupler Mr. Smke was then having made at plaintiff's shop. Defendant claims the charge outrageous and refused to pay the bill.

A CORRECTION.

In the case of Stiepstad vs. G. N. Railway, reported in our last issue, the name of A. C. Wilkinson should have appeared as counsel for defendant. The railroad company sent a Mr. Mason up to assist Mr. Wilkinson, but they might have saved themselves the trouble, as Mr. Wilkinson had already prepared a defense, and was amply able to take care of the case.

Important to Shippers.

State Weighmaster J. G. McGrew requests the JOURNAL to call the attention of shippers to sec. 6, chapter 29, General Laws of 1893. If shippers will comply with the provisions of this law it will save much trouble in trading shortages when they occur, for the shipper's card will show what he claims to have put in the car, and if on its arrival it is found to have much less, as is sometimes the case, the supervising weigher will call attention of a second party to the apparent shortage, then if the shipper can prove that he shipped the amount he claims, it will show that the loss occurred between the elevator shipped from and the terminal station. The clause referred to is evidently the following: "Shippers must attach cards on the doors of all cars shipped by them giving the number and initials of each car, date of shipment and exact weight of grain in such car."

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

A Fire in Gervais' Store Does Several Thousand Dollars Damage.

Frank Hertz Leases the Opera House and Commences Renovating.

Another Fire.

About four o'clock on Saturday afternoon, discovered, by patrolman John Kyle, in the basement of Gervais & Gervais nummouth dry goods store in the Odd Fellow's block. The department was soon on deck and a little lively effort soon quenched the flames and saved the building. The fire evidently caught in a pile of combustible material down in cellar in the rear of the store, it is thought from ashes thrown from an upper window. The fire worked up and around a window-casing, almost totally destroying it and burning some new carpets and other material adjacent. The flooring underneath and the floor joists were burned considerably, but the damage to building and stock was fully covered by insurance.

Under New Management.

Crookston theatre goers will be pleased to learn that Mr. Frank Hertz has leased the Grand Opera house, and will personally manage that institution for the coming year —and perhaps longer. He has already had the house given a much needed cleaning, and when opened again it will be as clean as a pin. Being an inveterate theatre-goer, Mr. Hertz is well qualified to judge of the character of most of the theatrical companies traveling this way, and he will book nothing but first-class shows. As he expressed it: "When I call the people I have got a first-class attraction it will be first-class. I did not take the house with the expectation of making money out of it, but I want to see it put up on where it ought to be."

Mr. Hertz has already demonstrated his ability as a business man, and will undoubtedly conduct the opera house on business principles.

Preaching Temperance.

Rev. R. H. Battey, in addition to his missionary work in the northern part of the state, is devoting considerable of his time to the cause of temperance just at present. On Monday of last week he gave a lecture and organized a Good Templars lodge at Mentosh, and on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday he delivered three lectures at Fertile, and on Friday organized a lodge at that place, with a membership of thirty-eight. He has prepared a series of lectures which appeal to the pocketbooks rather than the sentiments of the people, and he finds that in these times this is the most effective way of dealing with the temperance question. The Fertile people were very much interested, and for three nights they filled the Congregational church to overflowing to listen to the reverend gentleman's discourses. This week he lectures at Argyle on Tuesday evening, Northcote on Wednesday and Hallock on Thursday.

Changed Hands.

J. V. E. Wyatt has disposed of his undertaking establishment to G. S. Chesterman, who for the past year has been engaged with R. G. Woodham. Mr. Chesterman will continue the business in the present location on Broadway, and will keep on hand a supply of coffins, picture-framing material, etc.

Mr. Wyatt has not yet decided what he will do beyond making collections and straightening up his affairs.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Wesday, Jan. 16.

The bill to repeal the federal election laws was taken up in the senate. Senator Palmer opened the discussion in an argument in favor of the bill.

Among the amendments to the tariff bill adopted by the house is one making lumber free only to those countries which admit our lumber free.

Several minor amendments to the Wilson bill were agreed to by the house, the most important being that to increase the duty on condensed milk to 2 cents a pound.

Almost the entire afternoon was spent in discussing the date upon which free wool and the corresponding reduction on woolen goods should go into effect. No conclusion was reached.

Wednesday, Jan. 17.

Two hours time was consumed in discussing of the federal elections bill in the senate.

The senate rejected the nomination of J. Scott Harrison, brother of the ex-president for surveyor of customs at Kansas City.

The house has decided to allow free entry in bond of machinery and materials used in the construction of ships built for foreign account.

An amendment by Mr. Burrows provoked considerable discussion. It substitutes the print wool schedule for that proposed by the Wilson bill.

The house has decided to allow free entry in bond of machinery and materials used in the construction of ships built for foreign account.

An amendment by Mr. Burrows provoked considerable discussion. It substitutes the print wool schedule for that proposed by the Wilson bill.

The ways and means committee suffered a defeat in the house. The amendment naming Aug. 1 as the date at which the wool schedule of the Wilson bill shall go into effect was defeated and in its place it was voted that it take effect immediately upon passage of the bill.

Thursday, Jan. 18.

Mr. Walthall, senator from Mississippi, has resigned on account of ill health.

The senate passed a bill appropriating $50,000 for a monument to General Stark.

Several resolutions condemning Secretary Carlisle's action in issuing bonds, were introduced in the senate.

Almost the entire day in the house was spent in continuation of the debate on Mr. Burrows' amendment to restore the existing duties on wool, with the result of its defeat by a strict party vote. About an hour before the recess Mr. Johnson, the Ohio free trader and single taxer, offered his amendment to place ralls on the free list. This led to what will generally prove to be one of the most interesting discussions of the present tariff debate.

Friday, Jan. 19.

The senate was not in session.

In the house, argument between Mr. Johnson and Mr. Dalzell over the proposition to put steel rails on the free list, was continued during the day. When the vote came the amendment was defeated, but only about 40 Democrats voted with their colleagues of the committee, while 70 voted with Johnson and the radicals.

Saturday Jan. 20.

The senate was in session.

The president vetoed the New York and New Jersey bridge bill.

The house refused to restore the present agricultural schedule in place of the one provided in the Wilson bill.

The house listened with great attention to the reading of the last Hawaiian correspondence. The letters of President Dole evoked Republican applause, while those of Mr. Willis were cheered by the Democrats.

Monday, Jan. 22.

The senate debated Mr. Call's civil service resolution, and the resolution of Senator Peffer questioning Carlisle's authority to issue bonds.

The president sent to the senate the nomination of Wheeler H. Peckham to be justice of the supreme court. Senator Hill will oppose his confirmation. Peckham is a "anti-snapper."

The sugar schedule of the Wilson bill occupied the entire day in the house. Many amendments were offered and debated and it was 4:30 p. m. when the voting began. When the final vote was taken it was difficult to tell just what the effect would be, but as nearly as could be told the sugar bounty and duty were entirely abolished. The contention was so great that it was decided best for the committee to rise and find out over night just where they were at.

A Tariff Commission.

The suggestion comes from Newark, N. J., that the tariff be taken out of politics. This is not a new idea, but it now assumes for the first time some practical form, with an outline for procedure by Mr. Samuel R. Alvord, who for the full and proper advocacy of his suggestions has published in this week the first number of a weekly paper called The Tariff Commission.

As the name of the paper implies, the idea of Mr. Archer is that the tariff of the United States be under the entire control of a commission of 15 members. The commission, it is suggested, should be divided into three parts of five members each, one part to represent the government, one to represent labor, and the third to represent the manufacturing and commercial interests of the country.

Our new tariff contemporary explains its ideas very completely, and we advise all our readers to send for a copy of the first number. The subject is one fraught with the utmost importance. There can be no doubt that the establishment of a permanent protective tariff, that would not be subject to continual strife by forcing at the hands of incompetent malefactors, would tend to the progress and advancement of the American nation to a degree that we have hitherto never experienced. Business could be established permanently and continue in an even course irrespective of politics and the fear of what may be the result of our periodical congressional elections. Such can be said in favor of the project, which should not be lightly cast aside.

One of the Best.

"The best compliment I ever had," said a well known lawyer the other day, "was paid by an old lady in an adjoining town, where I once went to take part in a Fourth of July celebration. I was a young man and always prided myself of never using a set speech. That day I was on the programme to read the Declaration of Independence, and I put all the power I had into the line.

"When the exercises were over, an old lady, who was present in her finest, came up to me and said, 'That is one of the best declarations of independence I ever heard. You must have spent a powerful long time writing it.'"—Philadelphia Call.

As Seen Through Window Glass.

Speaking of the terrible condition of labor, Mr. John P. Eberhart, president of the Window Glass Workers' assembly, No. 300, K. of L., writes that the bad conditions seem to grow worse and adds that "I doubt not they will continue to do so unless we succeed in keeping Wilson's reductions and cowardly makeshift from the statute books. May God help the poor this winter, for if the timbers keep on nothing of human nobility can avert unheard of suffering, and no man can see what direful consequences may ensue. We are in the toils of the enemies of the people, and it seems that men in such positions as mine will have all they can do to try to manage the work of keeping the souls and bodies of the unemployed together until they may have an opportunity at the polls to do right what they did wrong a little over a year ago."

KING OF NO KINGDOM.

THE ROMANTIC LIFE OF MAHARAJAH DHULEEP SINGH.

His People Conquered by the British, He Removed to England With an Allowance. Tried to Stir Up the Sikhs Again, but Was Nipped and Forgiven by the Queen.

A decade ago Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, who died in Paris recently, was a well known figure in London, whose photograph was on sale in the shop windows. He was born in 1838, the son of Runjeet Singh, "the lion of the Punjab," that doughty East Indian sovereign who was the founder of the Sikh kingdom and the cause of so much trouble to England. There have been two Sikh wars in the last half century in which the relatives of Dhuleep Singh figured. The first was in 1846, when a Sikh army of 60,000 men invaded the queen's Indian empire and fought four pitched battles, the final result being the retreat of the invaders across the Sutlej and the surrender of Lahore to the British. By the terms of the peace Dhuleep Singh, the infant son of Ranjeet, was recognized as rajah.

The second Sikh war broke out in 1848, but it proved to be short lived, the British forces under Lord Gough succeeding in destroying the Sikh army and in annexing Punjab to the queen's possessions. As a result of this way young Dhuleep Singh received an allowance of £50,000 from his conquerors.

He, with his mother, moved to England, became a Christian, and on his estate in Suffolk cultivated the hobbits of an English gentlemen. He was an intimate friend of the Prince of Wales, who used annually to spend part of the shooting season at Dhuleep's country home.

The maharajah's first wife was a little Syrian maid whom he met in Cairo in 1864, when on his way back from Bombay, where he had gone to take back to its native soil the body of his mother that it might be there cremated. The muharnee died in 1887, and a couple of years later—in 1889—he married in Paris Miss Ada Douglas Wetherill.

Dhuleep watched closely the advances of Russia into Asia, and when he thought the proper time had come he renounced Christianity and issued a manifesto to the Sikh nation claiming the throne of his father. But his renunciation of the creed of Baba Nanuk and his suspected illegitimate birth—it was asserted by the Sikhs themselves that he was the son of his mother through an intrigue with one of the rajah's water carriers—had long since estranged the feelings of the people, and if it had been possible to create a Sikh rebellion in the Land of the five Rivers there were other princes better able than this maharajah to lead such an enterprise.

The British made short work of his pretensions. He was traveling with leisurely dignity on his great mission in a F. & O. steamer, when at Aden he was informed that a return passage had been secured for him, and that he would not be permitted to land in India. A Sikh rebellion would have been a serious matter for England, for never were the British forces more sorely fought than on the battlefields of Moolan, Chillianwallah and Ghuznee.

There were at that time about 10 regiments of Sikhs in the Indian army, acknowledged by British officers to be the finest in the service, and in most of the Punjab regiments there was a very large proportion of Sikh soldiers.

After his abortive attempt to stir up the Sikhs into rebellion against British rule, Dhuleep went to France, thinking to enlist the sympathy of the czar in his behalf, but his greeting was not overwarm. So the king without a country established himself in cosmopolitan Paris, where he lived up to the time of his death. Life on the continent seemed to unsettle somewhat the domestic morals of this oriental Christian, and an hereditary predisposition to polygamy asserted itself. The maharajah recently expressed deep regret for the course of hostility which he had pursued toward England, and her majesty, by the advice of her ministers, was graciously pleased to accord her pardon to him.

General Dick Taylor of Louisiana used to tell a story of an encounter with the Dhuleep. While he was staying in 1871 at Nottingham with the Prince of Wales, the maharajah was of the party. One morning Taylor arose early and strolled out into the grounds to a small summer house in which there was a Hindoo idol brought back from India by the prince. As he came near he saw some one, who proved to be Dhuleep, standing in front of the idol executing certain movements, evidently of worship. The truth probably is that Singh never had abandoned the true faith of his fathers.

The religion of the Sikhs was founded by Nanuk, who died A. D. 1538, and who left for the guidance of his followers an inspired volame hearing the very unexphonious title of the "Granth." This book is held in great reverence and is carried every morning in solemn state to the Golden Temple of Immortality at Amritsir, where it is venerated by some 5,000,000 or 4,000,000 of people. When Europeans visit the temple, they are required to remove their shoes. An exception, however, was made in the case of the Prince of Wales.

The tomb of Runjeet Singh, the father of Dhuleep, is at Lahore, the capital of the province of Punjab. It is a white structure, with a dome and five minarets. Runjeet's mausoleum is in the center of the building, under the dome. On the top of the tomb is a white rose surrounded by five white lilies carved in stone. The white rose is in memory of the great rajah, and the lilies that of his five wives, who threw themselves on his funeral pyre. The mother of Dhuleep Singh declined the honor of being burned alive.—New York Times.

SUCCESSFUL IN POLITICS.

Mrs. Day Has Twice Been Elected State Librarian of Kentucky.

Mrs. Mary Brown Day is a plucky little woman who not only believes that there is room for women in politics, but who has demonstrated that there is also room for woman in the office. Completed at the disposal of victors in political battles. She has just been for the second time elected state librarian of Kentucky by the legislature. Mrs. Day is a slight, delicate appearing woman, but has shown great energy and shrewdness in pushing her canvas for the position and has twice been victorious in the face of well organized opposition. She is a descendant of the Russells, one of the pioneer families of the state, and her father, Captain John W. Russell, held positions of trust under President William Henry Harrison. Mrs. Day was educated at Frankfort and New York, and some 14 years ago became the wife of W. B. Day, a Chicago newspaper man. Her husband died a year later, and she was compelled to support herself. She returned to the old Russell farm near Frankfort, which her ancestors settled nearly a century ago, and soon became a very successful farmer. The rewards of farming were hardly sufficient for her needs, however, and she turned her attention to political life.

As she had an army of relatives who possessed influences and another army of friends throughout the state, she thought the office of state librarian was about what she wanted and announced herself a candidate in 1888. Sickness at home prevented her from actively looking after her canvass, and she was beaten. In 1890 she was prepared more thoroughly for the struggle in the legislature, and success crowned her efforts. At the recent election she was again a candidate, and although four other ladies with very strong backing swept the race against her she succeeded in carrying the day after six exciting ballots had been taken. She attends thoroughly to business, never forgets to draw her salary and is in many other respects a model state librarian.

SIDE WHISKERS AND MAIL MIXED.

How the Picture Letter Craze Operated on Washington Hesing and P. B. Armour.

Two distinguished citizens of Chicago —Philip D. Armour, the pirate porker's Nemesis, and Washington Hesing, editor, politician and postmaster—have each child since many superfluous hairs and scars mixed, whether the wind blows or not. There is ordinarily no connecting link or affinity between such distinguished ornaments and the regular Chicago mail delivery, but as some original New Yorker has begun the practice of sending letters to the World's fair city bearing no other address than the picture of a fat man with luxurious "lace curtains" flowing from his cheeks, and as both Messrs. Hesing and Armour are naturally equipped and look somewhat alike, the postmen of the western metropolis are so puzzled that they are in the verge of parcels.

The crank is doubtless the same man who caused an epidemic of suicide in the postal service a few years ago by directing a letter to a number on Lasted Flint street, Hub of the Universe, when he meant it for Milk street, Boston. The letter got there all right, and now he has gone into the picture business and is pressing the button and letting Chicago postmen do the rest. The first picture letter sent to Chicago was that of a florid gentleman with triangular side whiskers truly and wonderfully trimmed, and the employees of the Chicago office, who were naturally keeping well posted on the situation, at once recognized the picture as that of Washington Hesing, who was soon to rule over them as postmaster. A postman was dispatched in hot haste to Mr. Hesing's office, and the prospective postmaster was filled at once with pardonable pride over the efficiency of the postoffice force and the widespread fame of his whiskers.

The next day, however, when the same postman brought him another side whisker pictured letter, he felt strongly moved to tear his own barnsides with rage, for from the manner in which the whiskers had been worn off the top of the head Mr. Hesing was sure that the picture was meant to represent Mr. Armour and not himself. The whiskers, too, were not near so bushy, spreading, luxuriant and well blocked out as his own, and the budding postmaster felt something ought to be done in a postoffice where the employees could not tell Hesing whiskers from Armour whiskers at a glance. As Mr. Hesing has been Chicago's postmaster since Jan. 1, every employee has doubtless become a whisker expert by this time.

Where They Drew the Line.

At a recent ball in a Welsh mining town a chalk line was drawn along the center of the room, and beyond this line no tradesman was allowed to dance. Banklerks, solicitors and their select friends held one end of the room, while tradesmen and their sisters and sweethearts were rigidly confined to the other end.

GOOD INDIAN CROW DOG.

His Escape and Return After He Had Been Sentenced to Death.

Judge A. J. Plowman of Deadwood, S. D., attained national renown in 1888 when he defended Crow Dog for the murder of Spotted Tail. The memory of Mr. Plowman's plucky legal fight, in which he carried that celebrated case to the United States supreme court and secured the acquittal of his red skinned client when the hangman's noose was about to tighten around the neck of the condemned prisoner, still lives in the minds of the legal fraternity throughout the west.

In speaking of the matter Judge Plowman related an incident of the trial which has never before appeared in public print.

"After Crow Dog had been sentenced to be hanged," said his eminent jurist, "I went to Washington to lay the case before the supreme court of the United States. I instituted habeas corpus proceedings to secure his release on the question of jurisdiction. While in the nation's capital I was surprised to receive a telegram announcing that Crow Dog had escaped from prison. I returned to the reservation where I had completed my business at Washington, and then I learned for the first time the cause which prompted the famous Indian to escape. It seems that he was walking in the corridor of the jail one day when a half breed told him that he would surely pay the penalty of his crime and that the supreme court would not interfere. This caused Crow Dog some uneasiness. He was quick to act. He watched his opportunity to escape and did so. That stoical Sioux, who had the reputation of being a man with a heart of marble, deliberately struck out on foot over 200 miles of country to the reservation. Subsequently he voluntarily returned and gave himself up, with the expectation of going on the scaffold. In response to the question why he made the trip and returned so soon, he replied that he did not want to die without seeing his squaw and papoose once more.

"Events proved that he spent one day at his hogan bidding his family what he regarded as a last farewell, and then, with a wave of his dusky hand, he mounted a pony on his return trip to the jail from which he escaped. Crow Dog is now on the reservation, hale and hearty. He is following the pipe of peace and has no desire to wage warfare on the government. He is a good Indian."—Omaha Bee.

Early Ideas About Hair.

All the ancient philosophers held curious ideas respecting the growth, functions, structure, etc., of the hair and many superstitious customs grew out these old opinions. The early writers on the makeup of the human body almost invariably refer to the hair as being an excrement fed on substances similar to itself. They supposed that it generated in the fuliginous vapors of the blood; was exhaled by the heat of the body, becoming firm and fibrous upon being exposed to the air, and was the fluid of the spider web ideas. In these days every ideal respecting the growth and character of hair is changed. It is now agreed that every hair properly and truly lives and receives its nutriment from the body. True, they take upon themselves the nature of parasitic plants; they grow as vegetation does, but yet such, as to have a distinct life; and economy. That they derive their existence from the juices of the body there is no doubt, but that food is not taken from the nutritious juices, for we know that hair will thrive even though the body starve or be wasted by disease, or even after the animal life has ceased to exist in the flesh or skin to which they are attached.—Chicago Tribune.

Insoluble Azo Colors.

The use of the insoluble azo colors, which are produced when an amine is diazotized and combined with naphthol, is said to have been patented in France for producing designs on cotton fibers by printing, the method adopted being the same as is now used in printing with the mineral colors. As an example the production of a red is instanced, this being obtained by printing on a color made with 400 grams soda ash, 100 grams of the color lake made from para-nitraniline and tetanaphthol, 80 grams gum water, 140 grams water, neutralizer, one in one, and 70 grams neutral chromate of soda. On the printing process being accomplished the goods are dried and steamed and then passed into a bath containing 50 grams oxalic acid and 50 grams sulphuric acid to each liter, the tissues being afterward well washed in water.—New York San.

Restaurant's Capture.

The notorious Corsican bandit, Bastanzi, was a man of considerable erudition, had been educated at Pisa, knew Latin and had belonged to the medical profession. On one occasion he was going to Sartene on a vessel which stopped at Ajaccio. Knowing that the gendarmes were after him, he did not attempt to land, but as he had a fine voice and could play the guitar began to beguile the time of waiting he got out his instrument and began to sing and play. A fisherman in his port recognized the voice and likewise remembered the song. He went and informed the authorities, and it was thus through his love of music that Bastanzi was arrested. "I saw him land," says M. Levis. "The handcuffs were on his wrists, and the guitar was slung round his neck."—Contemporary Review.

Easily Answered.

"The subject for discussion at the next meeting of the Village Debating society is 'What Is Truth?'"

"Indeed! Well, that is a question that should be easily answered."

"I'm not of your opinion. What is truth?"

"Truth is what two persons speak when they fall out with each other."—London Tit-Bits.

Tariff For Revenue Times.

During the depression brought about by the free trade period of 1893, the whole country went into liquidation; bank loans and discounts fell off more than one-half; the money loss to the country was not less than $1,000,000,000, to say nothing of the tremendous strain upon the moral sense of the people. All prices fell off ruinously; production was greatly diminished, and in many decent homes practically, hundreds of thousands of workmen were idle, with no hope of employment, and their families suffering from want. Our farmers were without mark.ts; their products rotted in their barns; their lands, teeming with rich harvests, were sold by the sheriff for debts and taxes. The tariff which robbed our industries of protection failed to supply the government with necessary revenues; the national treasury, in consequence, was bankrupt and the credit of the nation very low. In the first six years after 1884 the revenue fell off 35 per cent, and the government was obliged to borrow money at high rates of interest to pay current expenses.

A VALUABLE VOLUME.

Received by the Minnesota State Historical Society.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 22.—The Historical society has received a very important and valuable volume from the quartermaster general of the United States army. It gives all of the laws, rules and regulations relating to the uniforms of all soldiers who served in the Continental or the United States army from the inception of the Revolution until the present time. Plates in water colors further illustrate the subject, bringing before the eye the colors and styles of the suits worn by the old Continentals, officers and men, the minute men, the volunteers, independent and militia companies of that time, and the regulars of all branches and all times during and since the revolution. The illustrations of general and staff uniforms are portraits of noted soldiers of the times they cover, making a volume that will grow in value with time.

A MEMORY OF LOIS.

The day when Lois walked with me
September skies were blue,
The woodbine on the wayside wall
Had faced the autumn sun.

In gown of changing green and rose,
With many sleeves of white,
With sash in bows and flowing folds
And bodice trim and tight.

Her low combed hair was parted in the shade
Of fallen chestnut burrs.
The checks of mellow autumn hues
Are not more ripe than hers.

It seemed the mushrooms showed their caps
To win her eyes of brown,
And for one look into their depths
The orchard boughs bent down.

A blossom of the early fall
That later days would chill—
Dear girl, somewhere those eyes must rest
Yet!

A gleam of summer still.

The rank weeds choke the orchard way
Where once we went and came,
And mosses make the marble gray
That long has borne her name.

But with each still September day,
As Lois walked with me,
She fills before my vision now,
A happy memory.

Non-pull-out

is an arbitrary word used to designate the only bow (ring) which cannot be pulled off the watch.

Here's the idea

The bow has a groove on each end. A collar runs down inside the bow and when the bow is firmly locked in place by the pin, so that it cannot be pulled or twisted off.

It positively prevents the loss of the watch by theft, and avoids injury to it from dropping.

IT CAN ONLY BE HAD with Jas. Boss Filled or other watch cases bearing this trade mark.

All watch dealers sell them without extra cost. A watch case opener will be sent free to any one by the manufacturers.

PROBATE NOTICE.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk—ss. In Probate Court.

In the matter of the guardianship of the estate of Isabella Nix and Ava Nix, minors.

On reading and filing the petition of Isobelth Nix and Ava Nix, representing, among other things, that they are minors, residents of said county and state, and that they are under the age of fourteen (14) years, and are without guardian that they have estate within said county of Polk and state of Minnesota; and praying that letters of guardianship of said estate may be to John C. Judge, of Minneapolis, Minnesota, granted. And it appearing to the satisfaction of this court that Thomas Nix, of Tell City, Indiana, is the next of kin and sole surviving relatives of said minors, and is over the age of twenty-one years.

It is ordered, that said petition be heard and a full examination had thereon before this court at a special term thereof to be held at the probate office in the city of Crookston, in said county of Polk, on Monday, the 5th day of February, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. in the Probate Office in the city of Crookston of said county.

Ordered further, that notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, in said county of Polk and by delivering a copy of this order to the said Thomas Nix.

Dated at Crookston, Minnesota, the 30th day of December, A. D. 1893.

By the Court, C. M. Brown,
Judge of Probate.

MYSTERIES!

The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional research and study in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact it is not generally known that the seat of life is located in the spinal cord, and that the special function of the brain is to receive impressions and transmit orders to all parts of the body through the nervous system. Hence the importance of keeping the nerves full of nerve force, for when the supply is exhausted then a serious injury to the spinal cord will cause paralysis of the body below the injured point, because the nerve force is prevented by the injury from reaching the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how important the element of the nerve centers will be in the arrangement of the various organs which they control.

Two-thirds of chronic diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers at the base of the brain, and from a derangement primarily originating in the organ itself. The great statistics of statistics in small doses diseases in that they treat the organ and not the cause of the nerves which are the cause of the trouble.

WOMANKIND.

FOR WOMEN AND HOME.

This well-known journal, a union of four leading women's papers, has won its fame because it deals with what really interests the women of America. Fashions from the standpoint of good taste and economy. Fiction of a pure and helpful kind. Music and Art suitable for non-professional tastes. Household hints written by practical women. Suggestions and aids for self-supporting women. It is a paper for women, by women, and its writers are among the most noted authors. Every line is original, every engraving a gem.

It is a paper of to-day without espousing the great questions of religion, politics and temperance, it gives all the news regnvidlng them. It is universally quoted by the press because its views and articles are bright and unique Send to Springfield, Ohio, for a sample copy. Formerly $1.00, it is now but 50 cents a year. It is said that "Reed has not yet decided whether he will run for re-election or not." That's where Reed differs from his constituents. They have already decided that he will—not.

The Tribune fired off its big gun too previously in its efforts to inaugurate the county seat war. It will prove a boomerang, and will not even leave him an empty congressional nomination.

The Little Falls Transcript comes out with a boom edition all the same as though Fuller hadn't just lost the fat post-office at that place. The Transcript has ever been a good paper, fully alive to the best interests of its city and county.

An exchange says that Donnelly is amenable to prosecution under the game law for slaughtering fish out of season. Oh no, that wouldn't do at all, for all you could oblige him to do would be to restore the game to the state.

The East Grand Forks Review uses the printing award as an argument for county division. Can't see how that would help you any, D. P. R., as you would take one of the commissioners along with you, and besides you would always have Duffy with you.

It is said by those on the inner circle that Senator E. E. Lommen has the call on the nomination for congress. This is surely to annihilate, for Holston has been making up faces for two years in the vain hope of securing that nomination for himself.

The new democratic postmaster at Little Falls took the liberty to move the postoffice without the advice or consent of his constituents and a great howl went up thereat—but Peter holds the fort, gloriously indifferent to the wishes of the people. And yet people were howling for a "change" last fall.

Congressman Boen has a scheme for tariff reform—a sort of a double-header that he thinks would prove a panacea for all the woes that (he says) we suffer. So far as any one knows, the scheme is about as practical as his shiekwater navigation business.

If the democratic administration would only decide what it wants to do and do it it would be better for the business interests of the country. As it is they decide on one thing one day and undo it the next, which wishy-washy policy keeps business paralyzed.

If the Wilson bill should pass our farmers, who have barley to sell will see a point that perhaps they have not thought of before and will (if they never did before) appreciate what the republican policy means. It takes a bitter experience to teach some people, but object lessons of this kind will generally convince the most obtuse intellects. We hope, however, that they will not be obliged to learn their lessons in this way.

The populist papers are clamoring for the nomination of S. M. Owen for governor and that is where they show their inconsistency, as Mr. Owen is not in sympathy with their platform, being a man of too good common sense to endorse all its fallacies. To be consistent with their doctrines they should take such a man as Donnelly or Peck, but Donnelly sees defeat already and Peck they have driven from the state. Owen would do to head an independent movement, but as a populist—never.

The Wilson bill, since it was framed in committee is said to have been so emasculated that even its originator does not know it any more. There is said to be great opposition to it among the democratic members, and doubts are expressed as to its final passage. It seems to have been an emergency measure in the start, rendered necessary from the peculiar construction of the democratic platform and many democrats are thoroughly convinced that the republican tariff policy was all right after all.

The Times seems to consider that personal abuse of the publishers of the JOURNAL is sufficient to cover its offense against the best interests of the county in the county printing matter, and hence uses no other argument in its defense. Well, perhaps that is the best course for him to pursue for his actions cannot be defended upon the ground of the best interest of the taxpayers of the county.

The Corbett-Mitchell mill is said to be a failure as Mitchell has signalized an unlike. There are those who have freely predicted that Mitchell would never meet Corbett in the ring and these now claim the sprain to be only an excuse. We don't know and we don't care how it is.

The question of who will succeed W. B. Dawley as postmaster is none of our political darn business, but here's hoping the administration will give us as good a man as Dawley. The contest is said to stand between Major Mix and E. LePage, with Dawn backing LePage—that settles it. LePage has the call.

The democrats of Otterrail county are kicking themselves extremely hard because Senator Hoppe has secured a new office under this administration. Well, what could you expect? Hoppe represented the only power a democrat ever had in that county and why should he not reap the reward?

The sage nonhuttes Owen for Governor on the populist ticket. This means one of two things—either Donnelly sees that he couldn't be elected or else he has an idea that he can call the turn on the United States senatorship. In any event it means an office for the sage, you can bet your last dollar.

Mayor F. P. Wright has written a letter declining to be a candidate for re-election to that office. Col. Wright has been one of the best mayors St. Paul has ever had, the only objection to him coming from democratic sources, and for the reason that he is not a democrat. St. Paul democratic papers can't tolerate anything short of a democrat for mayor.

E. C. Carruth, manager of the Grand Forks Plaindealer, took a trip to Bismarck lately, and it is said in Grand Forks that the object of his trip was to try to sell the Plaindealer to the Populist state officers. The democrats of Grand Forks will feel encouraged now to help build up the Plaindealer, knowing that sooner or later it is likely to fall into the hands of the populists.

Speaking with a prominent populist the other day he said: "Fact is we have got to manage some way to get some brains into congress. We have been going along about this business altogether too long for our own good. I reckon Senator Lommen is about the only man we have who could exactly fill the bill." It is none of our business but we risk the opinion that they could nominate many a worse man than Lommen.

Senator Washburn has introduced a bill granting right-of-way for the Duluth & Winnipeg through White Earth reservation. This fact gives color and substance to the rumor that the Duluth & Winnipeg road intends to build into the valley in the near future, and if so it is very probable that their route is one of the points that it will reach. This country needs direct connection with Duluth.

Detroit will offer a candidate for State auditor on the republican ticket in the person of W. J. Morrow, who is the present auditor of Becker county. Mr. Morrow is one of the old-timers of Becker Co., and has held various offices of trust in that county where everybody is Billy's friend. The writer has known him since '76 and has never known anything wrong with him. If, however, there is anything in being in the swim early, Bob Dunn and C. P. Hunt have the whip-row on Billy.

The Globe hints that a certain St. Paul politician will try to use Governor Nelson to further his own aspirations for senatorial togs. The Globe should know Kute Nelson well enough by this time to know that he is his own man and wears no man's collar. Governor Nelson, however, is the peer of any man in this state and does not have to borrow his light from any man. Preeminently a man of the people himself he understands thoroughly the needs of the common people and is not obliged to fawn upon the favors of the wealthy, even had he any desire so to do so. If Knute Nelson should ever desire a seat in the United States senate he will go there upon his own merits and not at the behest or by the wonts of any rich man as the Globe intimates. The Globe has for two years faithfully tried to kill off Nelson without avail and should now turn its attention to some more promising subject.

It is really delicious to note the harmony existing among peoples party leaders in this county. The Hillsboro Spectator—Harry Ives' paper—says that "it is such papers as the Tribune and such men as Holston who are doing inestimable damage to the people's party." He this as it may, it demonstrates the fact that men, like republics, are ungrateful. The JOURNAL always understood that it was Holston's action in the convention that nominated Judge Ives, that made the latter the candidate for the republican, who had a strong following but not enough to get him the nomination, turned his support over to Ives and of course that gentleman was nominated. But don Harry is figuring on going to the legislature—believing that his single will carry him through—and he may think that a combination with the Times will help his cause. This may account for his seeming ungratefulness.

THE CITY ALL RIGHT.

There is some grumbling heard because the city is temporarily hard-up. But there is really no cause for kicking. Crookston is to-day in better shape financially than any city or town in the northwest. Comptroller Walsh informs us that there is only about $1,000 in unpaid claims and that there is probably about $1,500 due the county hospital.

To offset these claims there is $11,000 due the city from the county for unpaid taxes, and of this amount the county will probably be able to pay the city between $8,000 and $9,000 at the March settlement, which is not far distant. The city will then be able to settle its unpaid claims, and have a balance left to work on until the June settlement. Besides this the most of the liquor licenses will be payable in June and July, and if the city has no more unusual expense, we will be in good shape, and there will be no necessity for issuing bonds. The embarrassment is only temporary and the present condition of affairs is due solely to the freezing of the sewer under the Great Northern tracks, which has cost the city $6,000. If there shall be no more trouble with the sewer in the future, the city will soon regain the ground it has lost and have money in the treasury without resorting to the issue of bonds.

AGAIN THE PARALLEL.

Times, Jan. 18, '94.

The Times would rather see time errors in a convicted of an attempt to capture the county printing at twice the gross now being paid, than to have it shown that it deliberately lied to or deceived its readers.

There you are on your own evidence convicted of a willful lie published with intent to deceive your readers for you know well that the JOURNAL offered to publish the proceedings in the Dulch in the Norwegian language, and in the face of that knowledge you deliberately state that we offer to do it in English. Comment is unnecessary.

Over Eight Billion Dollars Lost.

The more we hovva of a free trade administration the worse it is for the country. We have already shown how much the volume of business growing to five and six billions of dollars, but it has now exceeded eight billions of dollars taken from trade during nine months' experience of the four of free trade; beginning with the month of April, immediately after the assumption of office by the party now in power. The total bank clearings, as reported to Dredstreet's, have been as follows:

	1893.	1892.
April	$4,018,319,272	$5,006,677,400
May	5,584,562,287	5,431,338,000
June	4,524,009,727	4,915,751,393
July	4,137,000,864	4,530,172,172
August	3,540,212,938	4,510,105,713
September	3,511,815,027	4,720,205,710
October	3,883,580,893	5,470,262,181
November	4,051,057,344	5,443,253,918
December	4,023,130,657	5,444,000,000
Totals	$37,540,208,023	$46,795,560,500

These figures are instructive. They show that the longer the present administration lasts the worse it is for the country. Where the loss was $8,000,000,000 last July there were nearly $9,000,000,000 loss in December, an increase of 400 per cent in the work of destruction within a half year. The shrinkage between the Christmas trade of 1892 and 1893, nearly $9,000,000,000, was a terrible injury to the wholesale and retail trade of the country. During the nine months of mismanagement of the country's affairs by this free trade administration the entire loss in the volume of business at those cities only which report their bank clearings exceeded $8,000,000,000. The "change" has cost almost $1,000,000,000 per month at a few cities only.—American Economist.

Kill the Bill.

Strikes out the enacting clause of the Wilson bill, and within a month every factory will be busy, every worker will be able to secure work, and the multitudes of households now suffering hardship and cheerless will again enjoy the sunshine of comfort and independence! Remove the threat of free trade, and we shall have our old prosperity back again. Workingmen, you can do this, and you alone! The congressmen whom your ballots elected are not your masters, but your servants. If you want bread, if you want work, if you want your families to be comfortably fed and clothed and sheltered, demand that your representatives shall defeat the bill that has paralyzed industry and robbed more than 1,000,000 men of employment! It matters little how you protest, whether individually by letter or postal card or in unison by petition and by mass meetings. But act with vigor and act at once! Kill the starvation wages bill!—New York Press.

BIDS CALLED FOR.

CARLISLE INVITES PROPOSALS FOR $50,000,000 TEN-YEAR BONDS.

The Proceeds to Be Used In Building Up the Gold Reserve—The Bonds Will Bear 5 Per Cent, but Will Be Sold at a Price to Make Them Virtually 3 Per Cent. Bids to Be Opened Feb. 1.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Secretary Carlisle has issued the following circular inviting proposals for 5 per cent bonds:

By virtue of the authority contained in the act entitled, "An Act to Provide for the Resumption of Specie Payments," approved Jan. 14, 1875, the secretary of the treasury hereby offers for public subscription an issue of bonds of the United States to the amount of $50,000,000 in either registered or coupon form, in denominations of $50 and upwards, redeemable in coin at the pleasure of the government after 10 years from the date of their issue, and bearing interest, payable quarterly in coin, at the rate of 5 per cent per annum.

Proposals for the whole or any part of these bonds will be received at the treasury department office of the secretary until 12 o'clock noon on the 1st day of February, 1894. Proposals shall state the amount of bonds desired, whether registered or coupon, and the premium which the subscription proposes to pay, the place where it is desired that the bonds shall be delivered, and the office, whether that of the treasurer of the United States or an assistant treasurer of the United States, where it will be most convenient for the subscriber to deposit the amount of his subscription. Failure to specify the above particulars may cause the deposit to be rejected.

As soon as practicable after the 1st day of February the allotments of bonds will be made to the highest bidders therefor, but no proposal will be considered at a lower price than $1.17323, which is the equivalent of a 3 per cent bond at par, and the right to reject any and all proposals is hereby expressly reserved.

TO ENJOIN CARLISLE.

Knights of Labor Officials Instruct Sovereign to Bring Proceedings.

Baltimore, Jan. 20.—A special to The News from Philadelphia says: The following dispatch was sent from the Knights of Labor headquarters after consultation among the officers present:

J. R. Sovereign, general master workmen, K. of L., Des Moines, Ia.:

Secure counsel once to before the United States supreme court immediately. Enter injunction proceedings against Carlisle restraining him from issuing $50,000,000 of bonds. The interests of the people upon whom the burden of all taxation to pay the interest and principal of all the bonds fall, require that you should immediately take this step against the secretary of the treasury, enjoining him from incurring any further debt while the resources of the government, if properly applied, are sufficient to meet all lawful demands.

[Signed] John W. Hayes,
General Secretary-Treas. K. of L.

The following telegram was received in reply by Secretary Hayes:

Case submitted to counsel. If there is reasonable grounds to force standing of order, injunction proceedings will begin at once.

[Signed.] J. R. Sovereign,
General Master Workman.

INCOME TAX BILL.

The Various Features of the Bill Officially Given Out.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The full text of the internal revenue bill, including the important income tax has been agreed upon by the Democratic members of the ways and means committee. It is probable the measure will be submitted to the house at once. As yet details of the income tax as finally agreed to have not been made public. The Associated Press is able, however, to give a summary of the essential features of the tax as it will be submitted to the house.

The bill provides that the income tax is to go into effect Jan. 1, 1895, and that the first collection on incomes is to be made on July 1, 1895. All classes of incomes are included in the measure at the uniform rate of 2 per cent tax on incomes over $4,000 is fixed.

There is to be made obligatory on all persons receiving additional incomes of over $3,500 to make a return to the local collector of internal revenue. These returns are gone over by the income collector and a tax list is made up of those whose incomes exceed $4,000, and it is levied on those exceeding the sum of above $3,500 and under $4,000, but the committee deemed it expedient to allow this margin of $500 below the exemption point in order that the returns might be sure to show all who are subject to the tax.

In case a person having an income of over $3,500 fails to make a return, it becomes the duty of the revenue assessor to make inquiry as to the amount of the person's income, but this examination discloses that the income is above $4,000, the income is subjected to under the law, and the party failing to make his return is deemed guilty of a criminal offense and is made subject to fine and imprisonment.

The main purpose in framing the law governing income tax was to avoid an inquisitorial operation of the law. The committee believe that it will do away with the necessity of having assessors prying into the private business of people unless the latter have a taxable income and try to evade the law. It is estimated that not more than 85,000 persons will be subject to this tax, so that a great majority of citizens will not have to make returns.

The tax upon corporations includes every phase of corporate stock. This tax is general and it is without the $4,000 exemption allotted to individual incomes. It is provided that including the tax on corporate stock, the corporation and deduct the amount from the dividends of the stockholder. It is made the duty of each corporation to take 2 per cent of each annual corporate income from the amount set apart for the stockholder, and pay the total to the internal revenue collector in the locality. Severe penalties are provided for failure to make the proper reduction from the dividends of stockholders or for a failure to make the return to the revenue collector.

The entire business of the levying and collecting of the tax is placed in charge of a deputy commissioner of internal revenue. The different revenue districts of the country are also provided with deputy collectors, who will especially manage the collection of the income tax.

ANOTHER HAWAIIAN MESSAGE.

Latest Correspondence Sent to Congress by the President.

Washington, Jan. 20.—The president in a brief note of transmittal submitted to congress the latest correspondence relating to Hawaii. It comprises some brief notes of Minister Willis to Secretary Gresham, which are unimportant, but the chief features of it are letters passing between Minister Willis and President Dole, in one of which the minister complains of an utterance of President Dole as reflecting on the president of the United States; a letter from President Dole in which he specifically inquires if Minister Willis' instructions authorized the use of force. Both these matters appear to have been settled by the receipt of the last messages of the president to congress, and the last instructions of Secretary Gresham to Minister Willis.

The most important part of the correspondence consists of a long letter from Minister Willis to Secretary Gresham, containing enclosures of correspondance between President Dole and himself.

Washington, Jan. 22.—The president has transmitted to the house some additional Hawaiian dispatches from Minister Willis. The retirement of Vice President Hatch is announced and the election of W. C. Wilder to succeed. The executive council, the correspondence says, has been increased from five to five persons, a minister of foreign affairs being added. The president has heretofore discharged the duties of that office. A petition and memorial addressed to President Cleveland from the Hawaiian Patriotic league, claiming to represent 5,000 loyal voters, is enclosed by Minister Willis without comment. The memorial alleges a conspiracy of Minister Stevens and the men in the present provisional government, and deny that the present provisional government represents the people of Hawaii. Specifications are made of alleged incleme ncy in the provisional government.

MINNESOTA DEMOCRATS.

State Central Committee and Democratic Association Met at St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 18.—The Democratic state central committee and the Democratic Association of Minnesota held a joint session at the Ryan hotel at 2 p. m. The afternoon session was devoted wholly to routine business matters and a discussion of the methods most desirable in securing harmonious action between the two militant branches of the party organization.

The business meeting of the association resulted in the election of all the old officers.

In the evening there was a banquet at the Ryan.

Chairman Wilson Indisposed.

Washington, Jan. 18.—Chairman Wilson was indisposed last night and did not attend the meeting of the ways and means committee. He was not sufficiently ill to remain away from the committee proceedings, however, and when it became necessary for him to take charge of the tariff debate he was able to do so.

Seven Boats For Lewelling.

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 22.—Mrs. Mary E. Lease has written a number of letters to populists throughout the state, informing them that she is preparing to hold seven meetings in the state, one in each congressional district, for the purpose of denouncing Governor Lewelling and his administration.

Adjournment Agreed On.

Denver, Jan. 22.—The legislative conference committee reported unanimously in favor of adjournment after the passage of the bills for the construction of state canal No. 1, the Twin Lake reservoir and any other measure that will give employment to labor, and an appropriation to pay the expenses of the assembly.

Combined Revolutionists.

Washington, Jan. 23.—John McCandless, who was a member of the committee of safety at Honolulu, during the revolution, was before the sub-committee on foreign relations during the day. He sustained the action of the revolutionists and that of Minister Stevens.

Bandit Evans on Water.

San Francisco, Jan. 23.—An afternoon paper publishes a statement that the bandits Evans and Morell are safely out of the state and are sailing on the high seas free from pursuit.

Yellow Fever Raging.

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 23.—It is impossible for vessels to discharge their cargoes at the port, owing to the yellow fever epidemic. The deaths from this average 11 daily.

Ivory Carving In China and Japan.

In China and Japan ivory has been carved, the ivory balls inclosed inside one another being specially noted. Many theories have been formed as to how these balls have been cut. Perhaps a practicable one is that a ball of ivory was taken, around the upper and lower ends of which four small holes were carved, and, beginning with drilling in size toward the center until the axis of the one hole met the axis of the other or lower one, right angles to the center of the ball, and that then small tools were inserted, and a thin layer of ivory forming a part of a circle from one hole to its lower corresponding one, was cut and loosened from the whole mass. So, gradually cutting from one hole to the next one, a complete inner circle was eventually loosened, the circles themselves afterward being cut into the required pattern.—Chambers' Journal.

Ramesu and the Dog.

Many eccentricities are pardoned in musical geniuses, especially by those who do not suffer from them. Unfortunately the object of a musician's wrath is quite apt to be unable to appreciate why he has offended.

One can fancy the possessor of the untroined voice who figures in the following story thinking hard things of the celebrated composer Ramesu.

One day Ramesu while calling on a lady fixed a stern glance on a little dog who sat in her lap and was barking good naturedly. Suddenly Ramesu seized the poor little fellow and threw him out of the window.

"What is the matter?" asked his hostess, much alarmed.

"He barked false!" said Ramesu indignantly.—Youth's Companion.

Mr. Dennis O'Reilly, of Fisher one of the best known men in that section of the country, died at his home in Fisher on Wednesday, January 17th after an illness of two weeks.

Mr. O'Reilly was born in Ireland 69 years ago emigrated to Canada when a boy where he spent a portion of his life, coming to Minnesota in the seventies; after a short stay went back to Canada, afterwards bringing his family out to Fisher in the spring of 1880, where he has since resided surrounded by his family and respected by all with whom he came in contact. Mr. O'Reilly had a host of friends who along with his bereaved family will sincerely mourn his loss. He leaves a wife and grown up family consisting of three sons and two daughters, the eldest of the sons being councilman, George O'Reilly; the second son, Michael has been chief marshal of the village for eight years, the third son, William has been assisting his brother George in his business since he quit dueling. The eldest daughter is married to Mr. John Johnson of Fisher, the other daughter Linda is at home with her mother, the youngest daughter Nellie having died some years ago. The funeral of deceased on Friday was attended by one of the largest concourses of people ever gathered for a like purpose in Fisher. Suitable services were rendered by Rev. Father Hendricks both at the church and at the grave. The large gathering assembled spoke more for the high esteem Mr. O'Reilly was held in than words could express. The JOURNAL extends its sympathy, along with the many friends of the deceased, to his beloved wife and family in their bereavement.

Mentor.

MENTOR, Jan. 22d, 1894.

MR. EDITOR:—There is a curiosity or a conundrum in Mentor, and we write hoping to be enlightened. It is a new born democrat; its sticker with us is, how it was brought about so quick. We take it for granted that the democratic party is its father, and are informed that early literature is its mother, and all come about in three months, and the child is being exalted in the Mentor postoffice. Strange what great and sudden changes are wrought in some people's political views for small pecuniary gains. I am afraid that some principle, on a larger scale, is what disturbed the financial prosperity of this nation.

Mr. and Mrs. John Brown of Woodside received a letter last Saturday, which contained the sad news of the death of their daughter, Mrs. John Dalnard. She died at their home in North Dakota. Mr. Dalnard arrived here with the remains of his beloved wife to-day. The funeral and burial will take place to-morrow at the residence of the parents of the deceased.

The sick reported last week, so far as we can learn, are all improving.

I shrank to meet a rod-encrusted scrim,
And then he seemed to grunt in accents rude,

Behold the source of richness for your food!
I fed and saw a field that seemed, at first,
One gaint mass of roses pure and white,
With dewy buds 'mid dark green foliage nursed.
And, as I lingered o'er this lovely sight,
The summer breeze that bended that earthern scene
Whispered, "Behold the source of Crotoleine!"

DUNN'S BUDGET.

Interesting News and Gossip from the National Capital.

WASHINGTON.—The tariff debate has served one good purpose. It has shown how far apart the Democrats from different portions of the union are on this great question. If the Democratic majority in the House was any where near that of the Republicans in the fifty-first congress the bill would never go through. It is observed that the majority of Democrats are in favor of tariff reform in spots. We find one man saying that the present duty is just right on the particular industries in his district, but it should be cut down on everything else. While some of the Democrats have been declaiming against the Wilson bill, some one has noted them if they would support the measure if the duty on the particular product in which they were so greatly interested should be altered to suit demands as now, in every instance they say they would. The fact is it would be impossible to arrange the tariff till satisfactory to all sections, and some have got to give away. It now looks as if the Wilson bill would be amended in the Senate out of all recognition, and sent back to the House, and that the two houses will not agree and that the bill will fail.

Of course there is to be taken into consideration the strong personality of Cleveland. He may be able to force the bill through. There is no doubt that he has great power in his party, and that he is not afraid of exercising it. The way he has held the party to his Hawaiian policy is one of the surprising things of the session. In spite of the unpopularity of that policy and the feeling that exists, not a single Democrat has spoken out against it; and more than that, they have gone to great lengths to prevent any man saying anything against it in the House. In the Senate it is different. There you can't prevent a man from talking, and some good ones have been made.

Of all the speeches on this subject none have been greater than that of Senator Davis. The Senate listened to him with marked attention. Minnesotians were especially interested. Senator Washburn sat by him all the time and Representatives Kiefer, Baldwin, Towney, McCleary and Fletcher came over and listened; while the galleries contained many citizens of the North Star State.

Commissioner Lochren is proving a much better executive officer in the pension bureau than was at first anticipated. It took him some time to get hold of affairs in the office, but now he knows what is going on. More than this the deputies are not having as much to say as before. There may be those who do not agree with his policy and who think he has been too serious, but there are none who will say aught against his ability or integrity.

Senator Washburn expects to have something of a fight to secure the establishment of a weather station at some point in Southwestern Minnesota where it will be useful to the agricultural interests of that section. He has had for several months the co-operation of the Department, but there are no funds. He will try and get enough added to the appropriation bill to secure this station and while he will no doubt be successful in the Senate, he will have some trouble to keep it on in the House. He will have to rely on the influence he once exerted in the House when he was a member to do that body as he now is in the Senate.

PROHIBITION DEAD.

FORMER DECISION OF SUPREME COURT AFFIRMED

And Prohibition Is Declared Not to Be a Part of the Constitution, Never Having Been Legally Adopted—History of the Case Decided.

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 23.—The supreme court has affirmed its former decision, holding that the prohibitory amendment is not a part of the constitution of the state, having never been legally adopted. The case was brought before it in the action of J. A. Harvey, the president of the State Temperance alliance, against W. M. McFarland, secretary of state. The defendant refused to issue a certified copy of the constitution containing this provision on the ground that the supreme court had decided it was not a part of the constitution and the plaintiff therefore practically asked and brought an action for writ of mandamus to compel him to issue such copy, notwithstanding the ruling of the court. Judge Conrad refused to grant the writ, and the former decision of the supreme court, as well as that of the district court is affirmed. Since the suit was commenced the State Temperance alliance has ceased to exist, and it is safe to say the prohibitory amendment is now dead forever.

The North Dakota Murderer Expiates His Terrible Crime.

CANDO, N. D., Jan. 20.—Albert F. Bomberger, the murderer of the Krieder family was hanged at 1:40 p. m.

Bomberger, accompanied by the sheriff ascended the scaffold at 1:30. He was calm and hid his friends good-bye showing but little signs of weakening except in the pallor of his face and a slight trembling of the limbs as the sheriff's deputies stepped forward to pinion his arms and feet. He refused the offices of the minister who was present and when asked if he had anything to say, turned to a few witnesses who were present in the inclosure and said:

"I am sorry for my crime and hope no one will follow in my footsteps. Good-bye."

The black cap and noose were then adjusted, and at 1:40 p. m. the trap was sprung that by the taking of one life was to avenge the cruel murder of six people.

The execution was witnessed by large numbers of people from the surrounding hills.

DAYS OF MERRIMENT.

"KING REX," THE JOLLY MONARCH OF THE MARDI GRAS.

Difference Between Carnival Observances In Europe and America—History of the Displays In New Orleans—Preparations For This Year's Show.

THEY are making great preparations for the Mardi Gras festivities at New Orleans this year, and they say that the display of 1894 will be finer than ever before attempted. Mardi Gras falls on Feb. 6 this time, and already many strangers have spoken for places at the hotels.

Mardi Gras is observed in Mobile and Galveston as well as at New Orleans, but nowhere else in America has it obtained much foothold. The Mardi Gras of these cities is an American modification of the carnival of the cities of southern Europe. On both sides of the Atlantic the festivities held just before the beginning of the Lenten season serve as a sort of goodby to good times till after Easter. Indeed the very word "carnival" (carni-vale) is supposed to signify "farewell to flesh" and was applied to these festivities because no good churchmen may eat meat during Lent. In all the carnival cities, whether on the banks of the Tiber, the Seine or the Mississippi, one of the chief features of the period is "light hearted gayety. But there are great differences between the carnival observances of the old and the new worlds. In Europe the fun is more spontaneous—more extemporaneous, so to speak—and entered into more for its own sake than in America. There are excesses there unheard of here, and there is also far less of systematized and imposing display.

This latter feature of the carnival in New Orleans dates back only to 1857 and is doubtless the result of ungrafting upon the Latin idea of harlequin frivolity the American bent for organization. In the old days, when the creole element was supreme in the Crescent City, the last few days before the beginning of Lent were celebrated by promiscuous maskers upon the public streets, and there was much rude fun of a sort somewhat similar to that which characterizes the same period abroad.

The organization of parades was attempted several years before it was accomplished, but the first appearance of the Mystic Krewe did not occur until the evening of Feb. 24, four years before the beginning of the civil war. The first parade was a satisfying success. The characters in the procession, which was held in the evening, represented the denizens of the infernal regions as depicted in Milton's "Paradise Lost," and the unique display was followed by a brilliant ball at the Varieties theater. From this time until the war storm broke over the land the Mystic Krewe paraded yearly, with annually augmented splendor, but after 1861 it was suspended until 1866, when the festivities were revived and have been repeated every year since, save when interrupted by pestilence or political upheaval. The Mystic Krewe, however, disappeared in 1884 and was not seen again for five or six years.

The first day parade took place in 1872, when "Rex, king of the carnival," assumed regal power over the city for 24 hours. His sham sovereignty was extended over all classes, including even "the strangers within the gates." This new departure was a success from the start, so much so indeed that the reign of Rex was shortly extended to cover two days, on the first of which his majesty arrives, and on the second of which the Mardi Gras parade proper is held. In 1873 and the year following the "Knights of Momus" appeared on New Year's eve, but in 1876 this organization became a feature of the carnival itself. In 1878 the "Phunny Phorty Phellows" added themselves to the parades, in 1882 the "Krewe of Proteus" appeared, and every year since then these divisions have increased their gorgeousness or new ones have been added until it is safe to say that in these last years of the century Mardi Gras in New Orleans affords the most imposing and showy annual spectacle that is to be seen in America.

A most praiseworthy circumstance connected with these parades is the fact that no advertising features are allowed. The most northern parades the artistic and fantastic floats are followed by a long line of floats furnished by leading business houses, which vie with each other in the attractive advertisement of their wares. It is undoubtedly true that the rigid exclusion of this feature from the Mardi Gras displays has had much to do with the general success of the exhibitions. Another thing which has contributed to the success of the spectacles from year to year is the effort made to present something novel in each succeeding parade. The first year, as has been stated, the subjects were drawn from Milton's "Paradise Lost." Some of the features since then have been "The Feast of Belshazzar," "Lalla Rookh," "The Five Senses," "The History of Louisiana," Spenser's "Faerie Queen," Homer's "Tale of Troy," "The Myths of China," "Hindoo Mythology," "Realm of Flowers," "Legends of the Middle Ages," "Treasures of the Earth," "The Culprit Fay."

Although the Mardi Gras proper lasts only two days, the city is in holiday attire, and its citizens are in holiday mood for quite a week. The weather in New Orleans in February is almost always delightful, being about the same as April weather in New York or Cincinnati. The blue skies, and the warm sunshine, and the picturesque peculiarities of the southern city are of themselves great attractions to visitors from more northern latitudes, and the old town bagins to fill with visitors some days before the actual date of the giving over of the place to the reign of Rex. Those who arrive late have in recent years been obliged to get along with such accommodations as they can get, and the hotels and lodging houses are invariably crowded. The streets are gayly decorated with bunting and greenery and brilliantly illuminated at night. The people are attired in their best, and their best is bright with colors, so that the ocean is gay beyond the descriptive power of the pen or the artist in black and white.

The appearance of Rex on the day preceding Mardi Gras has come to be almost as much of an event as the grand Mardi Gras itself. Sometimes the carnival king and his queen arrive by rail and sometimes by ship, but in either event they are received with all the pomp and circumstance that should accompany the welcoming of conquering royalty. It is understood that the real personality of the royal personages shall be unknown of the multitude, but of late years this knowledge has generally leaked or been given out, and till the world knew two or three years ago that the queen was Miss Nita Shakespeare, daughter of the mayor then incumbent. Before the doings were over on Mardi Gras night the king was known to be S. P. Walmsley. Thus it will be seen that, although it is because of the creole influence that the Mardi Gras is held, the Anglo-Saxon element has gained control of the carnival.

The parade of Rex begins at as nearly 11 a. m. as possible, and it is to the credit of New Orleans and those who control the PASSING THE CLAY STATUE.

Mardi Gras that the start is usually on time. Early in the morning citizens and strangers begin to occupy advantageous points of observation along the streets, and by 10 o'clock the thoroughfares are crowded. The blare of trumpets and the beating of drums announce the coming of royalty and his train, the parade being headed by the king's Own Royal Band, followed by a stately car containing the boeuf gras or prize ox.

Following near come the gorgeous floats representing the historical or mythological scenes chosen, the car on which sit enthroned in splendor the ruling monarch and his consort, and last of all the miscellaneous maskers. These last are a motley crowd, some got up elegantly and tastefully, some attired in the most shabby costumes and dingy tinsel, but all fantastic and mirth provoking to the throngs of native and visiting sightseers, who are all of course in the mood to be amused. This parade lasts from three to four hours, and when it has passed the streets empty themselves as if by magic, for the crowds must hasten home to eat and prepare for the glories of the night.

It is in the evening that the "Krewe of Comus" and the "Knights of Proteus" and sometimes other organizations enliven the streets. The parade of these bodies is shorter than the day parade, and for that reason perhaps the crowds along the route appear denser. The brilliance of illumination on the floats, on many public and private edifices and in the form of torchlight processions is added to the general excitement, but the miscellaneous maskers are absent because of police regulations, enforced in order to protect the unwary from possible mischievously inclined, who if disguised would be aided in their malevolent designs.

This prohibition as to masks does not extend to those who are hidden to one or more of the fancy entertainments which wind up the day's festivities and are in many respects the most splendid of the observances. There have been two or three of these of late years, first in importance being the ball and reception of Rex himself, held in the Carnival palace, next the tableaux and ball of Comus at the Grand Opera House, and third the tableaux and ball of Proteus at the French Opera House. Besides these, which may be termed official, there are numerous other balls in the city, which is literally given over to mirth and merriment and the mazes of the waltz.

Though the Mardi Gras festivities of New Orleans are increasing in importance every year, the tendency is constantly toward organized display and not to individual license, and the uprising of "confetti" and flowers, the racing of riderless horses through the streets and the night masking of all who will, so important features in European cities, are not in evidence. The Mardi Gras observances of Mobile and Galveston are also attracting more attention yearly, and there is no one who does not applaud the spirit of joyousness which these festivities indicate.

REAR ADMIRAL WALKER.

The White Squadron's Commander Reaches the Navy's Top Round.

By the retirement of Rear Admiral George W. Baltimore Commodore John G. Walker is advanced another round on the naval ladder and accordingly the vacant rear admiralty, the highest office within the reach of one of Uncle Sam's gallant sea dogs. The sensation of being one of the six active rear admirals of the United States navy will not be exactly a novelty to him, however, for the reason that as acting rear admiral in command of the famous white squadron he took the Chicago, Atlanta, Boston, Yorktown and Dolphin, five of our modern cruisers, in a grand swing around the circle to show the nations of the globe that Uncle Sam was regaining his old time prestige as one of the rulers of the seas.

Rear Admiral Walker was born in Hillsboro, N. H., nearly 59 years ago. In 1850 he was graduated from the United States naval academy and saw a great deal of service during the civil war. As lieutenant on the Connecticut he assisted in blockading the Atlantic coast in 1861 and was on the Winona when she sided in capturing New Orleans and Vicksburg. He was made lieutenant commander in 1863, and co-operating with General Sherman in the Yazoo river campaign forced his way through the Yazoo pass and commanded the naval battery that shelled Vicksburg from the rear. After the fall of Vicksburg Walker captured Yazoo city and was in command of the DeKalb when she was sunk in 15 minutes by a torpedo. In 1865 he commanded the Shawnut and aided in capturing the forts near Wilmington, N. C. Several years ago he was made a commodore.

The pay of a rear admiral at sea is $6,000, on shore duty $5,000; on leave or waiting orders $4,000. Besides Belknap three other rear admirals will be retired this year under the age limit law. They are Bancroft Gherardi, A. E. K. Benham and John Irwin. The last named is now in command of our naval forces at Honolulu. There are about 30 living rear admirals on the retired list at present. In point of seniority Gherardi is now ranking rear admiral of the navy.

The launching at Cleveland the other day of the new steamship Northwest, which is destined to carry passengers between Buffalo and Duluth, was an event of more than ordinary importance in the history of lake navigation. The Northwest is not only the largest vessel ever launched at an inland port, but is the finest, swiftest and most pretentious passenger ship that ever plowed the waters of the great lakes. Indeed some of the fresh water seadogs who witnessed the launching ventured the opinion that she is too palatial and expensive to prove profitable in the passenger traffic. The Great Northern railway evidently has no misgivings on that score, however, for it has not only expended $750,000 on the Northwest, but is building a sister ship to the Northland, which will cost as much more.

The new steamers are expected to make 20 miles an hour in the open lake and 13 miles an hour in the rivers and to accomplish the distance between Buffalo and Duluth in 66 hours. The service will begin in June.

The Northwest is in a large measure a combination of transatlantic steamship and modern lake steamer, with the best points of both. She is 383 feet long over all and has a molded breadth of 44 feet. Her depth to spar deck is 34 feet 5 inches. Until last spring these dimensions were not excelled by any boat on the lakes. The big steamer Centurion is but a few inches longer.

In power the Northwest is not only without an equal on the lakes, but is more than double her nearest competitor. For her size she has greater power than the favored ocean greyhounds. Reckoning like her was ever before attempted off the Atlantic. The two quadruple expansion engines are expected to develop 7,000 horsepower.

Being designed exclusively for passengers, the Northwest has no freight hold worth the name. She has room for 1,000 tons of coal in the bunkers, and the accommodations for passengers are of the most elegant description. The company expects to carry a large number of emigrants, and quarters are provided for them on the lower deck.

Should the Northwest and Northland prove profitable four or five more steamers will be built and a daily line between Buffalo and Duluth established.

An Improvised Compass.

The points of the compass may be determined with the aid of an ordinary watch. It is simply necessary to bring the watch in such a position that the hour hand is directed toward the sun. The south then lies midway between whatever hour it may happen to be and numeral XII on the dial. Suppose, for instance, it is 4 o'clock and the timepiece is held in the position indicated. The direction of the numeral II will then be the exact south. If 8 o'clock the numeral X will indicate the exact southerly point.

PROBATE NOTICE.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk—ss. In Probate Court. Special term, January 16th, 1894.

In the matter of the guardianship of Ezra L. Henry E., Charles T. and Alfred L. Johnson, minors.

On reading and filing the petition of Mathilda Johnson, guardian of the above named minors, setting forth the amount personal estate of said minors, and her bond as guardian thereof, and how much remains undisposed of; that the rents, issues and profits of said real estate, and the proceeds of sales thereof, can be ascertained, with the charges of administration, and the claims, assessments and other charges which are a existing lien upon the estate and the improvements which are necessary for the preservation of the estate; and praying for a license to sell so much of said real estate which it is proposed to mortgage; and it appearing to the Court that it is needful and necessary to sell such real estate for the purposes mentioned in said petition.

And it appearing by said petition that the personal property of said minors is insufficient to pay all debts with the charges of administration, and to pay any taxes, assessments or other charges which are an existing lien upon the estate, or to pay for any improvements which are necessary for the preservation of the estate, and to keep the same in repair.

It is therefore ordered that all persons interested in said estate appear before this Court at a session thereof, to be held at the Court House in said county, on the 20th day of March, 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in the city of Crookston, in said county, then and there to show cause (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said Mathilda Johnson, guardian, to mortgage the said real estate of said wards for the purpose of obtaining funds for the payment of such debts, charges, taxes, assessments and improvements, or for making such necessary repairs.

And it is further ordered, that this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed or published at Crookston, in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 16th day of January, A. D. 1894.

By Court,

132-417 C. M. BERDAHL, Judge of Probate.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

FREEDOM AT A BUBBLE A DAY.

"You seem to trent the dinger pretty lightly," said Gordon. "Perhaps you are tired of liberty."

"Not a bit of it. I have just bought freedom for three days at the rate of a rouble a day, and here it is," said Ivan Dontkremember, striking the sack on which he sat.

"What have you got there?" Gordon asked eagerly.

"Freedom, I tell you, for three days. It's indispensable. How long do you think you are going to keep up on fir cones? Twelve hours at the outside, I should say, by the look of madam."

"What have you got in the sack, I ask?" Gordon repeated savagely.

"Bread, and I'll guard it as I would my life," Ivan Dontkremember answered, catching the gleam of desperation which lit my eyes as well as Gordon's.

"We are starving; we have eaten nothing for four days. You must give us some."

"You can get as much as you want at the post. Schemyl must keep his prisoners alive till the guard comes round to collect them. Why should I shorten my term of freedom to prolong yours?"

Gordon looked at me. "Shall we give ourselves up?" his eyes asked, and mine answering "Yes," he held out his hand to me and said:

"Come."

I am afraid you are leaving with a bad opinion of me," said Ivan Dontkremember as I rose. "That's the worst of being perfectly reasonable—one's sure to offend some amiable fool. Now, if you only had a white fur two—"

"What!" cried Gordon, tearing open his coat to get at his note case. "You will sell your liberty?"

"Of course I will. Schemyl always keeps a good stock on hand on the chance of a moneyed customer turning up. Five roubles more where this came from," he continued, untying his sack and producing a loaf. "It's rather a high price—a rouble a loaf, pretty nearly half a crown of your money —but then poor government officials must live."

Without a word Gordon snatched a note from his case, thrust it into Ivan's hand and took possession of the loaf. Then, with horrible laughter, we tore the loaf in two and ate with the ravenous fury of starved beasts. For a time we forgot everything but the animal joy of satisfying our craving appetite. Other Ivan spoke to me or not I do not know. It was not until our hunger had been appeased that we could think of him.

"What right have you to put temptation in a poor devil's way?" he growled. "Do you know the value of the note you gave me?"

Gordon shook his head, still eating.

"A thousand rubles—three years' freedom! Lifelong freedom, who knows? Take it back, or I may be tempted yet to knock you on the head."

He pushed the note into Gordon's hand and leaning away sat for some minutes on his knees, dropped his bristly red beard in his palms and rocked himself slowly backward and forward, seeking for the fire.

Gordon looked at him and then at me in silent perplexity; we both doubted whether the little man was in his right mind. Free only planning money! and yet bewailing that Gordon still held the note in his hand. "Ivan Dontkremember said angrily:

"Put it away, I tell you—hide it up. Don't you know that the forest is alive with desperate men? Any one of them would murder the pair of you to get that. Why should you risk it? Necessity knows no law but self preservation. If you know it was in my mind to brain you as you sat there in an access of animal ferocity? At least you would have gone out of the world happy; it would have saved you—and the government—years of trouble, and me too. Oh, there was enough justification. Reason was on my side and opportunity as well. You would have done it in my place. There was murder in your eye when you asked for bread. Bread leonly a means to living; the end of living is freedom. A man will fight for life while there's a hope of freedom; when that hope is gone, he will blow his brains out."

"With your view," said Gordon, "I am surprised that you did not at least make off with the note."

"Perhaps I overlooked that alternative in the greater temptation to kill you. The probability was that you had other notes in your cave—money enough to make escape certain."

"If you felt yourself justified, why didn't you kill me?"

"For fear of a reason—a sentimental one. Something in your face, in your face—not the murderous expression in it, you may be sure—deterred me. I felt, just at the critical moment, as if I were about to kill my dearest friend. And I can't shake off this womanly feeling while I look at you—think's the queer thing."

"Some personal resemblance?" Gordon suggested.

Ivan Dontkremember nodded gloomily and turned his eye again on the fire.

"It's an odd coincidence that my resemblance to a Russian has not only saved my life, but was the cause of my life being illegally."

"What Russian?" asked Ivan, turning quickly.

"Then—Prince Borgensky."

"Turse!" cried Ivan, starting to his feet "Is he alive?"

"He was when we left him not two months ago."

"Where was he then?"

"In London."

"Thank the fates!"

"You know him?"

"Who knows Russian who lived five years ago does not know Turse?"

Then he broke into Russian, spouting, pointing Turse with pointed fingers in words that I failed to follow. Suddenly he checked himself, and turning to us he said, as if to excuse himself:

"I have been dead five years and buried in the fortress of Petropaulovsk. One knows nothing there. There was no political prisoner in our gang—all outthroats and scoundrels—they could tell me nothing. What should they know of Turse?"

And after a pause he added, with a pathetic tremor in his voice:

"I thought he must be dead, too—my friend."

His walked slowly round the fire to indulge his reflections, touching an ember here and there absently with his stick. Coming close to where I sat, silent in sympathy, he said:

"Did you know him—Turse?"

"Intimately."

"Is he well? What is he doing? How does he pass his days? Tell me all about him."

"You can answer these questions better than I," said Gordon, nodding to me.

I spoke, telling of our everyday life and of the work Turse was doing.

"Ha, ha!" exclaimed Ivan gleefully when I had described the groups of stationary. "He still sticks to his guns, the good fighter Turse. But do they leave him alone—the police?"

"Why, no more luck!" Gordon replied, and then he told of the attempts made to kidnap Turse and of the bungry chance by which I had saved him, though he afterward my success not to chance, but to courage and dereliction.

"I beg your pardon," said Ivan, bowing to me. "I did you an injustice, thinking that you English women could do nothing but faint. But who is it at the bottom of this conspiracy—do you know that?"

"I am ashamed to say he's a countryman of mine. At least he speaks the same language," said Gordon.

"An Irishman!" asked Ivan sharply.

"Yes."

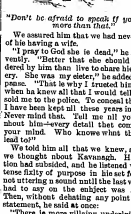
"Fitzmaur! Quick!"

"Barry Kavmagh."

"Infernal villain!" muttered Ivan through his clinched teeth.

"Do you know him?"

"Yes, and with good reason. Is he married? Do you know of any woman who calls herself his wife? A woman—she should be 30 now—with blue eyes and a timid, pretty face. Do you know her?" he asked eagerly. "Don't be afraid to speak if you know more than that."



"Don't be afraid to speak if you know more than that."

We assured him that we had never heard of his having a wife.

"I pray to God she is dead," he said fervently. "Better that she should be murdered by him than live to share his treachery. She was my sister," he added after a pause. "That is why I hate him. But when he knew all that I would tell him he sold me to the police. To conceal that fact I have been kept all these years in prison. Never mind that. Tell me all you know about him—every detail—no matter how trivial. Who knows what this may lead to?"

We told him all that we knew, all that we thought of Barry Kavanagh. His education had subsided, and he listened with intense facity of purpose in his set features, not uttering a sentence till the last word we had to say on the subject was spoken. Then he turned upon me with the question, or statement, he said at once:

"There is some villainy underlying this than you dream of. Does he owe you money?"

"A trifle—a few pounds upon our last game of cards, that's all."

He rose to his feet once and asked a question which was not intended for my ears. Gordon shook his head in the negative and then asked:

"Was there sufficient reason for his sending us out of England?"

"For getting rid of mademoiselle, certainly, but for nothing more. Otherwise there was motive enough for an ordinary villain, but not enough for such a villain as Kavanagh."

"At any rate, now we are here, we may begin to suspect with his help that poor old Turse will we left alone unless the minister of police, who must know that I am not Turse'——"

"Oh, he knows that well enough!" said Ivan Dontkremember with a bitter laugh. "Kavanagh wouldn't attempt to deceive him. His agents have been carried out with his consent. The minister's ironclad contract was to satisfy his avenger the czar. That is done, and Kavanagh is given sufficient guarantee that Tarsa shall be heard of no more. He will be allowed before that term ccrps to burst, unless"—he added cynically—"unless after a moment's pause he asked abruptly, "You have money?"

"Plenty—in London."

"But here?"

Gordon did not know how much he had. Just before starting he put a notebook containing all the ready money he his pocket on the chance of money being needed for the rescue of Tarsa, and some of these notes he changed into Russian money at Moscow. He pulled out his case again, and counting it found that besides the note for a thousand rubles he had two of a hundred and five English notes of £5 each.

"Not enough," said Ivan in a tone of disappointment. "But put them up. Guard them as you would your life. They may be worth more than that even."

With the fear that some of the escaped convicts might even now be watching us, I turned my head, and slanting among the scattered trees behind me I distinctly saw a white face standing out of the darkness.

I sprang up with a cry of alarm. Gordon was by my side in a moment. "There's no danger," said Ivan, who had stepped forward a couple of paces with his stick tightly grasped. "It's only my friend, bonest Schemyl."

Schemyl stalked across the opening, a pistol resting on his shoulder—thinking aoout, I suppose, the reward he was losing by leaving us behind," said I.

"Oh, don't you bother about us. If the old rascal and all his pals like to come in a rabble, we shall still have 900 left. And that will carry us on capitally—oh, old chap!" he asked, turning to Ivan Dontkremember and clapping him familiarly on the shoulder, as though he had completely made up his mind to break down all barriers and be as they were going to be friends for brotherhood and good fellowship.

"There's no alternative," said Ivan gravely when he had overcome the shock of this accident. "We must go at once where we are, get some sort of a map, make our way to the frontier on foot, and so escape."

"Why, certainly. It sounds as if there were something in that," said Gordon.

"Not much, I am afraid. The difficulties are enormous, especially with the winter upon us. The chances of running the blockade is very small indeed."

"Any chance is better than none at all. Come, my dear sir, this will be nothing to leaving us."

"Yes or no?"

"Yes, of all. Why shouldn't I go with you? Do you think I am selfish, after all we've gone through together?" I asked, my eyes filling with tears.

"Heaven forbid I should do you that injustice. But those children—you have left our friend speaking of—remember you are only a girl, though quite as brave as the best of us."

"I won't hinder you. You shall never hear me complain," I urged.

"I have not the slightest doubt that whatever happens you will be brave in the encounter and be a help, as she certainly would be a comfort to me," said Ivan, with more courtesy and kindness than he had yet shown me. "But there is one serious objection. This journey may occupy months, and during that time we are doing nothing to save Tarsa."

My heart sank within me in shame. I had forgotten Tarsa—Heaven forgive me!—for the moment.

"At my moments Kavanagh may receive orders to release Tarsa. The prospect of that at once would inevitably lead to the latter being given. When it is given, Kavanagh will obey it ruthlessly."

"I will go to him," said I, as eagerly as I had prayed to stay with Gordon the minute before.

"It is advisable to look well at that before you decide," said Ivan. "It is by no means certain that you would go—indeed, Schemyl, with the greatest incentive to get rid of us through, very fast. Some trusted confidant may think it advisable to betray him; some jealous official may be dissatisfied with his influ. At that case you have all hope of seeing Tarsa again. If you remain—and on the road, you don't never—this friend again. You will be banished as they made these attentions in my appearance, and still more heavily when a duel will complicate the matter. As we walked across the room, my hands folded, and assuming a cruel leaden eyelids, with the step of an elderly person, to look at my self in the glass. For a moment or two I stood gazing before the mirror in amazement, for it is no exaggeration to say that I did not know myself. I looked like a woman of advanced age who "has seen trouble," and the general effect was heightened by the appearance of fatal debility in my dress.

Thus dressed, I arrived in London on the morning of Feb. 5—three months without a letter—with the dress of my captors.

"Keh, mum!" asked a porter, touching his cap as I stepped out of the train. I nodded assent.

"Your wheeler," he called, without hesitation. So better compliment than that could have been paid to the perfect disguise I had assumed.

"Where to, lady?" asked the cabman at the next moment.

"Carter street, Houndsditch," said I in the falsetto of old age.

The owner of Carter street I discharged the cab. A few doors down I saw a shop with the name of Lazarus over it. Lazarus, further," I entered and told the clerk Lazarus I wished to see Mr. Lazarus himself.

"What name?" he asked.

"Tell him I have come from Petsr Schemyl," I replied.

I was shown into a private office, where a stout, dark eyed man with a black beard received me. He eyed me curiously as I took out from my purse the notes from the purse which now contained my precious money. It was not the first mysterious visit or perhaps who had brought him a message from the heart of Russia.

He took the minute sheet of closely folded thin paper, carefully opened it, and having read it in London," said Gordon.

"You are to give me an order for £200, he said.

"Here it is," I replied, giving up the last of the papers with a feeling of relief.

"There may be some difficulty in cashing this," he observed, raising his eyebrows as he looked at the bank note. "Have you any objection to going with me to the bank?"

I agreed to this proposal, and he sent for a cab, in which we went together to Lombard street.

"You had better come in with me," said Mr. Lazarus. "An introduction is sure to be wanted."

We entered the bank, and he presented the strange order. The clerk examined it and then took it into the manager's office. After a brief interval of two minutes he returned, and handing the paper back to Mr. Lazarus said:

"I am sorry to tell you that we cannot cash this order at sight."

"Can I see the manager? The irregularity can be explained."

"It is a question of irregularity. We have examined Mr. Gordon's account and find that he has only £100 to his credit. If you draw the whole of his deposit the day he left—that is," the clerk said, correcting himself as if he had made a mistake, "should have said, "on the 12th of November last year."

Mr. Lazarus turned to me and raised his eyebrows in silent interrogation.

"I left for all his interest on the day he went away?" I gasped.

"On the 13th of November," the clerk replied.

Mr Lazarus handed me the order with a bow of mock civility, shrugged his shoulders as he nodded to the clerk and turned on his heel, evidently wishing it to be understood that he washed his hands of the affair and had nothing more to do with me. I followed him to the door thunderstruck, unable to reason under this terrible blow.

"I am sorry I can do nothing," he said, turning him on the pavement as he was about to step into the cab.

"Well, I advise you to be more careful in the future. It's a lucky thing for you that the manager did not think it worth while to put the matter in the hands of the police."

In speechless dismay I watched the cab drive off, feeling that with it all hope was going beyond recall, and then, bewildered and helpless, I yielded to the stream of hurrying city men and somehow I found into a quiet turning, where it was possible by a poor creature to collect her scattered wits.

Stupidly, in my desperation, I looked round as if I might find guidance at hand. There was not a soul in the court but a man in a white sleeve, painting something on a doorpost. My heart sickened as I realized a fact. Then suddenly my eyes rested on the painter's hand. He was writing a name on the doorpost. I spelled out what he had written, "E. Pelham, solicitor, second flr——"

A ray of hope flashed upon my darkened mind. I had heard Tarsa speak of getting a solicitor's address in the first instance of business. Might not this solicitor advise me? I had intended to pay him—the rest of the English notes Gordon gave me. There could be no harm in trying if I kept up my assumed character and took proper precautions. I went up to the second floor, and after pausing for a minute outside the freshly painted door on which I read the name of the solicitor I entered the office with every sense on the alert. I remember that then a very unwinded door creaked as I pushed it open; that there was a strong smell of paint; that everything was painfully new. Even Mr. Pelham himself seemed new, he was so attentive, so anxious to get me into his inner office as soon as he learned that I wished to have his advice upon an important question. He was a thin, eager, little man, with a clean shaven face and a pleasant, birdlike expression in his sharp, close twinkling eyes. He reminded me of a sparrow with a large brood on the look-out for the smallest crumb.

"Do you know any one named Kava nagh?" I asked when we were seated face to face at his writing table, with the spotless blotting pad and the new stationery case and writing materials between us.

"Well, madam, I can't say that I do," he answered reluctantly.

"Any one named Gordon?"

"Gordon, Gordon, now," reflectively. "No, madam. You see, madam, my practice has up to now been in another port of the metropolis."

"Perhaps you know Prince Borgensky?"

"I have heard of him of course, but I have not the pleasure of knowing him."

"Can I rely upon your not repeating a word of what I tell you to any living creature?"

"Absolutely, madam. You must understand that my professional reputation would be ruined if I betrayed, even by wans of care, anything confided to me by a client."

John Dalnard, who was on the police force for awhile (and who was one of the best men who ever netted in that capacity in this city) passed through the city on Monday with the body of his wife en route for Mentor for burial. Mr. Dalnard had not been married very long and his bereavement comes with crushing force.

Senator Burkhardt is expected up this week. The senator has a long pull for the nomination as state treasurer on the Republican ticket, and if nominated will of course be elected. He has many friends in this neck of the woods who would like to see him secure the nomination.

Col. Stadsvold came in from Fosston on Tuesday, to transact business at the county seat, and to get some of the Queen City ozone.

The partnership heretofore existing between Craig & Wilson has been dissolved, Mr. Craig retiring. Mr. Wilson will continue to do business at the old stand.

John Wyatt: The directors of the driving association will hold a meeting on the 26th of this month, and the annual meeting of the stockholders occurs on the 5th of February.

Chas. Misner: I expect a pull of three necked, bald-headed eleans from Everett, Washington. I have eaten what they call "cleans" in this man's country at three or four shillings a dozen, but I can assure you they ain't in it by the side of a Washington clam. They are the best I Everett."

A home-sick wanderer in western lands writes: "Please sent me some money right away quick auick. I wish I don't leaf mine brudder and mein mudder and vent avay off cold vest already and ven I got me back some more times I know me vell enuff to stay here all de times don't id?"

An East Grand Forks man is agitating the idea of bringing artesian water into the city from a well located some miles east in the country. He thinks he could pipe it into a tank for a cent per gallon or perhaps a trifle more. It is said that people are giving the project serious consideration.

A little boy came to live with Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Cox at their temporary quarters in the residence of A. A. Olds Esq., on Monday of this week. It will be remembered that Mrs. Cox was taken from the burning building at the time of the St. Louis hotel fire to the residence of Mr. F. Bivins, and later Mr. and Mrs. C. sought temporary quarters with Mr. Olds.

Engineer White: "Talk about sickness in Crookston! Why we are not in it with Grand Forks, and yet a Grand Forks paper would try to make out that Crookston was a very unhealthy place. I think the river water is responsible for the prevailing sickness in both places, and I wonder why Crookston people will persist in using it when artesian water can be had so easily. I tell you Grand Forks people would give a great deal if they get such water so easily."

It has become such a notorious fact that Commissioner Demer's actions on the county board are controlled by Commissioner Veseth, that a correspondent of the Minnatonk Tribune is moved to suggest that Demer be considered as personal property, and should be assessed to his owners. The correspondent thinks that in the printing deal Demer should be assessed to Klosch and McKenna, in the amount of $2,500, as he yielded that much profit to the latter. It is quite a pertinent suggestion.

John Ristow was in from the farm on Monday. John says he has passed through a siege of sickness such as he does not care to repeat again right away. Says for the last four weeks he has had to be up nearly all night with the sick ones but they are all convalescent now. He speaks in the highest praise of Dr. Lankester, of Fisher who was his physician. Says John: "I tell you Dr. Lankester is the best man I ever saw in cases of typhoid fever. I just believe his care saved some lives in my family all right enough and I count him one of the best physicians I ever had in my family."

Chief Gonyea and K. R. Nerland returned from St. Paul Wednesday morning, where they had been as witnesses in the U. S. Court. Our readers will remember that sometime since a man was arrested for passing a bill of spurious money at T. G. Thompson's place. Later a charge of passing counterfeit money was lodged against him, and a United States Marshal took him to St. Paul. On trial he was cleared on the ground that the bill was not a counterfeit of any money in existence.

Those personal tax notices are giving everybody the blues.

Marens Johnson was in the city on Wednesday looking up business matters.

Tuesday night was the coldest for January, and one of the coldest for winter.

John O. Bihlu, of Mentor, was transacting business at the county seat this week.

The Fertile Journal says it will oppose division on the line proposed at the coming election.

Peter Renne, a son of Ole P. Renne, is associated with Fyge A. Kroton in the restaurant business. The boys will make a good team.

Now that Bombergers is worked off in good shape whatever will the Crookston Philanderer of Grand Forks have to talk about?

Our warm spell took a violent cold and Sunday dawned cold as Greenland. We have our consolation that such weather cannot continue many months yet.

Comrade Swift, of Mentor, dropped into the post meeting last Friday evening. The attendance this winter is encouraging.

On Sunday morning Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Hathaway received the sad intelligence that their only remaining daughter, Emma, is very low with consumption at her home in Maine and her death is expected to occur any day.

Miss Lizzie Zarracher came home from her school at St. Hilaire on Friday evening, quite ill.

Many of our subscribers have remembered us during the past week, for which they have our sincere thanks. The JOURNAL will continue to put forth its best efforts in behalf of all the people and the evidences of appreciation which we have are encouraging.

Miss Emma Veronneau went over to Grand Forks on Saturday to see a sick sister.

Quite a number of Odd Fellows and members of the Rebekah lodge went down to Ada last Saturday, to assist in organizing a lodge of Rebekahs there.

The adjusters, some of them, arrived on Wednesday and spent the day looking over the losses by the recent fires. The others arrived this morning and the losses will probably be adjusted to-day.

Hellock and St. Vincent are agitating the subject of encouraging the cheese factories. Kittson County farmers have come to the conclusion that the all wheat idea is ruinous.

The lecture at the M. E. church last Thursday evening was well attended and enjoyable. The house was crowed to its utmost capacity and many went away being unable to obtain seats.

M. R. Brown predicts that horses will sell in this market the coming spring at from 25 and 50 per cent less than before, for many years. As will be seen by his notice elsewhere he will be prepared to handle horses on commission for all who desire his services.

Speaking of the Times; peculiar methods, the Fertile Journal says: "We do not believe in throwing mud at our contemporarys, but can't help but remind the Crookston Times editor that he had better sweep from in front of his own door yard before he accuses others of wrong doing. As a publisher of a legal newspaper we had as good a right to compete for the county printing as the Times, and we can truthfully say we used only honorable means in competing for the same."

If the use of river water is the cause of the cases of typhoid fever—and it certainly would seem to be, it is folly to continue its use from the fact that artesian water can so readily be procured. It is a fact, though, that some people still persist in the use of river water in spite of the fact that some physicians have warned people against its use, and urged them, if they must use it to boil it first. Whether it is the river water or not the artesian water is by far the most healthy and should be given the preference. If we could not get artesian water at all how we would wish that we could.

The Grand Forks News speaks of the return of some East Grand Forks jurors from Crookston alive and well, as though it was a miracle that they escaped without catching the fever. While it is not a subject for us to rejoice over, as neighbors, it is yet a fact that goes with to contradiction that Crookston does not begin to have the number of fever cases that Grand Forks has had, and very few fatal ones, and it does not look well in a Grand Forks paper to say anything about local localities—unless talking about its own.

Ole M. Omlie was over from Grafton last Friday and dropped in to see us in the matter of that subscription. Says that while times are indeed somewhat stringent, he thinks the Northwest is not the worst place in the world.

A private letter to the JOURNAL from D. Jacobus, Vancouver, assures us of the continued health of himself and family. He says that "Democratic times" overall even in that land o' leal, to a greater extent, we should think than here. Late sends his regards to old friends and expecting the G. A. R. boys.

Otto Koeppe reports great dissatisfaction with what he has seen of the western country, and will get back to old Polk county just as quick as circumstances and steam will permit. He thinks he can be quite content to remain at home once he is safely back. Says people in Polk county don't know anything about hard times and never will till they take a trip to the western coast, then they will find out what hard times means.

Editor Hydal took a trip to Fargo last week.

A. W. Foss, the genial publisher of the Thirteen Towns at Fosston, was in the city on Tuesday en route for the old home in Canada, for a two weeks visit with the old folks for the first time in four years.

John McPhee, the hustling manager of the Lockhart farm, was doing business with our merchants Tuesday. Jack has just returned from a visit to his parents in Bruce county, Ontario.

E. M. Bivins: "I consider sheep-raising far more profitable than wheat-raising. I have a flock of something over 300 Shropshires, and have reached that point when we don't have to worry about the price of wheat I am happy to say."

Speaking of the candidacy of Senator H. Burkhardt for state treasurer the Redwood Gazette says: "Senator Burkhardt, the Wabasha senator for many years, is out for state treasurer. The Senator is an honest German-American citizen who has many friends and few enemies, all over the state, and if nominated would be a good runner."

Sad announcement of the death of Agnes Kops was received in this city on Thursday of last week. Miss Kops was for some time a resident of this city where she had many warm personal friends to whom this sad announcement comes as a personal bereavement. The Grand Forks Herald says: "The death of Agnes Vernet, eldest daughter of Charles and Mary de Bruyn Kops, occurred yesterday morning at 9 o'clock after an illness of eighteen days. Miss Agnes was born in Faribault, Minn., February 16th, 1873. She had resided with her parents in this city for several years past and was a general favorite in a large circle of friends. Miss Kops recently completed a two years course in voice culture under a leading teacher of Minneapolis, and her voice, now hushed in death, gave promise of remarkable achievement in the musical world. The funeral will probably take place Friday afternoon. The afflicted family are indeed profoundly bereaved and have sympathy in their sad bereavement."

Our genial friend L. C. Courvette, ex-treasurer of the city, says it's all right. He is not a newspaper man neither has he been (De) nemunerated, and the way it happened was this: He was driving home the other night in the cutter when the team took fright and threw him out onto the railroad track. Says he had heard that "frogs" were good eating but never supposed they were so hard to take. He is getting along all right now but his face did look like he had successfully run a daily for a week.

The many friends of Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Dampier have been very anxious during the past week over the condition of Mrs. D. who has been very low with the fever. Her brother in Dakota, her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. V. D. Carruth, and other Mrs. Al. Muller, in Washington, were summoned to her bedside by wire on Monday, as her condition was considered very critical. Since that time she has alternated between favorable and unfavorable symptoms with the result still trembling in the balance. Her friends continue to hope for the best.

The baker Riehle, who went out to the county with Otto Koeppe et al, writes that he shall be back just as soon as he gets rich-e-nough to pay his fare back.

Dr. M. Legace reports business looking up somewhat. Times have seemed so out of joint that even the horses could not afford to get sick, but Mike sees things coming his way again.

County Treasurer J. T. Beaudry is sending out postal notices of personal taxes due. By the way we had the idea that it was against the law to send out duns on postal cards.

Roy Arnold, who runs north on St. Vincent, line has been laid up 10 days with quinsy.

Gustave Dorman is another victim of the fever. Taken down last Saturday.

A. N. Priester passed through the city on Wednesday morning enroute for East Grand Forks to attend the funeral of Adam Mundigal.

Cheap Rates to California.

The Northern Pacific railroad company has put into effect a series of low round-trip rates to California points. Tickets are good until April 30th, 1894, and are good for stop-over under certain conditions.

These rates will enable those desiring tp do so, to spend the winter in southern California, or to visit the Mid-winter Fair to be held at San Francisco. This latter event will undoubtedly be second only to the World's Fair just closed, and will repay a visit as it will exhibit the resources and capabilities of California.

DISTRICT COURT.

The Jury Finishes Its Labors and is Discharged by the Judge.

A Few Court Cases Will be Heard by the Judge In Chambers.

A Gloom Cast Over the Entire City by the Death of Mrs Dampier.

Mr. Wells Minor of Euclid, Also Falls a Victim to Typhoid Fever.

THURSDAY JAN. 25TH.

The two cases of Merchants National Bank of Crookston vs Carl Kretzschmar were taken up. The two cases, being almost the same as to facts involved, were, upon agreement of counsels tried together as one action. A. C. Wilkinson counsel for plaintiff and E. M. Stanton, in the absence of Mr. Steenerson, counsel for defendant. The action was brought to recover on promissory notes held by plaintiff against defendant. The notes were given in 1886 for several thousand dollars. Defendant gave as collateral to the Merchants Bank—before it was a National Bank—judgments and accounts for collection and if collected to be applied on payment of said notes. He also gave a deed to Mr. Ross, individually, the then cashier of Merchants Bank. But it does not appear of record that said mortgage was ever transferred to the bank. The case did not get to the jury, but a verdict was directed, upon motion of plaintiffs counsel in favor of plaintiff for $14321.19.

The case of Joseph Netzer vs City of Crookston was then called, Messers Steenerson and Stanton counsels for plaintiff and DeForrest Buckles and R. J. Montague counsel for the city. Plaintiff sues city for damages done his premises, the Germania hotel, during the time of the cave-in of the sewer under the Great Northern railroad, which caused the sewerage to back up and start in the cellar. He claims to the amount of $2,300.

The jury were taken over to view the premises and see the damages and the location.

FRIDAY.

The Netzer case consumed the day.

SATURDAY.

The jury in the case of Netzer vs City of Crookston received its instructions from the court and retired to deliberate. In two hours a verdict was returned in favor of plaintiff for $800.

A jury was called in the case of Patrick Kelly vs Levi Broullette. This is an action in replevin. It appears that defendant raised a crop on the farm of his father in Town of Gentilly in 1893. H. T. Gondron of Gentilly had a judment against Michael and of Levi and Edmond Broullette. It appears that Edmond claimed the crop and gave a chattel mortgage on it to Mr. Gondron. Mr. Gondron issued an execution and had the crop—about 100 acres of wheat—sold in August; the plaintiff buying it for $90. Levi Broullette the defendant replevined the wheat. Plaintiff rebounded it. The defendant is still in possession of the crop. Plaintiff sues for return of the wheat or in case return cannot be had, the value of $90. The case went to the jury shortly before noon, and in a short while a verdict was rendered in favor of plaintiff; that he is entitled to the possession of the property or the value of it, $90.

After calling a jury in the case of Ingebrit Anes vs Hugerud & Sorum and opening the case, court adjourned until two o'clock p. m.

The last Herring is now on the griddle to fry. This case, being the last above named and an action in replevin. It appears that the defendant had a chattel mortgage on two cows, a pony and buggy, etc., the property of plaintiff. The amount was $85. Plaintiff came to Fosston to settle the debt, but had no feed for the stock. He fixed up a deal with plaintiff got a bill of sale in addition to chattel mortgage he already held and took the property. Plaintiff also got eight thousand feet of lumber. The defense claimed by the plaintiff was that plaintiff was drunk at the time of the making of the bill of sale; and further that the property taken was more than enough to satisfy the mortgage. The case lasted until nearly ten o'clock when it was given to the jury. The first ballot decided the action in favor of defendant. The other jurors having been discharged when this case was called, these were now discharged.

The longest jury term for many years; five weeks of jury prudence.

There are several court cases to try, but court adjourned until Monday February 12th.

DOTS.

One case the jury could not come to an agreement on.

No case the attorneys could come to an agreement on.

Tardy during the term, four; Fines—not more than one.

Death of Mrs. Dampier.

On Tuesday morning it was sadly whispered about on the street "Mrs. Dampier is dead." For a week anxious friends had waited with hated breath, hoping against hope while she lay, for the most part unconscious, fighting the terrible battle and on Monday hope began to dawn in the hearts of her friends as life still continued, but about 9 p. m. a change came that told to experienced eyes that the end was fast approaching and about 1 o'clock on Tuesday morning the spirit took its flight to that home where there is no more sickness, no more pain, no more parting. Her mother was with her to the last, having arrived from her home in Washington on Thursday of last week. Estelle E. Carrath was the oldest daughter of Virgil D. and Julia Cooley Carrith. In the bloom of the age of 14 in this city with her parents in 1878. Later on she was married to Dr. C. E. Dampier, which event took place on Wednesday evening August 4th 1880, since which time the doctor and Mrs. Dampier have continued to reside in our midst. Ever of a genial and social nature she had endeared to her, all with whom she came in contact and many have been the loving hearts that have anxiously waited news from the sick room ever since it became known that she was dangerously ill. Besides her father mother and husband she leaves an only sister, Mrs. Albert Muller, of Washington, D. C., two brothers, Lyna Carrath, of Park River, N. D., and E. C. Carrath, of Grand Forks to mourn an irreparable loss, as well as many friends whose heartfelt sympathy will go out to the mourning ones. The funeral obsequies will take place at the Episcopal church at 2:30 o'clock this (Thursday afternoon), Archdeacon Appleby officiating.

Rev. Sqaler's Lectures.

A great deal of interest is manifested in the lectures being given by Rev. L. W. Squier. They are discussed in the family circle, and criticised from every point of view, the unanimous opinion being that they are "just splendid." "Has Mr. Squier made that trip around the world," is a question sometimes asked, and when answered in the affirmative, the questioner remarks: "Well, he has a wonderful memory." The fact be it is not all a question of memory with Mr. Squier, for when he was traveling he noted down everything of interest and it is with the help of these notes that he is able to talk so interestingly and minutely of the lights and scenes in foreign countries. His third lecture occurs this (Thursday) evening and in it he will take his hearers from Japan across to Korea—so long known as the Herault Kingdom—thence down, the coast of China to Hongkong; thence straight to the equator calling at Singapore, and the island of Java; thence to Ceylon and across India, and finally to Egypt, calling at Aden, Arabia.

Wells Minor Dead.

On Tuesday morning the sad news of the death of I. W. C. Misner, which occurred at his residence at Euclid on Monday night, reached this office. On Wednesday morning the remains from Crookston Lodge No. 141, A. F. and A. M., went up to Euclid to attend the funeral at 1:30.

Prize Fighting Must Go.

In the prelude to his sermon last Sunday evening, Rev. L. W. Squier touched upon the recent prize fight, which he said illustrated more than anything else the fact that the sentiment in the country against prize fighting was on the increase, which was proven by the fact that Florida was the only state in the Union where the fight could take place, and that was because of a defect in the laws of that state. The next legislature of that state would undoubtedly remedy the defect, and then prize fights would have to take place outside the United States.

DULUTH & WINNIPEG.

A Meeting of Citizens Discusses Plans for Inducing

The Company to Build a Line Into Crookston-Committee Appointed.

The Surveyors are Said to Have Already Pased Red Lake.

A meeting of citizens was held in the office of Montague & Buckley on Monday evening to discuss the question of offering some inducement to the Duluth & Winnipeg road to build into Crookston. C. E. Sawyer was appointed chairman, and Lewis Ellington secretary of the meeting. After discussing the matter for some time it was decided to appoint a committee to formulate some plan and submit it to the citizens at a mass meeting to be held in the city hall on Wednesday evening. The following were the committee named: Wm. Anglim, C. E. Sawyer, John McLean, Lewis Ellington, Alex. McKinnon, E. M. Walsh and Jas. E. Morrisey.

The mass meeting held to consider Duluth & Winnipeg last night was well attended and of great interest. The committee reported that they had not had sufficient time to investigate and recommended that a permanent committee of five or seven be appointed to continue the work. A motion was made that the chairman (Chas. E. Sawyer) appoint a committee of five. Amended that the chairman be assisted in selecting the committee by Lewis Ellington, John R. McKinnon and E. M. Walsh, and that said committee consist of seven members. Carried. Alex. McKinnon moved that Chas E. Sawyer be one of that committee. Carried. Speeches were made by Judge Montague, Geo. A. Ralph, Alderman Moreland, Alex. McKinnon, E. Steenerson, Wm. Watts, F. Bielke, Martin Carlen, Alderman L. U. Jennings, John McLean and others, the great harmony and unity of opinion prevailing. The concensus of opinion was that the road would be of inestimable benefit to our city and the county, and not one dissenting voice was heard. The chair announced that the committee would be selected and made known later.

Information from Duluth is to the effect that the engineers at work on the Duluth & Winnipeg have already completed the survey of about 75 miles to the east of Red Lake. The line as now proposed will run along the south shore of Red Lake, and strike Thief River Falls and Hallock. The country is undoubtedly rich in timber to the Red River valley, and Crookston is more likely to get one of those lines than any other point in the valley.

Stop Tariff Tinkering.

We quote from a letter received by a gentleman at Nashville from a prominent gentleman in England who has been looking for investors in the old country:

"The English and continental people will never put another dollar in any southern schams or in any iron or steel enterprise until the American people have joined themselves up and showed the world that they were and are capable of establishing some settled policy. This disturbing reactionary influences, caused solely by a want of some settled policy, is unsettling values the world over."

Write to Your Congressman.

Send a postal card to your member of congress today, urging him to vote against the Wilson free trade tariff.

The Wilson bill (free trade) means: "Untaxed foreign competition; foreign competition means competition in cheapness; competition in cheapness means competition in cheap labor; competition with cheap labor means competition in flesh and blood, and competition in flesh and blood is slavery."

Memory.

There are 100 different varieties of memory, and perhaps we cannot altogether choose which we will possess, though every sort, when we have the germs of it, may be cultivated.

To learn anything by heart the best plan is to read a sentence and repeat it without a book, then read the next sentence and repeat the two, and so on. Repetition is of great importance, "line upon line." More is learned and remembered by reading through one book twice than by reading two books once.

After a thing has been learned it must be recalled and gone over at intervals, or the impression will fade away. Dr. M. Granville says we should take out our own ideas and dust them sometimes.—Interior.

THE NEW MAN.

Ira M. DeCamp is the New Head Clerk at the Dacotah.

Grand Forke Plaindenler: Ira M. DeCamp, the well known hotel man arrived in the city this morning to assume the duties of the position of head clerk at the Dacotah, made vacant by the departure of Jno. D. Bell for South Bend, Ind. Mr. DeDamp first entered the hotel business in Crookston twelve years ago, connecting himself with the Commercial at that place. From there he went to the Columbia in Fargo staying with that hotel two years. He acted as head clerk at the Brunswick at Minneapolis for a year and a half, going from there to Chicago where he conducted the Hotel Hayes during the World's Fair. Since closing the Hayes, Mr. DeCamp has been traveling in the south. His popularity among the traveling public especially in the northwest is sure to redound to the interest of the Dacotah.

Ada Index: The McIntosh Times says the Index was missed when it gave circulation to a report that Polk county would go Republican next fall. Perhaps it was, but the sources from which we gained the information are better judges of public sentiment in Polk county, than the editor of the Times. Personally we doubt that so great and good a change can be brought about in two years, but that there will be a great change at least for the better we are certain.

A WAGON ROAD.

A Proposition to Construct a Highway Across the Northern Portion of Minnesota.

It Will Run from Crookston to Tower and into the Rainy Lake Country,

Only $50,000 Wanted From the Government for this Important Enterprise.

The desirability of a wagon road across northern Minnesota has long been obvious to the people of this section, but no one man has ever been proposed for the undertaking. Now Elias Steenerson comes forward with a proposition to have the United States build it, and has written the following letter to Congressman Boen:

CROOKSTON, Jan. 23, 1894.

Hon. H. E. Boen, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.:

DEAR SIR: Allow me to call your attention to a splendid opportunity to benefit all we countries by getting the general government to assist in building roads.

The subject of good roads has been considerably agitated, and it seems to me that now is the time to move in that direction. It is well known to all that the great obstacle to the development of a new country is the absence of roads. It is also well known fact that there is no country that contributes so much to the general government as a newly opened up country. It seems to me that a law should be enacted whereby a certain per cent of the money paid into the general government from sales of public lands, should be set aside for a road and bridge fund, to be used to build and improve the roads in the town or county where such lands are located.

I hope you will see your colleagues in congress and arrange to have such a law enacted at once. Such a law would be both practical and prudent as well as just, and should meet with approval by congress. It is one step in the direction of the government improving our roads, which is so often spoken of. Besides benefiting such a general law, I also suggest that you make an effort to get an congressional road laid out and established as follows: Beginning at the northwest corner of Sec. 6, Tp. 149, R. 46, Crookston Tp., running due east on said town line between town 149 and 150, through Park, Beltrami and part of Hubbard counties to a point at or near the northeast corner of Sec. 1, Tp. 61, R. 35, at Tower City. This will make a road about 240 miles long. The 40 miles of it that the Polk county is already built and hence no appropriation need be figured on for that portion of the road. This will leave 200 miles of actual road to be built. I think a good road can be constructed for $250 per mile, hence an appropriation of $50,000 will be needed.

When it is taken into consideration that the government will soon receive an enormous amount of money from the sale of public lands in the district where said road will run, and the benefit which said road will be to the settlers who will have to pay the money, the justice of such an appropriation must be apparent to all fair minded men. The amount of $50,000 will no doubt be but a fraction of one per cent of the amount of money the government will eventually receive from this district. This road will have its terminus at Tower City on the Great Northern. Mr. Baldwin, of Duluth is evidently an interested in the development of Northern Minnesota as any of us, hence I have no doubt but that he would give the enterprise his undivided support. I do not know the gentleman, but I would like to call and see him to the end that your two may, shoulder to shoulder, carry out the project now outlined to a successful end.

Iam yours, &c.,
ELIAS STEENERSON.

Mr. Steenerson, when asked what he thought the chances were for getting the appropriation, said: "Mr. Boen is a hustler. He's not much of an orator, but he's a worker, and I think if he has time himself in the matter he will push it through. The balance of our Congressional delegation will undoubtedly unite with him, and I guess we can depend on our senators to takecare of the matter in the senate."

Great Northern Changes.

There has been a number of changes made among the officers and employees of the Great Northern road lately, beginning with the resignation of Supt. Jenks some time ago. Superintendent Scott's position has been abolished, and he has been given a run on the road. Master Carpenter McCabe has resigned, and his position has been filled by a Mr. Lindsey of the Breckenridge division.

HE WAS BARNUM'S PRIZE BABY.

Career of Signor Perugini, Otherwise Johnnie Chatterton, Lillian Russell's Fiance.

Whether Signor Perugini loved not wisely but too well on the stage in New York when he won Lillian Russell's hand and heart, both in the opera and in real life, the result of their joint matrimonial career alone will tell. They met, play-ball lovers on the stage three weeks and then decided that the wedding march would be about the sweetest music their ears could hear. If nothing happens to interfere with the happy ending of this stage romance, the couple will be married in March.

Signor Perugini, who has won fair Lillian's heart when unnambered dudes have vainly endeavored to do so, was born plain Johnnie Chatterton, but as the name sounded too much like home talent he changed it to Signor Perugini without ever "by your leave" to the New York legislature. His first star part was that of prize baby in Barnum's great New York baby show years ago. When he grew to man's estate, he went to Europe, studied for grand opera and was making a name for himself when deafness compelled him to temporarily quit the stage. His next venture was in light opera, and he has been a member of various good companies. Not long ago he played Christopher Columbus in "1492" in Boston. He is about 40 years of age, tall, decidedly good looking and possessing dark eyes of many candle power. These eyes, which are described as large, dreamy and soulful, are said to have particularly played havoc with Miss Russell's heart.

It appears that the coming event will be Perugini's first matrimonial venture, but Miss Russell has twice before heard the wedding bells. Her first husband was Harry Braham, and although he was a musical director their relations did not prove harmonious. Then she married Teddy Solomon, composer of "Billes Taylor" and other well known operas, but again marriage proved a failure with her. The fruit of that union was a daughter, now 8 years of age. Miss Russell recently secured a divorce from Solomon and is now free to marry for the third time.

DIRECTS THE BULLS AND BEARS.

The New President of Chicago's Board of Trade Is Popular and Brainy.

The regime of Charles L. Raymond, the new president of the Chicago board of trade, promises to be an important one in the history of the famous body. A million and a quarter of the organization's bonds will be refunded now that the 10 years of its existence have all but has expired, and the great tower that rises 325 feet from the board of trade building will be taken down at an expense of $300,000, for the reason that its enormous weight has already caused the structure to sink inches and threatens to entirely demolish it.

Mr. Raymond is an excellent type of the self made man. Years ago he began work in the stockyards, serving at first in a very humble capacity, and by industry and perseverance he soon began making a place for himself in the provision trade in Chicago. He became secretary and treasurer of the old Chamber of Commerce and was so diligent in looking after the affairs of the institution that when his name was recently mentioned for the high office he now occupies he had little difficulty in winning the prize. He is 53 years of age and is described as a moderately rich man. He dresses quietly, but in the latest fashion, rarely speaks unless he has something of importance to say, and his firmness, popularity and unquestioned financial ability will fit him for the ardnous duties of the high office Chicagoans have honored him with.

The razing of the board of trade tower will cause universal regret in Chicago. It is one of the tallest structures in the world and has long been one of the conspicuous landmarks of the city. At the top of the flagstaff, 325 feet above the street, is a copper ship 9 feet long, but it looks like a mere toy to the pedestrians far below. The tower will be razed to the roof line, and 280 feet of it in all will come down. A smaller tower may be erected in its place, but no definite plan of the proposed repairs has yet been made.

A type of firearm has been invented in England by which compressed gas is utilized instead of powder as a propelling force.

A LESSON IN POLITICS.

One Workingman Has Learned Which Party Is His Friend.

He was an excellent workman, but he got tangled up in the political manipulation of 1892 and was so battered by the operation that he did not materialize until after the election of 1893. But his bump of knowledge had grown sufficiently large to balance his loss in knowledge, and his wrath against some of his political friends had served him for an overcoat. After shying around the factory lunatered the office and opened proceedings thusly:

John—Good morning, boss. Fine morning, sir.

Boss—Hello, hello, John! How do you do?

John—I don't do anything now, boss. Can't find anything to do.

Boss—How is that, John? You got your party in. They carried everything.

John—Yes, but they keep everything they got. They give nothing to people like me.

Boss—I thought you were going to get an office. You worked hard for the party.

John—They promised me a job, but the boss had too many friends. When his city relations were supplied, he sent to the old country for more. They are coming yet.

Boss—But they'll take care of you by and by, John. You still belong to the Democratic party.

John—To—with the party. They are no good. I am looking for a job. I didn't earn a dollar since I left the shop. I am nearly dead now. When are you going to start up again?

Boss—That depends, John. Your party are now proposing a bill to put our product on the free list. If they do that, we must shut down entirely.

John—Now, boss, I am done with that party. I voted the straight Republican ticket last November.

Boss—You don't say, John. Did you turn your coat?

John—No, boss; I didn't have any coat, but I helped to turn my party down, and I hope it will never get up again.

AMERICAN TIN PLATE.

Here Is One Large Firm That Buys Some and Says It Is Good Too.

Up to late last fall we have purchased all of our tin plates in Wales. Along in November we bought 1,000 boxes of tin plates from the American Tin Plate company, Elwood, Ind. They cost us just 5 cents per box less than we could have imported them for. The quality was excellent, and our canmakers were well pleased with the plates. In the manufacture of our cans last year it required over 10,000 boxes of tin plate. This season we propose to use all domestic plates. It will only be a short time before the competition between American manufacturers will bring down the price to a lower figure than they can be made in Wales and imported without duty, or nearly.

ERIE PRESERVING COMPANY.

Buffalo.

John Rigdon's Reasons.

John Rigdon was always a clean, shrewd, temperate, industrious man. When he came up and received a loaf of bread, as it was being distributed by The World charity, I was surprised.

"John," I said, "you here! How is this?"

"It's not my fault," said Rigdon. "Pitt-Dawson & Co. put me out of work at Amsterdam. The tariff is to be lowered. they say, and knit goods will come in from Chemnitz, Germany, cheaper than we can make them here. They work for $3 a week in Chemnitz, and we used to get $12 in Amsterdam."

"Do you think our old 50 per cent tariff increased your wages?" I asked.

"Why, yes. We got 60 per cent more wages in Amsterdam than they do in Germany. How else could we have got them?

"But they say, Rigdon, that wages depend upon demand and supply," I said.

"Yes, but we Amsterdamers would there be for knit shirts made at $3 a day when you could import them from Germany made by 30 cent labor? The tariff keeps that cheap labor out."

"Then what will be the effect in Amsterdam if the Wilson bill lowers the tariff 25 per cent on knit goods?"

"Our wages will have to go down 100 per cent," said John. "We boys will have to stand the cut, or the factory will stop. If 50 per cent tariff gives four times the wages paid in Germany, why, a 25 per cent tariff will make our wages twice as much as they are in Germany, or about 60 cents a day. We boys all see it now."—Eli Perkins.

Points From Great Britain.

The Irish Textile Journal, published in Belfast, prints a letter from a correspondent showing how the foreign linen industry is favored by the Wilson bill, and with its passage it says "the tombstone may be set over the grave of the American linen industry." The Manchester Textile Manufacturer deprecates too much trifling for fear it may hinder the passage of the Wilson bill. It says: "A good many opinions and a good many valuable figures have been kept back because Bradford men fear that capital will be made of them by American Republicans." But its joy over the free wool clause cannot be contained, and it adds: "There is 100 per cent less duty on the manufactured article from Bradford, and the American manufacturer will get only 22 cents concession on his wool for the two pounds that produce a yard of cloth. How, under such circumstances, can the free wool clause hurt the Bradford manufacturer?"—Philadelphia Press.

Work For Free Trade Organs.

"Give them bread!" is now the New York World's pathetic cry. Only a little over a year ago the howl of this free trade organ was "Give them a change!" Having helped to paralyze the country, it is well that Democratic organs should be turned into eleemosynary institutions and bakeries.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

FELT.

A plump little foot as white as the snow,
Belonging to sixteen-year-old Flo Lacasse Joe,
In a little red sock, with a hole in the toe,
And a hole in the heel as well.

A trim little foot in a trim little shoe,
Belonging to sixteen-year-old Miss Sue,
And looking as if it knew just what to do,
And do it in a way that would tell.

A very large foot in a homely array,
Belonging to Peter who follows the dray,
So big that it sometimes is in its own way
And moves with the speed of a snail.

Ah! a very big thing is the human foot,
In dainty made shoe or in clumsy boot,
So 'tis well there are various tastes to suit,
And that fashion can't always prevail.

The plump little foot—a beautiful sight—
And the trim little foot, so taper and slight,
And the very large foot, though much of a fright,
Are traveling all the same road.

And it matters but little how small or how great,
So they never grow weary of paths that are straight,
And at last walk in at the golden gate
Of the city whose builder is God.

Explaining a Prevalent Belief.

A superstition very prevalent among workingmen is the injurious effect supposed to be exercised by the sun's rays falling upon their tools. The best tools made for use in tropical countries are subjected to exactly the same amount of tempering as those made for home use, although they are to be used under a greater heat.

A heat greater than any which reaches this earth from the sun would be required to affect them.

No metallic or other matter is equally susceptible to heat as the sand of which the soil of the desert of Scinde, in India, is composed. It has been found heated by the sun to almost 200 degrees F. But to affect the temper of steel more than double this temperature is required. In the steel used for a lancet the temperature of the metal must be brought to 430 degrees, in razors and surgical instruments to 450 degrees, in penknives to 470 degrees, in scissors and chisels to 490 degrees, in axes, planes and pocketknives to 510 degrees, in table knives and large shears to 530 degrees, in swords and watch springs to 550 degrees, in fine saws and augers to 560 degrees and for hand and pit saws to 600 degrees, or to three times the greatest heat of the sun felt on this earth.

At 900 to 950 degrees soft steel and iron become much deteriorated, and cease to resist percussive action and strain, but their temperatures can never be raised to such a degree as this by the heat of the sun.—New York Herald.

MINOT LEDGE LIGHTHOUSE.

The Historic Storm Which Wiped the Original Structure Out of Existence.

The lighthouse on Minot's ledge stands within the shadow of a tragedy. It is the second structure erected upon the ledge. The first lighthouse and the lives it held were claimed by the sea. Begun in 1847 and completed in November, 1848, it was overwhelmed in April, 1851. Its destruction was the most tragic event in the history of our lighthouse establishment. The structure was an octagonal tower supported upon wrought iron piles strengthened by braces. The piles penetrated five feet into the rock. On the braces, 34½ feet above the rock, the keeper had constructed a platform for the storage of daily articles and had fastened to this lantern deck, 68 feet above the rock, a 6½ inch hawser, which he had anchored to a seven ton granite block. Along this hawser articles were hoisted up to the platform and there hauled. These improvements were convenient—and fatal, not, however, to the keeper who made them, for he was on shore when the storm which left behind the historic for its fury burst over the coast.

On Monday, April 14, 1851, there was a strong easterly gale blowing. At that time there were on the tower two assistant keepers and a friend of the principal keeper. The visitor became frightened at the first indication of a storm, and in response to a signal from the tower a boat put off for Cohasset and took him ashore. On Tuesday the wind swung around to the northeast, the most dangerous quarter from which the elements can hurl themselves upon Minot's, as they then rejoice in the accumulated fury of miles of wind over sea. By the 16th it had increased to a hurricane, and the tower was so completely buried by the heavy seas that nothing of it could be seen by the group of anxious watchers at Cohasset. About 4 o'clock in the evening of the 16th, as the platform was washed ashore. Then the watchers knew that the water had risen to within seven feet of the tower. At nightfall it was seen that the light was burning. It was observed at fitful intervals until 10 o'clock that evening, when it was finally lost to sight. At 1 o'clock on the morning of Thursday, April 17, just at the time of high water, when the outstreaming tide and the increasing hurricane met at Minot's, a violent telling of the lighthouse bell was heard. After that no sound rose above the din of the storm. About 9 o'clock in the morning a man was walking along the shore saw a chair washed up a little distance ahead of him. Examining it, he recognized it as that which stood in the watchroom of the tower. After this discovery no one had any doubts of the tragedy which had been enacted behind the curtain of the storm. When it lifted, naught was seen over Minot's ledge but the sea, its white crests streaming triumphantly in the gale.

It is believed by those competent to judge of such matters that the destruction of the tower was due to the surface which the platform constructed by the keeper offered to the waves and to the strain of the hawser upon the structure. Every time this hawser was struck by a sea it actually tugged at the tower. There seems also little doubt that the sum appropriated by congress for the building of the lighthouse was insufficient by about two-thirds for such a structure as the perilous situation called for.—Gustav Kobbe in Century.

"Yes, one person."

"Only one?"

"Only one."

"Can you tell me his name?"

After a little consideration, I answered:

"His name is Kavanagh."

"Ah! Do you know in what relation they stand to each other?"

"George explains was Kavanagh's friend; Kavanagh was George Gordon's enemy. He it was who had an taken away."

"Most interesting—as complete, chain! Did Kavanagh visit Mr. Gordon often?"

"Frequently before our marriage. He was at George Gordon's chambers in the afternoon of that day."

"I do not know whether your suspicions take the same direction as mine; but it looks to me as if Kavanagh had got access to your friend's rooms after the kidnapping and made use of his checkbook. Has that occurred to you?"

"Not till now. But it was pointed out that some strong motive was needed to explain Kavanagh's action."

"A stronger still may yet be found. It is not likely that all Mr. Gordon's property was in the bank. Do you wish me to make inquiries?"

"No. It will be time enough to bring him to account when George Gordon returns."

"Then, henri—may I ask when you wish me to do?"

"I want you to tell me how I can get money to bring him home."

Evidently the poor little man found it difficult to conceal his disappointment at this dull turn to an inspiriting case. However, getting the best fee he could on the affair, he said:

"Do you know anything of Mr. Gordon's private affairs—the name of his solicitor, or any friend who can be appealed to for help?"

"No. I know of nobody who can be appealed to."

"You yourself have not the means?"

I am badly stranded."

He sighed, and after reflection said:

"Well, madam, the only thing I can think of is to write to Mr. Lucraft and represent the case to him, of course avoiding the names you have mentioned. He may be disposed to advance the sum required upon their author if we promise him that Mr. Gordon is a man of honor. With your permission I will call on him this afternoon, and you shall know the result tomorrow morning."

After some discussion I agreed to this proposal and left Mr. Pelham, who declined to take any fee as the present stage of the case.

CHAPTER XXXIX.
THE MADNESS OF PRAY.

I couldn't get help it. It was stronger than I, as the French say—that yearning to be near Tarasa, to hear his voice and watch his lived—the house with which the dearest, the happiest associations of my life were connected, and after realizing the temptations as long as I could, wandering about the city with the endeavor to distract my thoughts by looking in the shops, I took a turning down to the river, and at the first station stepped on board a Chelsea steamer.

"Is it likely," I asked myself, "that I shall be seen by any one I know?" Nevertheless it was the hope of seeing Tarsa, if but for an off, that led me into this place of device, for, despite my disguise, I knew that I was doing wrong—that I was jeopardizing the escape of Gordon, the safety of Tarsa himself—by exposing myself even to the remotest chance of discovery. Most of the people on board looked like Lambeth folk. A gentleman was chatting at the Temple pier who, in the distance, looked like Kavanagh.

I shivered with suppressed excitement as we drew nearer and nearer to the spot in which all my fondest hopes were centered. My heart beat wildly as I caught sight of the thin line below Westminster, my head swam, and every object grew dim and indistinct before my eyes as the boat crossed toward Lambeth pier.

Prudence told me that here at least I ought to go below or screen myself, for every man on the pier knew me well by sight. But I was deaf to every voice, blind to every danger. I even caught myself envying the poor laborers upon the pier who were nearing home. Oh, if Tarsa might only be among them! If he would come on board, where I might feel his presence! There were many of the familiar faces close to me when we ran alongside, but not his. I stood up and strained my eyes as the late passengers ran down the gangway. It was not among them, and that vain hope was gone. But there was still the chance of seeing him at the window when the bridge was passed and I could get an unobstructed view of the house.

We passed under the bridge, suorting as the funnel was lowered, and then as the smoke blew away something seemed to smite my heart like the blow of a great hammer, for, looking back, I saw that the blinds of all the windows were drawn down.

"Great heaven, Tarsa is dead!" That was my first thought, and then, divining the truth, I said to myself, "The czar has conquered."

But this end of all happiness was too terrible to be accepted while any spark of doubt remained, and I tried to cheat myself with hope—as if mere belief could alter the course of inevitable fate, or hope make what was done. I tried to explain the drawn blinds by supposing a less dreadful cause for it. Poor old Mere Lucas was gone.

"Yes, she," I said to myself, grasping at this possibility. "Mere Lucas is dead, poor soul!"

Leaving the boat at Vauxhall pier, I hurried along Millbank, repeating this phrase again and again like a charm, and reaching Lambeth bridge drew near the old house, still striving to believe that my eyes had deceived me, yet faint with dread.

I could go no farther than the corner opposite the house. An agony of desolation paralyzed my limbs and forced me to cling to the rail for support. There was no sign of life in it. The shutters of the living room were closed; the blinds of the windows above drawn. The baths Tarsa gave me to plant in the boxes on my window sills the last week in March had been allowed and faded. The withered blooms hung over the edge. Even the foliage had dropped for want of attention. At the corner of Perry street one of the cornmen from the pottery was packing jars in his van. Heedless of the risk I ran—for there seemed no longer any need of disguise—I tottered across the road, and in a voice made weak and tremulous by emotion asked him if he could tell me where Mme. Lucas lived.

"Mme. Lucas," he responded curtly, still packing away the jars. "Oh, she's gone away. She used to live in the house down there se is shut up now. She's been gone ever since Christmas."

"Does—does any one live there now?" I faltered.

"No. Look here, missis," he added, straightening himself and scratching his head, "you've upset my reckoning of your questions. Here, Bill Wright," he called to a young man who was arranging more jars against the wall, "here's a party wants to know something about Mme. Lucas."

"I only wanted to know where I could find her," I said timidly.

"She's living now down in Surrey along with Mr. Tarsa," said William Wright.

"He is not dead?" I gasped.

"I haven't heard of his dying, mum, though I know he was very bad before he left."

My heart leaped at this. Oh, if Tarsa were only ill there was yet hope!

"Can you tell me where I can find him—Mme. Lucas, I mean?"

"I know it's Woking way where they live now. Betterford I think's the name of the place, but I can't be sure."

"Here," said the cornman, "run round to the hoffice, old lady, and ask for Mr. Kavanagh. He knows. Hand me up them quarts, Bill."

At that name I recognized the rashness of my folly, albeit neither the cornman nor William Wright had seen through my disguise—but a helpless madness into which my fear had led me. I turned away, reeling as an hour I was on my way to Betterford.

CHAPTER XLI.
A STRANGE DISCOVERY.

It was dusk when I reached Woking. The tricket collector at the station told me that I can get to Betterford in a trap. He had heard there were new people at Betterford Grange, but didn't know the names, though he was told they were foreigners. The Grange was this side of the village and the road to it was the second on the "Wheatsheaf," which was about half way, and London lit, as it stood just on the edge of the common as you come through that town. With this information I left him, and following his directions came at last upon the open common, and after walking back from the road, reached Grange—its twisted chimneys and many gables drawn into relief by a background of moonlit cloud.

The first face I faced the common. Looking through the iron gates saw a man hurriedly carriage drive I saw a light on the lower floor. I ran, hoping to get there, flagging to the base of the gate, I gazed at the light which sank low as I walk they were feel who reach a shrine after long and weary pilgrimage.

I gave myself up to sentiment and suffered my emotions to have unrestrained sway. Recollections of the night of May the slowly creeping clouds that mounted the heavens, the feeling of unattained and yet unattainable happiness—all brought me to this devotional ecstasy. Tarsa was playing the violin in that house, and I, who was a prisoner of despair, filling my hours with music as if I could hear it no longer and turned away.

I found lodging that night at the "Wheatsheaf." Early in the morning I left the inn to return to London.

"It's a little better than two miles to the station," said the landlord, "and if you want to catch the up train nicely if you step out a bit briskly."

Anxious now to get back and learn the result of the solicitor's application to Mr. Lazarus, I ran, as soon as I turned the bend of the road, that I might not miss the train. But presently my speed was checked behind obliged me to the passengers to pass one more in keeping with the character of a gray headed woman. The sound drew nearer and nearer, a couple of shaggy dogs raced by me, and, lastly, as I turned my head, the carriage rattled past. It was an old fashioned, lumbering one, and a gray lady sat on the back seat. She was on the further side, and speaking to him; her face was toward me, his inclined toward her in a listening attitude. They did not notice me—his hands on their faces was unchanged —but at this sight of them I stopped as if lightning from heaven had struck me dead and stirck me, for in that momentary glance I recognized both. He was Tarsa—she Judith! I stood by a roadside stone during the receding carriings in blank dismay, till the sound of the hoofs had it from my sight.

What did it mean? I asked myself a frenzy of jealous terror. Why was Judith by his side, smiling in his face? Had she taken my place in the affections of Tarsa? Tarsa given up all expectation of my rescue and made her his consort instead? Had he gone still further and married her while my back was turned? Was the most probable supposition. Judith was not a homeless, friendless waif, to whom such a confidence might be given as the total escape from destruction. With the consent of her guardian she would consent to live under his roof only as his wife. Where were they going now in that carriage? To the station undoubtedly, and thence to London. I might see him again at the station if I hurried. But I did not stir from the spot. The thought of seeing him again with her cut my heart like a sharp knife. I felt I would be safer for me if I never saw him again. Better for him too.

Suddenly it occurred to me that if Tarsa and Judith were going to London Mere Lucas would be alone. I might question her and make inquiries, taking care to conceal my identity and my purpose in case there might yet be necessity for concealment.

The train gates were unfastened. I passed through and walked up the broad path to the house. There was no need to assume the infirmity of age—my steps faltered with quaking fear; my failing courage gave me scarcely the strength to ring the bell when I reached the house. Through the glazed doors I saw Mere Lucas coming across the hall in response to my feeble summons with ponderous step, her white cap with the strings tied in a broad bow under her double chin first catching my eye. She opened the door and ar-ted me with a cackling laughter of the head, her full flips pursed up and a slight expression of mistress upon her face as she took in my shrinking attitude and shabby appearance.

My back was to the light. She could not recognize me, and it was only natural that she should receive me in that manner, but the strun'ensess of it frightened me. I was so used to think of her beaming with friendliness and genial warmth. Everything had changed so to these past few months that a return to the happy condition of it seemed impossible.

I tried to recollect the phrases I had rehearsed for the occasion coming along, but my memory played me false, and after stammering a few incoherent words in French and English I abandoned the attempt to disguise myself in desperation and cried in a broken voice:

"Oh, Mere Lucas, don't you remember me?"

She started—her lips fell—she turned me quickly to the light and exclaimed:

"Mon Dieu! it has come to this. You have been starved!"

For a minute astonishment bewildered her; the muscles of her face were agitated by conflicting emotions; then, recovering her self possession, she composed her features and with severe gravity told me that monsieur was not at home.

"I know he is not," I said. "I have seen him. He passed me in the road. I did not speak to him. I did not wish him to know me."

"One can understand that," she replied significantly. "Has madamemoiselle spoken to me?"

"Yes, yes. Mere Lucas," I faltered piteously.

Her coolness and formality perplexed me. I could not understand why she should use madame now that I had revealed myself. My embarrassment touched the good old woman, and she broke the painful silence.

"Monsieur is quite well?" she asked, with hesitation in her voice.

"Monsieur?" I echoed interrogatively.

"M. Gordon."

"Yes, but it is a long time since I left him, and I have traveled a long, long way to come here, and I find everything changed and altered, and—and"—I gave up attempting way to my feelings, I sobbed—"and I am wretched and unhappy."

I rose and went toward her, and she, springing up, broke through the barrier of reserve and clasped me in her arms, shedding tears of affectionate sympathy.

"Ah, my poor dear," she interpreted, "we are wretched and unhappy, all of us. All is so sad since the wicked Kavanagh came against the other. My heart melted the moment you told me who you were. I did know how cruelly you must have suffered to come down to this. But I felt that I ought not to forgive you all at once after deceiving us as you did, and look you it seemed as if you had no feeling for any of us not to send one word to us in our trouble. No, mademoiselle, it is not good, not right to get it as best we can. There, there," she said, she, drawing me down on a chair close by her side and nursing my hand in hers, "we are friends again, but you must not expect me to feel just the same toward you as if nothing had happened." Then, still saying me with pitying astonishment, she said, "And is it true, mademoiselle, that your hair has turned gray through all these hardships?"

"No—that is false hair. I don't want any one to know me."

"No, no, of course not."

"I didn't intend to let you know me, but I could not help it."

I promise you I will tell no one. No one shall hear a word of this from me, not even my poor master, and for a very good reason—it would break his heart to know that his little friend, as he used to call you, had come down so low. What a wreck! What a ruin! And to think that I am to blame for it all!"

"Oh, Mere Lucas, don't you remember me?"

"Why?"

"Certainly. Didn't I do all in my power to throw you together? Did I ever let him go to see M. Tarsa before he had put you into the front room to pay his respects to you? Didn't I flatter you and praise you first that he would make you his wife for the end?"

"He, who?" I asked in bewilderment.

"Why, that M. Gordon, to be sure. Whom else could I mean?"

I saw at last what was in Mere Lucas' mind, and the discovery took my breath away.

"And does Tarsa believe also that we eloped in that way—Mr. Gordon and I?"

Mere Lucas shrugged her shoulders, spread out her hands, subdued an incredulity cheekie that shook her abundant person, and then, with becoming gravity, replied:

"Mon Dieu! what else could he believe? "Tarsa thinks I left him to be—that?" I murmured incredulously.

"Fancy Mere Lucas thought I was now going a little too far, for she said in a tone of expostulation:

"Be reasonable, now it's all over, madame. You must not expect too much. To be sure, my dear master has never believed a word that betrayed the slightest disparagement of your fault, but what could he think? You and M. Gordon disappeared the same evening without leaving a word behind you, and not a word ever hear of you afterward is that M. Gordon drew all his money out of the bank the day after your flight. For a week before he came to see you every day, and your behavior was so odd as even to perplex me. You go out together one evening, and the next day you are so ill that a surgeon of note is summoned, and what happened—that some final arrangement had been made and some great event was about to take place. Come, come, madame! And how can one doubt what had happened when everything is done so secretly, and no word of excuse or pretense is sent to give things a respectable appearance after ward, look you?"

CHAPTER XLI.
PAST EVENTS.

I should certainly have blurted out the whole truth to clear myself and Gordon from this monstrous imputation, but that while I was passing for the words to come Mere Lucas said:

"One may live to be 80 and yet be no wiser for that, look you. An old woman may mistake the good for the bad and the bad for the good. I'm an inexperienced child. Look, for example, how completely I misjudged that good M. Kavanagh."

Again that name brought me to my senses.

"Do you see Mr. Kavanagh often?" I asked.

"Oh, there's not a week passes but he comes down and stops and asks for my master. I don't know what we should do without that kind gentleman."

I looked around, at a loss to know what further questions to address her.

"It seems very pleasant here," I ventured to observe.

"Pleasant is not the word for it, my dear, 'tis a paradise," she said in a most melancholy tone. "I should like you to see the rooms. They are beautiful, and it is a real trouble to keep them nice, for there is no dust, no smoke, no soot, and the linen keeps its color and does not need washing every day, and the garden it is a real picture already with spring flowers. And there are birds in every bush. That is the worst of it, you see why M. Kavanagh bought it."

"Mr. Kavanagh bought it?" I said in perplexity.

"He bought it for my poor master, because, look you"—she dropped suspended, her thick lips quivered, and she put her apron to her eyes and sobbed—"because he said he must go where he could hear of him."

I was touched by the old woman's grief, though still at a loss to understand the subject of it.

"And there's a kitchen garden," she pursued, when she had recovered. "The young radishes are ready for the table. To look at them gives one an appetite."

She dried her eyes, but to the same mournful voice continued:

"A poultry yard, too, and the fowls are laying more eggs than I know what to do with. Yesterday seven eggs, with white like a curd. You see what they are."

"Yes."

"M. Kavanagh found that for us also, and Johnson, the driver, a most obliging man, who manages the garden and is always willing to do anything for me."

She paused, and a quivering sigh and shook her head mournfully.

"Perhaps you don't care for a country life," she suggested.

"Mon Dieu! I would never leave it for a court! I could live here."

"Do you find the house too large? Is there room in it for you con don?"

"Not a bit. The garden is large, to be sure, but we only occupy part of it yet awhile. M. Kavanagh said we must keep plenty of rooms for friends when they come to see us, but my rooms are mine, and no one but mine! And he shook his head to every arm chair I put, saying on to the last. It would be wicked! One could see that he had nothing else to live for, my poor master.

"His last words?" I said, in a tremble as if the czar knew his intention and had resolved to strike the blow that very night, could be finished. One night—only a fortnight after the life had been destroyed—they came to the house, the messengers, and rang the bell. They must have known that I had gone out to bed, and that Tarsa himself would unanswer the ring."

"He broke off suddenly, as the sound of wheels on the drive reached our ears. They had returned, and she went out to receive him, leaving me still in ignorance of the calamity that had befallen him.

CHAPTER XLII.
WHAT HAD BEFALLEN TARSA?

I would have spoken to her, but restrained Mere Lucas to learn the worst and end my suspense, but fear, not patience, me and mane me powerless to move or act.

The carriage drew up before the door. I heard Mere Lucas' voice and then Tarsa spoke in reply. I could not catch his words, for I was confused, but I had been used to the voice to indicate that appalling change for which I was unprepared. Only one of these men—Kavanagh's agents—done to him that night when they called him to the door? Had they inflicted such injuries as to deprive him of reason? Then was the greatest misfortune I could imagine.

He was in the hall now. Every word he spoke was distinctly audible.

"Oh, there was plenty of time," he said, "we had nearly a quarter of an hour to wait before the train left. The air is soft this morning. Spring has come again, too. I will go in the garden till lunch time."

There was nothing in this to signify men tal derangement, but the strange manner in which he spoke with less decision of utterance than I had ever known him to use. And I observed that the sound of his footstep was not the same. At one time it had been inaudible footfall, now it was heavy and slow.

I went as far as the door, and there on the threshold I stopped spellbound. Tarsa sat on a garden seat on the opposite side of the lawn, his hands folded lolly on his knee. He was dressed in a suit of dark gray tweed and light and quick, now it was slow and heavy and limp, like the step of old age. Mere Lucas went on with him into the garden at the back of the house, passing so near me that I could have touched her without any movement of her skirt. Did he need her support that he was unable to walk with his own step? What had they done to him? Was he maimed for life?

As their voices faded away, suspense became intolerable. I stole cautiously out of the room and by the window looked down on the garden at the back. Approaching the door, I perceived Mere Lucas standing with across the lawn toward me. Shading her hand raised her finger to bid me be silent; then, stepping, she glanced back, raised her two hands and let them fall in pity and despair and ran to me

We don't see much about Bob Dunn's candidacy for state auditor of late. Wonder if Bob is Dunn already?

THE Minneapolis Times is waging a fruitless war against Mike Doran and bosses and it is rumored that "Mike" still "smiles serenely." The Times might just as well use its great matter on other lines of thought as the Republicans will take care of "Mike" all in good time.

THE editor of the Alliance Advocate at Hawning, having been discharged from the custody of the asylum officials says he shall now go back to his paper but thinks he will now pursue a more conservative course than he has heretofore done. This is a wise resolution for him to make.

IT is a cruelty to animals to suggest it, but we can't help but wonder what the Duluth Herald thinks now of its wonderful campaign in behalf of a democratic candidate for congress? Wonder if the Herald don't wish it had stood manfully by its guns and supported Searle, the republican nominee for congress?

IT is said that the Minnesota Hall and Storm Association is a benefit to community leaving many mourners. This is one more of Donnelly's brilliant schemes that was to have led the children of oppression out of bondage but—got them deeper into the mud. When will people ever learn that talk is mighty cheap but it takes money to buy bread?

IT is said that a Duluth mob made an effigy of Congressman Baldwin the other night and, with a band, paraded the streets with it, intending to burn it but was prevented by the mayor. While Mr. Baldwin was wrong in disregarding the wishes of 8,000 of his constituents, yet such acts as these are just as wrong and two wrongs never make one right. This action will have just the reverse effect intended. The people should have been contented with publicly condemning his action and then remembering it when it will count. They will no doubt know enough to elect a republican next time.

IT has been not a little of a wonder to us whence came Asst. J. Clark go way off into the Rosseau country, where nobody lives but Bill Dock's cattle ranch—and that left there years ago, or Billy and the cattle did lonesome—and start a paper called the Rosy Region or something like that. But it is no clear as mud now. Gov. Nelson's proclamation settled that. Brother Clark has no idea that he can hatch out a full-blown county seat in the Rosy region; that's what I think. If anybody kin, Clark kin, we reckon.

THE Tribune takes us to task in the drainage matter, saying that we did not do full credit to Senator Lommen, and our members in the lower house for their efforts to pass the bill. That was surely an oversight, for we ought to have said that they also stood right by the bill till it became a law. We also ought to have said that to Senator Henry Barkhausen, who was a tower of strength in the senate, the country owes a debt of gratitude that it cannot soon repay for his efforts in our behalf. Without the assistance that our members had, he took right hold of the matter and worked hard for it. We fully believe in the principle of "Honor to whom honor is due."

THE Message for February will contain a review of the Rev. R. H. Battey's temperance work in this judicial district, which is of great practical interest to any man who is earnestly striving to make the most of his opportunities. Aside from this resume it will be a very interesting issue full of practical hints to a better life. Mr. Battey takes an intensely practical view of the temperance question and argues that it is largely for the financial benefit of mankind to drink no liquor as a beverage. He has the facts and figures to show the vast amount of money that is annually squandered for drink—money that is worse than wasted bringing misery, disease and death in its train just as surely as night follows the day. In times of financial strin gency such us the present, such arguments should strike home with peculiar force and carry the weight of conviction. The drink habit—when once thoroughly formed becomes a disease whose effects can no more be resisted than can the ravages of small-pox, and it is so insidious by its social side, that it becomes a fixed habit almost before the victim is aware that it has a foothold, but there are hundreds—especially among young men, who do not mean to fully appreciate their danger, who might avoid a drunkard's grave if they could be made to feel the fact that it does not pay to drink. We will concede that liquor has its medicinal uses—fire and water are also good servants of mankind but terribly hard masters. If every man who is somewhat addicted to the habit would take this practical view of the question and quit because he cannot afford its use, if every young man would decide not to acquire a taste and a liking for the stuff, what a vast difference upon the general prosperity of the country this would have. What a vast amount of money this would pour into the channels of legitimate trade, one can hardly estimate until he stops to contemplate the millions of dollars which is annually sacrificed upon the altar of this Moloch. We sometimes hear men complain of their taxes, of the cost of food and clothing and of a hundred and one other things that do not absorb a tithe of the money the drink habit does, yet who ever heard a man complain of his liquor bill? We hear men complain of the profits made by the dealers in dry goods, in groceries and various other articles of commerce, and he'd ever so high the per cent of gain is u mere bagatelle compared with the profits of the liquor trade, but no business is this traffic that you never hear one of its patrons complain when he pays from 10 to 15 cents for a dose that cost the dealer promptly one cent. This liquor question is an intensely practical one and cuts no small figure in the welfare of the nation. All who would hasten the proper solution of the question should become a subscriber to the Message if they are not so already.

A LOYAL follower of Donnelly writes the JOURNAL that he "hesory we persist in upholding plutes and monopolists!" Well, great Cæsar's ghost! Some men are born with a little common sense and some have common sense thrust upon them later on, but our friend doesn't seem to be in either box. Because we do not tear our hair in the latest approved populist style our friend assumes that we are a sworn foe to the common people! It is this very spirit of intolerance, manifested by our correspondent and his like that is opposed to the very spirit of our age—the spirit of freedom. Why we do not pretend to be better than the average inhabitant of the country in which we live. Everything that we have in this world is right here in this country and dependent upon the very prosperity of the country, and it really does not seem reasonable to us that our correspondent would be willing in any way advocate any kind of a policy detrimental to the best good of the country—nor do we so. But the difficulty is right here! Our friend has become so thoroughly impregnated with the teachings of Fish and Donnelly that he begins to think there is nobody else on this earth but them and he has even lost his own identity and he accepts their teachings as gospel truth, that is all. The right of the matter is not a faithful follower of their false doctrines. And what is the essence of their boasted teachings? Discontent, sinister and solely. To make men unhappy and discontented with their lot in life, without giving them any of hope for the future. It is true that Donnelly is forever on deck at each and every election saying to the people: "Give me an office or profit and I will see what I can do." And that is all it ever amounts to or ever will. In stead of diligently seeking a remedy for the many evils which he says exist, and allowing the offices to break their necks seeking him to perform the lesser business, he seems continually fearful that the offices should not realize his invulnuble personality, and says to the people: "You are the most sorely afflicted race of people that ever existed and if you don't elect me to some important office or other I really can't answer for the consequences." We are really surprised that our correspondent, who is in the main a really sensible man, has not caught on to the racket long ago.

THE action of Congressman Baldwin is just what those Duluth Republicans deserves who voted for a democrat when they had a chance to vote for a Republican. Because Judge Searle did not live in Duluth some fool Republicans thought a Duluth democrat would subserve their interests better and voted for him. They knew the judge was all right—a true blue Republican, sound on the tariff, but he didn't happen to live in their little ballwick they slaughtered the judge and now they are come up with in great heaps—and it serves 'em right too. People have to learn in the hard school of experience.

SENATOR WASHBURN'S bill providing a right of way for the Duluth & Winnipeg through the White Earth reservation, is said to be sure to pass.

THE originator of the new tariff bill, Wilson, is sick. The people have been ever since they saw the bill and will be worse when it becomes a law.

THE story is going the rounds of the democratic press that Col. Bobleter will be a candidate for treasurer to succeed himself. The Col. has not said so yet and we have good reason to believe that he will not.

DULUTH is just now making a terrible howl because some hoodlums have disgraced the fair name of that city in the Baldwin matter. Serves you just right, confound you! The disgrace came when a republican city elected a democrat to congress instead of Judge Searle, the regular republican nominee. Face the music, boys, and next time you will know better where your interest lies.

NO DOUBT the Wilson bill will soon be railroaded through the House. It will then go to the Senate where it will be so amended that its own mother would not know it. It will then go back to the House to be emasculated again, then a conference of both Senate and House will no doubt hatch up something that Grover will sign. All this will consume time, meanwhile our business interests will languish. Manufactories will run on short time or not at all, and confusion reigns. What a glorious thing a democratic administration is!

THE Norman County Herald culls the Crookston Times to order for its habit of slurring and belittling Norwegians, and the Times 'essays an answer which is about the thinnest attempt at a defense we ever saw. The Times assumes that Norwegians are generally too ignorant to read English—for instance those who subscribe for the Red River Dalen do so because they cannot read the English language. The fact is that neirly, if not quite, nine-tenths of them can read English, and the balance. If they see any English in that paper are bound to know just what that article is, and if they have no children who can read it for them, will take it to somebody who can and will not rest easy until they find out just what it says. Almost the first thing a Norwegian will do when he arrives in this country from Norway is to learn to speak and read the the English language, and there are comparatively few of them who cannot both speak and read it. The Times theory is that the reverse of this is true.

IN another column will be found a letter written by Elias Steenerson to Congressman Boen, which explains itself. The project of the United States building a wagon road through northern Minnesota should meet with no opposition. The federal government will soon be receiving thousands of dollars from the sale of lands in northern Minnesota, and it is no more than reasonable and just that a small portion of this money should be spent in roads to develope the country. The section of country through which the proposed road would run is mostly timber country, and it is almost impossible for settlers to penetrate these woods. Some time ago the richest agricultural and grazing lands in Minnesota are in the northern portion, but without roads it is impossible to reach them. With a main artery or highway through this country, the lands would be settled up, and railroads would be encouraged to build into the country. The sooner the governuent can make the country possible of settlement, the sooner will it reeeive the revenue which must ultimately come from the sale of these lands.

THE Times, that boasts that it "gives all the news regardless of whom it hits," is strangely silent upon one item of great importance to the taxpayers of this county, involving the right of the commissioners to pay two or three prices for work that could have been just as well and faithfully performed at the lower figure. On Monday morning the county board was severed with a writ of mandamus, requiring them to appear at St. Cloud on Friday, February 2nd to show why they did not comply with the law in awarding the contract for the county printing to the lowest bidder.

THE COW INDUSTRY.

INTERESTING FACTS REGARDING MINNESOTA DAIRYING

Taken From the Annual Report of Dairy Commissioner Anderson — He Recommends "Pasteurization" of Milk—How It Is Done and the Benefits Derived.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 29.—Dairy Commissioner Anderson has received the advance sheets of the annual report to the governor. It is a complete review of the work for the past year, and makes a number of recommendations for the future. Among other thing the commissioner says that the laws of Minnesota regulating the sale of milk are very good as far as they go, but they do not go far enough. They are wanted more for establishing a standard of richness than anything else. He recommends, now that this has been accomplished, that the laws be so amended as to provide for the Pasteurization of all milk offered for sale in order that all bacteria or disease germs may be destroyed. Pasteurization consists of heating milk to a temperature of 70 or 80 degrees centigrade (158 to 176 degrees Fahrenheit) and then suddenly cooling. It is claimed that typhoid germs are destroyed at 58 to 59 degrees, vaccine at 60, pneumonia at 55 or 60 and tuberculosis at 60, but to destroy the latter the heat must be kept up for half an hour or longer, while for the others a very short time is necessary. In Sweden and Denmark they have big stations for Pasteurizing milk, and all milk sold must go through this process. Commissioner Anderson says that the time is coming when either this process or sterilization must be adopted in this country.

A comparison between the milk standard of this state and those of Massachusetts, Michigan, New York, New Jersey, Vermont and Wisconsin is made, and Minnesota standards for butter fat is shown to be much higher than any of the others.

Fourteen cases against milkmen for adulterating milk in Ramsey and Hennepin counties are reported. All but one of the defendants were found guilty, and in the case of the one is pending now before the grand jury.

Assistant Commissioner Grahiam also submits a report giving much information regarding the dairying interests of the state. According to this the number of creameries in operation in Minnesota in 1893 was 201; number of cows, 127,434, pounds of butter made in creameries, 18,916,300, value, $3,924,616.

The following table shows an estimate of all the dairy interests of the state:

219 creameries at $5,5-0 each	$3,5-,000
67 skim stations at $ 200 each	13,400
44 vacant creamery plants at $1,000	44,000
30 cheese factories at $800	24,000
600,000 milch cows at $20	12,000,000
18, 9-0,000 lbs of butter at 18c	3,3-0,200
1,040,000 lbs of butter at 15c	1,5-6,000
10,000,000 lbs of butter at 10c	1,000,000
2,000,000 lbs of cheese at 9c	180,000
Total	$ 8,822,000
Farmers making butter for factories	28,000
Canneries in Minnesota factories	23
Separators used on farms	200

INSANITY LAW VOID.

The Minnesota Supreme Court Declares It Unconstitutional.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 29.—Mrs. Blaisdell will remain outside the walls of Fergus Falls asylum and Frank Hoskins will go free, as the result of a decision handed down by the supreme court, holding that the law passed last winter regulating the commitment of insane persons to the asylum is invalid because in violation of section 14 of the United States constitution and also of that section of the state constitution which provides that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law. Another result is that 149 patients, at least, who have been committed to the state asylums under the new law passed last winter, if they have not escaped, or be taken from the asylums on writs of habeas corpus and returned to the counties from which they were sent for a careful trial and recommitment, and in this at the expense of the state. Still another effect is that in all probability the friends of some of the patients could sue the superintendents of the insane asylums for damages on account of false imprisonment.

Cheap Farm Products.

The new tariff bill has shown the evident intention of the present administration and of the free trade party that controls congress to abolish protection to farmers. A direct attack has been made upon the potato, the most widely growing interests, besides many others. The result of this will be a lowering of the value of American farm products through the importations from foreign countries. England, Scotland, Ireland, Canada and Germany stand ready to send us all the potatoes that we need. An open market in the United States would be a boon to the farmers of those countries, where the value of farm labor is reckoned at only a few cents per day, and where the price of 25 cents for a bushel of potatoes is of much greater comparative value than 50 cents would be to the farmers in this country. There will be less demand for American grown potatoes, hops or tobacco and other things, and our farmers must turn their attention and devote their land to the cultivation of other crops. What can they grow that will be as remunerative? These three crops—hops, tobacco and potatoes—are profitable, on an average, returned to the farmers better money for their labor and investment than any other crops, and they are singled out as special objects of attack by the free traders in the interests of the foreign farmers of England and Canada. The only possible chance that the farmers might have had to employ their land to good advantage would have been in raising sugar beet, but even this opportunity is taken away from them because it is proposed to kill the sugar growing industry of this country. The new tariff bill has been aimed throughout, from alpha to omega, with the one purpose of destroying whatever is American and of building up whatever is in an American and foreign. That is the policy of the party of free trade, the party that, unfortunately for this country, is now in control of its administrative affairs.

An Honest View of It.

The Union (Springfield, Mass.,) has more than once remarked that manufacturers and people of New England can have no objection to the free importation of bituminous coal, if they do not have to pay too much for it. It says further that free coal would be of great advantage to manufacturers if they use materials of other kinds, provided our manufactured products are adequately protected. But of what benefit will free coal or free wool be to us if we cannot sell our manufactured products at a profit? And if the duties on manufactured goods are reduced below the point which produces the superior wages paid in our mills, foreign goods will fill our markets, and our manufacturers can compete only by a severe reduction of wages. When wages are reduced, the purchasing power of the public is reduced, and the 75 cents gain on saved on bituminous coal will not go far to compensate for the loss. It is quite possible that under the new tariff foreign goods will be cheaper and American goods will have to follow suit if they are made at all. The mills will benefit people who have fixed incomes; wealthy people who never have to worry about tomorrow's supplies, but how will it benefit wage earners whose wages are reduced? It makes little difference how cheap a thing is if you have no money for its purchase. Free coal for free wool is not a boon when it is to be coupled with such reductions of duties on our manufactures that our labor must be poorly compensated or entirely unemployed.

A SAD BEREAVEMENT.

A heavy calamity has befallen our little community in the death of John and Robert Fleming, second and third sons of Wm. Fleming one of the most enterprising and best known farmers in the county. Both boys were taken sick on Tuesday the 16th, of typhoid, which latterly turned into hemorhage of the bowels. Robert the youngest aged 20 years died on Tuesday, and John aged 22 took place on Thursday at the Marais. The loss of Robert was hardly realized when it was evident that there was still a greater affliction to be borne by the already nigh heart broken parents, in the loss of their beloved son John, aged 22 years and three days who quietly and peacefully passed away about 8 o'clock on Friday evening the 26th, who was also interred at the Marais on Sunday the 28th. The end of both boys was peaceful and happy. These boys were well known throughout the country as young men of great physical strength and were young men of ideal habits and beloved by all who knew them which is a great consolation to the heavily bereaved parents. Both funerals were very largely attended by the neighbors and friends of the family, many coming from a long distance. Very suitable services was held at the house and church by the Rev. Campbell of Fisher. The JOURNAL begs to extend its deepest sympathy along with the many friends of the deceased, to the parents and rest of the family in this their great affliction.

EIGHT CREMATED.

TERRIBLE HOLOCAUST IN AN IOWA POORHOUSE.

Of the Nine Inmates of the Insane Department of the Boone County Poorhouse Eight Were Cremated—A Defective Flue Caused the Fire.

BOONE, Ia., Jan. 24.—The building on the Boone county poor farm, in which the insanely insane were confined, was burned at 10 a. m., and eight of the nine inmates were burned to death.

BOONE, Ia., Jan. 25.—It is now certain that the fire in the county insane hospital here, in which eight lives were lost, resulted from a defect in the furnace as there were no stoves in any of the rooms and great care was exercised that no matches should be allowed in the building. The poor farm, on which the insane hospital was located, is seven miles from this city, and word concerning the disaster did not reach here until 10 in the morning. The building burned was an old 2-story frame structure, which was as dry as tinder. To add to the inflammable nature of the place many of the partitions and some of the bed clothing was of cotton batting three inches thick. This was because only the incurably insane, who had been returned from the state asylum, were kept there. These patients were nearly all violent and the great amount of cotton padding was used to prevent them injuring themselves. The building was heated by a furnace which was last summer condemned by a local expert as unsafe, but no attention had apparently been paid to his warning and the fire undoubtedly resulted from neglect to replace the furnace with a better one. Mr. Holcomb, the steward, says he first knew of the fire when alarmed by Mrs. Hibbard, the only inmate who escaped from the building. He was in the main building, which stands but three feet distant from the "crazy" house. When he got out of doors the flames were of the frame structure, and it was a mass of flames inside. He burst open a door, but was driven back by the flames which, in a few moments, burned the building to the ground. The main building was saved by pouring on water which the best of the fire melted from a huge snowdrift alongside the building. No one saw the eight people who were burned to death, and whether they made any effort to escape can never be known. There seems to have been no attendant of any kind in the building where the insane people were locked.

Were Padded With Cotton

The dead are Mary Tucker, John Annesinggs, Anna Soderburg, Christina Anderson, Christine Peterson, Mrs. Scott, Tom Lesser, Joseph Craig.

THE ANTI-SCALPER LAW.

Judge Willis of St. Paul Declares It Unconstitutional.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 30.—Judge Willis of the district court has handed down a decision declaring the "anti-scalper" law of last winter unconstitutional. In the decision Judge Willis says the favoritism shown to railway and steamship companies is repugnant to the entire scope and spirit of the state constitution.

This statute, by creating a special class of citizens to whom such licenses may be issued, violates section 33 of article 4 of the state constitution, which declares "the legislature shall pass no law granting to any corporation or individual any special or exclusive privilege."

The New Knox's Novelties for Ladies.

With the beginning of the year appear novelties of Russian effects and modern adoptions of the first Empire; the latter being undoubtedly suggested by a recent revival of the Napoleonic studies which makes its influence felt into literature, art, the stage and even in urt. Thus elegant opera wraps are frequently made with empire yolks and voluminous Renaissance sleeves. The draperies already announced are being developed into many orlginal effects. Indoor gowns being influenced by those of the peplum description. The dress skirt is becoming wider at the bottom, and the sleeve also more voluminous. Bodices at the present moment, are taxing all the ingenuive genius of the artist dressmaker by being susceptible of every conceivable novelty in trimming and material. There has never, also, existed such a rage as the present one for fur and ermine above all. Some original designs of collarets in the Louis XIII style—drooping at the shoulders and very flat—are becoming popular among the new models. These various movements indicated in the toilettes of the mothers are closely copied by the fashions in girls dresses and even in the concoctions of very little ones themselves. In extracting these instructive items from the latest McDowell Fashion Journal we notice that the handsome publications still maintain the high standard of their former excellence and contain besides new features of special interest. They are invaluable for their practical advice to dressmakers and amateurs. Reynolds by written assignment dated the 6th day of January, A. D., 1894, and recorded in the office of said register of deeds in and for Polk County Minnesota on the 23rd day of January A. D., 1894, at 4 o'clock P. M., in Book 52 on page 519 and Whereas by the terms of said mortgage it is provided that in case of default in the payment of any installment of interest due on the principal sum secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, should continue for ten days, said principal sum shall become due and payable, and the mortgagee also contains a provision to pay and discharge all taxes levied and assessed during the year when they become due and payable, and also contains a provision that in case of default in the payment of said taxes for the space of twenty days after the same shall become due and payable, the said mortgagee, his executors, administrators or assigns, may pay the same, and which said mortgage also contains a provision to pay and discharge all taxes levied and assessed during the year when they become due and payable, and also contains a provision that in case of default in the payment of said taxes for the space of twenty days after the same shall become due and payable, the said mortgagee, his executors, administrators or assigns, may pay the same, and which said mortgage also contains a provision to pay to the said mortgagee his successors executors or assigns, in case of default in the payment of said taxes from the proceeds of the sale of the principal and interest which shall then be due on said note and coupons together with all such sums as shall have been paid by said mortgagee or his successors and assigns for taxes and insurance with interest from the dates of said payments and attorney's fee as the attorneys' fees together with all costs of such sale.

And whereas, said mortgagor failed to pay the interest which became due on the principal sum on the 1st day of November, A. D., 1893, and still failed to pay the same, and thereby the principal sum of said mortgage became due and payable;

And whereas, the taxes which were duly levied on said premises for the year 1892, having become due and payable, and not having been paid, the said assignee of the mortgage, pursuant to the provisions thereof, paid the said taxes and said mortgagor, on the 7th day of January, A. D., 1894, duly paid and discharged the said taxes amounting in all to the sum of Twenty and 31-100 dollars;

And whereas, the mortgagor failed to keep said mortgaged premises insured as covenanted in the said mortgage and thereby the same became void in the mortgage paying therefor the sum of Seventy-five and 00-100 dollars (75.00);

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and is actually due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, exclusive of any fees or attorney's fee, the sum of Twenty one hundred seventy-seven and 45-100 dollars ($217.45), for which no action or proceeding has been instituted at law to recover the debt now secured by said mortgage or any part thereof;

Now Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale contained in said to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of the premises described in said conveyed by said mortgage, viz: The Southwest quarter (S. W. 1/4), section five (5), in township one hundred and forty-six (146), North of range forty-four (44), West, and bid twelve (12), at auction, at the front door of the Court House in the city of Crookston, in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the 10th day of March, 1894, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, to the highest bidder for cash in order to pay the amount which shall then be due on said note and mortgage or principal and interest, together with said sum to be paid for taxes and insurance with interest thereon, and the charges of said sale and including said seventy-five dollars attorney's fees as aforesaid.

Dated January 6th, 1894.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"My little boy has been troubled with catarrh from his infancy. After trying several remedies without any benefit, I concluded to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial. When I commenced giving the Sarsaparilla to Lennie he was three years old and weighed only 22 pounds. He had not walked for over a year and was just able to creep. I gave him Sarsaparilla and Pills three times daily for over six months and he has taken only 3 bottles and he is as well and healthy looking boy as can be found in North Dakota. He has grown considerably and has

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Tuesday, Jan. 23.

Senator Wilson of Iowa delivered a speech against the repeal of the election laws.

Mr. Cullom, speaking to the Fyre Hawaiian resolution, moved the substitution for its policy and said Blount was no better than Major Andre.

The house straightened out the tangle it had gotten into yesterday, by voting to place all sugar, raw and refined, on the free list and to abolish all bounties. It was also decided in committee of the whole to put coal on the free list.

Wednesday, Jan. 24.

The attempts in the house to restore at least a portion of the duty on iron ore failed, and ore goes on the free list as far as the house is concerned. The debate was heated.

It is said that the debate on the Wilson bill is likely to be extended to Wednesday.

The senate briskly discussed Hawaiian matters for an hour, and then took up the election law repeal bill. Mr. Lodge spoke in opposition to repeal.

Thursday, Jan. 25.

The senate session was uneventful. The Hawaiian question, Carlisle's bonds issue and the federal elections bill occupied the time until 3 o'clock. After that eulogies were delivered upon J. Logan Chapman of Michigan.

Only one amendment to the tariff bill of importance was adopted by the house during the day—that repealing the reciprocity clause of the McKinley law. The entire day was consumed by the New York Democrats who were filibustering against the income tax proposition, which they feared would be offered, along with other features of the internal revenue bill as an amendment to the Wilson bill. Several Democratic speeches severely criticising the bill were delivered. A caucus was finally agreed on as the best way to settle the matter.

At the Democratic caucus a resolution was carried that the internal revenue bill and the income tax be added as an amendment to the Wilson bill. The time for debate on the tariff bill was extended three days, to give time for the discussion of the income tax.

Friday, Jan. 26.

The diamond schedule was the principal one debated in the house. It was finally decided to place a tariff of 10 per cent on unset, and 50 per cent on cut stones. The amendments to the lead schedule were defeated.

Saturday, Jan. 27.

The senate was not in session.

The tariff debate was concluded tonight, so far as it relates to the customs schedules. The time for ving amendments ceased at 5:00, when house took a recess. There was a great demand from both sides of the house for recognition for the purpose of offering amendments, but Mr. Wilson had the floor, and not one of them got in. At least 100 amendments were shut out. A series of amendments to the metal schedule, all making reductions, were agreed to, and the committee reported its action of a week ago and fixed the time for free wool to go into effect on Aug. 2 and the woolen goods to go into effect Dec. 2. This was accomplished by a change of front on the part of the Republicans, who voted on the former occasion to have free wool go into effect immediately upon the passage of the bill.

Monday, Jan. 29.

The general debate on the internal revenue feature of the tariff bill began in the house, but only one sensational speech was made during the day, that of Mr. Covert (Dem., N. Y.) who announced his unalterable opposition to the entire bill, because, in his opinion, it was framed to compel the incorporation of a new tax. Messrs. McMillin of Tennessee and Hall of Kansas ably presented the arguments in favor of the imposition of such a tax.

The Hawaiian controversy and the federal election bill occupied the time of the senate. Senator Teller of Colorado argued in favor of the annexation of Hawaii. The Hawaiian resolution went over and will doubtless be again discussed at length before a vote is reached.

THE TEMPERAMENTS.

The Fourfold Classification That Was Made Two Thousand Years Ago.

It is interesting to find that so thoroughly scientific a man as Professor William Preyer has adopted the fourfold classification of temperements made nearly 2,000 years ago—namely, the choleric, sanguine, melancholy and lymphatic. The existence of one or the other of these temperaments may be discerned, he says in his work on "The Infant Mind," very early in the great majority of children—in the second quarter of the first year, beyond a doubt. Nearly every one who has written about temperements has got up a classification of his own. Galen had nine, Haycock gava six, Graham Brown seven, and others have got down as low as two. Modern writers use the word nervous for choleric, and bilious for melancholic temperament. With these verbal modifications, the old classification seems to answer all practical purposes, and individuals can build up combinations as needed.

Hutchinson defines temperament as the sum of the physical peculiarities of a man exclusive of his tendency to disease. This is not very satisfactory, though perhaps tampersment is a thing a little too vague to be satisfactorily defined. In modern terms it may be said to be the peculier wey in which the individual reacts to the stimuli of his environment. There is no doubt that one class of persons reacts quickly and easily, expending energy profusely and often needlessly in their life work; others react hopefully and work hnoyantly, yet with less waste. We can thus distinguish the nervous, the sanguine, the melancholic, etc. A capacity to recognize and appreciate the importance of temperament need to be considered part of a sound medicel training. It has been too much neglected in our pursuit of minutiæ with microscopes and test tubes. Our teachers of practical medicine might well revive its study.—Medical Record.

Table Manners In Argentina.

"We encamped near a swamp," says a gentleman, describing a meal he had with some cart drivers in South America, "and supped on sliced pumpkins boiled with hits of meat and seasoned with salt. The meal was served in genuine pampe fashion. One iron spoon and two cow's horns split in halves were passed around the group, the members of which squatted upon their haunches and freely helped themselves from the kettle. Even in this most uncivilized form of satisfying hunger there is a peculiar etiquette which the most lowly person invariably observes. Each member of the company in turn puts his spoon, or horn, into the center of the stew and carries it in a direct line toward him, never allowing it to deline to the right or left. By observing this rule each person eats without interfering with his neighbor. Being unaware of this custom, I dipped my horn into the mess at random and fished about for some of the nice bits. My companions regarded this horrid breach of politeness with scowls of impotience. They declared with some warmth to the cook the foreigners did not know how to eat. I apologized as well as I could and endeavored thereafter to eat according to gancho etiquette."—New York World.

Curios About Respiration.

In each respiration an adult of the human species inhales one pint of air. A healthy man will respire 16 to 20 times per minute, or, say, 20,000 times per day, and 7,300,000 times per year. While standing, the adult average respiration is 23 times per minute; lying down, 12 times. The superficial area of the lungs—that is, of their alveolar pece—averages 200 square yards. The amount of air respired each day is about 10,000 quarts.

The omount of oxygen absorbed in the same length of time is 800 liters, or about 744 grams. The amount of carbonic acid expired in 24 hours is estimated at 611.5 grams. Two-thirds of the oxygen absorbed in 24 hours is taken in during the 12 hours from 6 p. m. to 6 a. m.—two-fifths of the total being thrown off during the day. While this is going on the pulmonary surface is throwing off 150 grams of water in the shape of vepor. The heart sends 800 quarts of blood through the lungs every hour, or about 5,000 quarts daily.

The duration of inspiration is five-twelfths, of expiration seven-twelfths, of the whole respiretory act.—St. Louis Republic.

Battles of the Future.

Writers on military science unite in claiming that future battles will begin with a series of hot skirmishes along the front. These skirmishes will greadually increase in heat and the number of combatants, re-enforcements being thrown in as circumstances, until the entire front is involved. Artillery will be used as far as possible, but after battle is fully under way little use can be made of cavalry save in outflanking. The day of charges in wars is gone, on account of the increase of range and effect in cannon and rifles. Little can be predicted of future battles beyond counting, inasmuch as the rest must now be learned by experiment.—New York Ledger.

The Worship of Images.

"Go," said the emperor to his courier, "and direct all those who would beliefs at variance with the state to throw into prison. And, by the way, stop at the treasury department on your way out and instruct my chancellor of the exchequer that the new issue of coine he changed with the image of Liberty, that thus we may please the populace."—Kate Field's Washington.

PROGRESS UNDER PROTECTION.

How Agriculture Has Prospered Under Republican Rule.

In 1860, eight manufacturing states of the east—the six of New England, together with New York and Pennsylvania—returned an aggregate wealth of $5,123,000,000. Twenty years afterward, by the census of 1880, the same states returned an aggregate wealth of $10,228?000,000. The rate of increase for the 20 years was slightly more than 210 per cent.

Let us see how the agricultural states fared dnring this period. By the census of 1860, eight agricultural states of the west—Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska and Wisconsin — returned as aggregate wealth of $3,271,000,000. Twenty years afterward, by the census of 1880 —protection all the while in full force —these some states returned an aggregate wealth of $11,988,000,000. The rate of increase for the 20 years was 366 per cent, or 180 per cent greater than the increase in the eight manufacturing states of the east.

The case will be equally striking if we take the 15 southern states that were slave holding in 1860. By the census of that year, the aggregate return of their property was $6,702,000,000. But $2,000,000,000 was slave property. Deducting that, the total property amounted to $4,702,000,000. Their aggregate return of wealth by the census of 1880 was $8,332,000,000. The rate of increase for the 20 years was 80 per cent. Consider that during this period 11 states of the south were impoverished by civil war; to an extent far greater than any country had been despoiled in the wars of modern Europe. Consider that the labor system on which previous wealth had been acquired in the south was entirely broken up. And yet, at the end of 20 years, the southern states had repaired all their enormous losses and possessed nearly double the wealth they had ever known before. Do not these figures incontestably show that the agricultural sections of the country, west and south, have prospered even beyond the manufacturing sections, east and north? And all this not merely with protection, but because of protection!

The System of Fraud.

As might have been expected from a party that robs labor, the proposed tariff measure contemplates the raising of revenue by a system of fraud. For this is exactly what the ad valorem method always has been and always will be—a fraud upon the revenues, a fraud upon the manufacturer in this country and a fraud upon American labor.

The value of goods in a foreign country, upon which ad valorem rates of duties are paid, is always an unknown quantity. The importers have all they from the manufacturers abroad so as to conceal from the public prices at the port of shipment, these being the values upon which the duty must be paid. There is no guarantee that the prices will be correctly valued abroad, and it will be impossible for our customs officials to follow all manufacturers.

An importer can always claim that he bought goods abroad below the quoted market for spot cash, and he will be easy for his invoice to be "fixed." Foreign manufacturers will be only too anxious to secure an order at the outset and to close up our factories, so that cutting of prices to a point below the value of domestic labor in goods may be regarded as a certainty. In former free trade times this policy was adopted, and our manufacturers overspupplied, in order to create depression in values and compel our factories to close. Then when the foreign trade controls the market prices will reassert themselves, except that our manufacturers will never know on what basis they can afford to make goods. Meantime American labor can starve or accept foreign wage rates.—American Economist.

Make It a Month Later.

When the ways and means committee first intimated that they hoped to have their own tariff bill in operation by March 1, the American Economist then suggested that the date should be changed, and we now repeat the suggestion that the new bill should be so amended as to become a law a month later, on April 1, a fitting data to crown the free trade folly.

The Divil a Roachter.

How will I manage to keep safe at the rally
I marchet in line wid the veriest of men
And foil just as good as a king at beholding Sore that's what they told me was all my the victory!
And wonder! Has elated at that!
As I stepped to the platform just like an old sojer
And were a big roachter on top o' me hat.

I loved the low wid his clothes and comforts.
No share of the profits I'd git for me labor,
I voted to keep up the tariff that same
Protected the loaves and fishes and the nine.
I'm sure I'll git even now wid ye, me bonays;
Til vote, just as sure as me name is la Pat,
For Grover, and thin at the ratification
I'll wear a big roachter on top o' me hat.

I done it, and back to the day and the hour.
I'd like to remind that same vote if I could
And once again hear the small still and choice sounding
That called me to work when the times they were good.
The boss he looks worried; the foreman is sour;
The old mills deserted and gloomy at that,
And all I have left for my share of the glory
Is the old battered roachter I wore in me hat.

I mustn't up counter to me party's fine fervour
And ask him how long we'd be idle, I'm sure
The mill had been closed for a fortnight, and lanlin
Will say a stiff roachter was telling on me.)
He says to me: "You and I must suffer.
Me brogues is antipodes me credit is flat;
But if ye get hungry, ye know," he said slyly,
"You can eat the old roachter yo wore on yer hat."

So there's the hull story, and none can deny it
The truth must be told, though the brave should fall.
We made a mistake; it defeats the party.
That gave us protection.
Our years from now yes may talk till spudelicas
And swiftly until yer gray as a rat.
But if that party again is triumphant
The divil a roachter you'll see on me hat.
—Bayhey

Reynolds Painting Siddons.

Some of Reynolds' methods were peculiar. He usually painted his sitters from their reflection in a mirror and not from a direct view. Also always remained standing while at work, and he rarely signed a portrait.

One notable exception, however, was made in the case of his magnificent portrait of Mrs. Siddons as the Tragic Muse, which was painted when the master was 60 years old and when Mrs. Siddons was 28. The great actress, failing at first to recognize a sort of embroidery which the artist had added to the edge of her robe, soon perceived that it contained the words, "Joshua Reynolds pinxit, 1784," whereupon Sir Joshua assured her that he would be proud to have his name go down to posterity on the hem of her garment! Before commencing this picture the artist, instead of posing the sitter himself, requested Mrs. Siddons to give him her own idea of the Tragic Muse, and she immediately assumed the pose in which the picture was painted.—

North American Review

Every subject of importance is dealt with in its pages—impartially, on both sides—at the very time when the course of events brings it to the front, and by the very men or women whose opinions are most valued. The Review does not hesitate to use the most liberal expenditure in order to secure contributions from the highest authorities, as the list of contributors for the present year fully represents men and women of the time.

The North American Review is the only periodical at its kind which has a recognized place.

A FAMILY MAGAZINE.

This is because it devotes much attention to subjects that are of particular interest to women. Published monthly. $5 a year.

Manifold Disorders

Are occasioned by an impure and impoverished condition of the blood. Slight derangements, not corrected, develop into serious maladies such as

CUT THEIR WAGES.

UNION PACIFIC EMPLOYES AGITATED OVER A COURT ORDER.

Judge Dundy, of the Federal Court at Omaha, Orders a Reduction in Wages and Enjoins the Men From Striking—A Carefully Prepared Schedule.

OMAHA, Jan. 29.—Union Pacific employes were stirred to their utmost depths during the day when the order of Judge Dundy reducing wages on the system was made public.

All employes in every department are affected by the cut, which amounts to nearly 10 per cent. The action of the court was not altogether a surprise, although most of the men thought the wage question would not be disturbed, but Judge Dundy went his brothers on the federal bench one better, and not only enjoined the men from striking, but cut their pay and on at the reinced pay. The proposed schedule does not change the rate of pay on the Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado divisions except on "light eight" wheel engines. By the proposed schedule the wages paid engineers, firemen, hostlers and wipers will be reinced 8-5 of a cent per mile and the wages, 8 1-2 cents per mile, will be in excess of that paid by any of the 27 roads mentioned in the enclosed statement, except the Missouri, Kansas and Texas and Great Northern. In Colorado on trainmen the cut is $3 to $15 per month, conductors suffering least, and brakemen most. When the amount of mileage reduction cannot be taken from a monthly salary, a reduction in mileage allowance is made sufficient to cover the equivalent of

The Cut on Stated Salaries.

On all but three divisions or districts, the sixth Wyoming district, the Siouxbons and Nempa mixed trains and the Nebraska passenger division, the cut on trainmen runs as high as in Nebraska, and on some of the mountain divisions the reduction in mileage will amount to considerable more than the $5 to $15 per month.

The schedule is very carefully prepared, covering everything that could be considered a portion of a brakeman or conductor's work, and specifying what he shall receive for the same. All the railroad history of America this new schedule of the Union Pacific will undoubtedly stand as one of the most carefully prepared documents ever presented to a federal judge and designed by a railroad company to tide it over rapidly decreasing earnings.

JUDGE DUNDY'S ORDER.

An Official of the Brotherhood of Trainmen Gives His View of It.

GALESBURG, Ills., Jan. 30.—In speaking of Judge Dundy's order restraining the men of the Union Pacific railroad from striking, First Vice Master Master Morrissey of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, in the absence of Grand Master Wilkinson, had the following to say:

"I do not see how any legal attempt to restrain men from quitting work in a body, or striking, can succeed. We rather expected this Union Pacific injunction. It followed that of Judge Jenkins on the Northern Pacific. The committee on labor in the house of representatives has given us assurance that it will investigate and if in granting this he exceeded his authority, it would take steps for his impeachment. The men are organized, hold, they deprive workingmen of every vestige of personal liberty. They will virtually disband. Labor organizations leave the members at the mercy of employers. As for the Union Pacific matter, we will not take action until the men, through their grievance committees, have made their appeals and laid their side of the case before the receivers. It is possible the men may make concessions before the reinced schedule takes effect."

The Jenkins Injunction

HENRY GEORGE'S SCHEME.

A Single Tax Amendment Will Be Offered to the Tariff Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The feature of the debate upon the Wilson bill that has been most surprising is the unexpectedly strong sentiment in the discussion of free trade and single tax theories developed among the Democrats of the West and South. Representative Breckinridge of Kentucky called attention in one of his speeches to the tendencies in these directions manifested throughout the thorough and diversified threshing of economic principles which has been in progress since the revenue measure with income tax accessory came before the house. The whole drift of politics, as he saw it, was back toward the system of direct taxation, enforced in earlier stages of this government. In the current spirit spoke Representative Hendricks of New York, a representative of the conservative Eastern element of his party, who, while admitting the current which Mr. Breckinridge commented upon, was unable to believe that the Democratic party could be going over bodily to what he called the socialistic school of Tom Johnson.

The Single Tax an Issue.

It has remained for Representative Maguire of California to bring forward the most farreaching proposition placed before the house. For the first time congress will be brought face to face and placed on record upon the single land tax scheme of which Henry George is the author. Mr. Maguire has drawn up with great care and study a bill which gives effect to the single tax theories, and he will propose it at the proper time as a substitute for the income tax to the Wilson bill. This bill levies a direct tax of $92,625,200 upon the value of all land, exclusive of improvements thereon, in the states and territories.

It provides for collection by collectors and assessors in each state and territory, to be appointed by the president, or that states shall collect the taxes themselves and turn them over to the treasurer of the United States, retaining 15 per cent of the proceeds. Mortgages on real estate are to be treated as an interest in the land, and the tax on the proportion of value represented by the amount due from the mortgagor shall be a primary charge against mortgages, but will constitute a lien on the land, to satisfy which it may be sold.

PRINCE AND KAISER.

Reconciliation Between Bismarck and the Emperor Complete.

BERLIN, Jan. 27.—It has been a great day for Emperor William, Bismarck and the fatherland. The German empire, through its length and breadth, has been filled with an enthusiasm almost indescribable over the apparently complete reconciliation between its two most illustrious sons. The capital has abandoned itself to a delirium of joy at the affecting sight of the high spirited young emperor and the grizzled patriot statesman clasping hands with the utmost cordiality of manner and embracing each other with a heartiness and warmth whose sincerity it seemed impossible to doubt. From Friedrichruhe to Berlin there was to Bismarck at every station past which his train bore him to the city where the greatest triumphs of his career had been achieved. Beginning with the episode of the presentation of flowers by the young women of the town where Bismarck resides, continuing with the large and excitedly cheering assemblages along the entire route to Berlin, and culminating in the grand reception by the immense multitude in the capital, the day was one which must have gratified the consciousness in his heart's content and fully convinced him of his unshaken hold upon the affections of his fellow countrymen. It was a fitting climax of his declining days, to the long annuter of wonderful popular demonstrations which have been held during in his especial honor. In spite of all that has been said and done within the past few years, it showed the aged public servant that his name and fame were dear to the hearts of his fellow citizens, and that in Berlin, which owes so much of her greatness to him, there was none who could outrival him in the estimation of its inhabitants nor rob him of their unbounded love. The emperor, by the graciousness of his re.spon.se to Bismarck, screened unkonded ambassador, and, after their meeting, every where the William appeared the shouts of approval and good will were deafening.

The widespread effect of the reconciliation cannot be dobted. Its tail effect cannot at the present time be appreciated. It cannot be but most far-reaching towards of the empire. Bismarck's age precincides the banishment of my further active participation in the affairs of German politics, and perhaps the most re.sonable explanation of his having been forced to the emperor's invitive in removing the friendliest relations between himself and the monarch to be that Germany's ruler recognizes the fact that Bismarck's deeds are remembered and he has controlled the past with all its bitter feeling before it is too date.

Kaiser Will Visit Bismarck.

BERLIN, Jan. 29.—Several papers say that Emperor William will return Bismarck's visit, proceeding to Friedrichsruhe shortly. Other papers say that the emperor's visit has been fixed for April 1.

ARGUED BEFORE COX.

The E. of L. Injunction Case in Court at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Arguments were heard before Judge Cox of the district supreme court on the application of Grand Master Workman Sovereign and T. B. Mcferran of the Knights of Labor, for an injunction to restrain Secretary Carlisle from issuing $50,000,000, as proposed in his recent bond circular. Judge Cox reserved his decision and announced that by Wednesday he would state his conclusion in the case.

DON'T WANT BONDS.

The House Judiciary Committee Opposed to Carlisle's Action.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The judiciary committee of the house, by a vote of 9 to 4, ordered a favorable report on Representative Bailey's resolution questioning the right of Secretary Carlisle to issue bonds, Ashton Guilty of Mrs. Stone's Murder.

ASHEVILLE, Wis., Jan. 30.—Matthew R. Ashton was found guilty of murder in the first degrees. The crime charged was the murder of Mrs. Daniel Stone. Mrs. Stone, the wife of an aged uncle, was the woman who stood between him and the complete possession of a big estate. The crime was fixed upon Ashton entirely by circumstantial evidence.

Gold, Silver and Lead in Ohio.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 29.—Gold, silver and lead have been discovered in Spruce Hill near Bonnerville, Ross county, by A. W. Stretch of Xenia, who became wealthy by similar discoveries in California 40 years ago. Springfield capitalists are associated with him.

Pfister Buys a Mine.

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 29. — Receiver Schley sold the Morning mine, located in Shoshona county, Idaho, to Charles F. Pfister for $175,000, subject to a mortgage and bills which bring the amount up to $351,000.

Chicago's Scourge.

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Three patients in the county hospital were found to have smallpox and were removed to the pesthouse. There are now about 90 patients in the smallpox hospital.

Believes In Reciprocity.

The New York Sun is probably the ablest Democratic paper in the United States, and notwithstanding the opposition of its party relative to the McKinley tariff it has had the courage to express its own opinion, as follows: "The fall purpose and ultimate significance of the reciprocity programme announced by Mr. Blaine did not at first reveal themselves to the public mind. Even the commercial and industrial advantages derivable from such a policy were not instantly and clearly appreciated. Still less was the political significance of a scheme, the most capacious ever formed by an American statesman since Thomas Jefferson planned the purchase of Louisiana, at once distinctly recognized. Yet a little reflection must convince us that under the guidance of Secretary Blaine we have entered on a course whose head and by no means distant goal is the acquirement for the United States of not only commercial, but political ascendancy throughout the western hemisphere."

They Insured Him.

The ways and means of insurance agents for securing customers are many and varied. The modern method seems to be to get the victim interested and then bombard him with arguments, eloquence and statistics, and, it is in the first that the real genius of the business comes in.

A merchant was writing at his desk the other day when two of the craft entered. Being well dressed and prepossessing looking, he rose to receive them and inquired their business.

"I want," said one, "to introduce to you my friend, Mr. Booker, who is a well known gentleman living here, and special agent for the Bunker Hill insurance company."

"I am pleased to meet Mr. Booker," returned the merchant, "but I really don't know that I'm negotiating with you."

"Indeed," said the first. "Booker, old man, introduce me."

Booker did, and the merchant, seeing the trick, hurst out into hearty guffaw and was soon insured by the two friends, who, if they had entered in the ordinary style and stated their business, would probably have been shown the door.—London Tit-Bits.

PROBATE NOTICE.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk—ss. In Probate Court. Special Term, January 23d, 1894.

In the matter of the estate of Helen Marshall deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Christopher Christianson praying for the license to sell the amount of personal estate that has come into his hands, the description of which and how much remains undisposed of, the said deceased died intestate, and that he is appointed, as far as the same can be ascertained; the highest money and a description of all the real estate, excepting the homestead of which the said deceased died seized, the names of the heirs of the respective portions or lots thereof and the amount of the debts against the said deceased, and praying that license may be to him granted to sell. And it appearing by said petition that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said Christian C. Hoch, executor aforesaid, to pay said debts and the legacies and expenses of administration, and that it is necessary for the payment of said debts, legacies or expenses to sell the whole of said real estate.

It is therefore ordered, that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday, the 19th day of February, 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the probate office in the city of Crookston, in said county, then and there to allow cause if any there be why license should not be granted to said executor to sell so much of the said estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay said debts, legacies or expenses.

And it is further ordered, that this order shall be published four weeks in succession in successive weeks prior to said day of hea ing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL a newspaper printed, subject and published, at Crookston, in said county.

Dated at Crookston, Minn., the 23d day of January, A. D. 1894.

By the court,
C. M. BENSON,
Judge of Probate.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following greatly esteemed will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe to the reader the terrible sensations caused by my hands and legs. I had to rub and beat these parts until they were sore, to overcome a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a terrible weakness in my back and a stooping of the shoulders. I was troubled greatly with pain in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusions, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. I was treated by the best physicians without relief and a full trial, but with no satisfactory result, when I saw an advertisement of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and I was sleeping well. I continued the use of the Nervine until I was fully as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 127. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their case as in mine.—Lewis Green, La Due, Co. Mich." Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by all druggists on a guarantee first bottle benefits or he (Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. FOR WOMEN AND HOME.

This well-known journal, a union of four leading women's papers, has won its fame because it deals with what really interests the women of America. Fashions from the standpoint of good taste and economy. Fiction of a pure and helpful kind. Music and Art suitable for non-professional tastes. Household hints written by practical women. Suggestions and aids for self-supporting women. It is a paper for women, by women, and its writers are among the most noted authors. Every line is original, every engraving a gem.

It is a paper of to-day without espousing the great questions of religion, politics and temperance, it gives all the news regarding them. It is universally quoted by the press because its views and articles are bright and unique. Send to Springfield, Ohio, for a sample copy. Formerly $1.00, it is now but 50 cents a year. 'Round Home.

A little snow brightened up sleighing a bit this week.

Jas. T. Lee and Mike Malone were in from Buckerswille, Wednesday.

One of Mrs. R. H. Battey's little girls, Frankie Coleman, is down with the fever.

Alderman W. H. Norrie is down with the fever and has a child very sick with it.

P. M. Mark of Fosston passed through this city last Thursday enroute to St. Paul.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Sweet of Fisher, drove over Wednesday to visit their son Cyrus, who is attending school here.

J. F. Cremmer and Will Lanctot went to Red Lake Falls Saturday to help install officers of the I. O. O. F lodge at that place.

Rev. R. H. Batty went out to Mentor on Saturday morning, but returned in the evening owing to sickness in his family.

Lewis Lohn, cashier of the bank of Fosston, was in the city last week looking after the interests of of the bank in the court.

The Salvation army meetings still continue interesting. The subject next Sunday evening will be "Tit for Tat." All cordially invited.

Al White, a former Crookston printer, was in the city last week visiting friends. He is now connected with the Grafton, N. D. Record.

Deputy United States Marshal P. S. Ware, of Thief River Falls, passed through the city last Friday on his way to Duluth on official business.

S. A. Clark, who has been engaged on the Tribune for several months, left last night for Monticello, Minnesota, where he will take charge of a paper. His place on the Tribune will be filled by the notorious P. Paul Bodine.

An analysis of the river water at Ann Arbor, shows typhoid fever germs in plenty. The city council of Grand Forks sent 12 gallons of Red Lake river water for analysis with the above result. They all use boiled water now.

W. A. Lanctot, who has looked after A. D. Stephens' real estate business for several years, has opened an office for himself in P. J. Russell's law office in the Reckitt block. He will handle several lines of insurance do a real estate, conveyancing and collection business.

Henry Barkhart Sr., came up from Wabasha on Tuesday morning to see how the boys are getting along. Mr. B. is a prominent candidate for state treasurer and so far as the JOURNAL can learn would be wholly acceptable to the north part of the state as well as in the south part.

Krolin and Reune, who bought out Wes. Fuller, intend to occupy the room next adjoining them on the south about March 1st, and open a full grown restaurant, when they will be prepared to accommodate everybody who ever feels like getting hungry.

Do you remember the chimney sweep who for a few weeks has made day hideous with his Cummins-like howls? Well you will hear that gentle fowl no more forever right away quick. On Monday evening while on a drunk with a boon companion he slipped a V from him. The man soon noticed that he was $5 shy and in the altercation that ensued they were both pulled and locked up. In the morning the chimney-sweep appeared in justice court and was mulcted in the sum of ten good simoleons or in default of which he could lungwish in jail for a thie. Later on he was told if he would skip he could have that privilege. He skipped.

Mrs. F. M. Brown who is a victim of typhoid fever, is reported to be doing nicely.

Rev. Battey installed the officers of the newly organized lodge of Good Templars, at Fertile, Tuesday night.

Miss Lizzie Zarracker went back to her school again on Monday morning entirely recovered from her illness of last week.

Wheat opened up on Monday at 49 reaching 50 on Tuesday morning. It manifests considerable strength for a last of the month market.

Mrs. John O'Brecht, who has been taking care of her daughter, Mrs. S. L. Collins, returned to her home last week and Mrs. Will Hunnelsbeck takes her place. The sick there are all reported doing very nicely.

The condition of the sick ones, so far as reported, continues favorable at this writing. Mrs. Bailey, who has been in a critical condition, is said to be hopefully improving. Rev. Mr. Smith, who was reported worse since our last issue, is said to be developing more favorable symptoms. Alderman Norrie was also very sick, but is said to be doing nicely.

P. S. Ware, who returned Tuesday from Duluth says that business is that city is almost at a stand-still owing largely to the uncertainty of the result of placing iron ore on the free list. This is a direct blow to the principal industry of the country surrounding Duluth, and the people generally, regardless of politics, are feeling very bitter towards Congressman Baldwin for helping to place iron ore on the free list.

W. W. Miller, Roke Smith's new appointee, passed through the city on Wednesday en route to Thief River Falls to enter upon the discharge of his new duties. Mr. Miller was rigged out in the gorgeous style of dress prevalent in the south which he will soon have to change in conformity with the requirements of this country.

A. E. Brush was down from Angus on Tuesday. Mr. Brush is one of the leading farmers of Polk county. In conversation with a JOURNAL man he said: "There will be a big turn over in political matters at next election if things don't take a wonderful change for the better very soon. As it is I expect to see the Republican party win at a gallop."

Dr. Hoag, of the state board of health, was in the city this week in consultation with the members of our city board of health. He was returning from Grand Forks where he had been examining into the cause of the typhoid epidemic existing there. It is his opinion that the river water is the cause. He advises boiling the water before using which is just what Dr. Dampier advised people to do weeks ago. He thinks there is no need of people having typhoid fever if they will use the proper care to prevent taking the germs into the stomach. He gave some very excellent advice on the cure and treatment of typhoid patients and the proper steps to be taken to prevent taking the fever.

The dwellers on Sampson's Woodland Addition seems to be all stirred up over the recent assessment made for the purpose of grading and and many harsh, uncomplimentary things are being said about the obligation who seems to be keeping pretty shady. Prominent men, who have property interests over there have told us there was absolutely no call for the work by anybody who would have to pay a cent of taxes for it and they have said that they were very much like an explanation from the originator. They would like to know why the means was was put through the council except on a petition of the taxpayers interested and they say the work is wholly unnecessary, uncalled for and would like to know where it originated and on what grounds it seem to be quite a reasonable request and we can see no good reason why the backers of the grading plan should not show up and explain the matter. There must be somebody behind it and some reason for it and the JOURNAL will cheerfully give space for any explanation any one may have to offer.

A. Kaiserand S. S. Stadsvold were in from Fosston yesterday.

Dr. A. Nelson was up from Fertile last week on court business.

E. C. Murney was in from Euclid on Monday.

The county board met at the auditor's office on Monday morning.

It is said that from corn now that drink river water is as dangerous as is the water itself.

Zadie, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Palmer, is very ill with congestion of the brain.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hatlow welcomed the arrival of a little baby girl on Friday of last week.

The insurance adjusters failed to settle with Gervais & Gervais and the matter will probably be arbitrated.

If you are not a regular subscriber to the JOURNAL we should be very glad to enroll your name on our growing list. You are all invited.

Mr. Welch, who was for years the village blacksmith at Fisher, was in the city on Tuesday. He is now a miller of the soft and is said to own one of the best farms in Polk county.

The younger members of Miss Thos. Reynolds' music class, assisted by the older ones, gave a musical entertainment at the home of Mrs. E. P. Pierce on Thursday evening. A good time is reported.

Hugh Thompson got out as far as his stables at Schroeder's barn on Wednesday afternoon. Say it's the first time he has seen his horses since Christmas. He is recovering from a severe attack of la grippe.

It is reported that Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Robinson have lost their 11 year old boy. It will be remembered that the boy was quite an invalid while here last summer, but his parents had strong hopes that his life would be spared.

The scarcity of pork in this city this winter is wonderful in view of the fact that Polk county farmers thought all last summer that they were raising more pork than they could sell. On Wednesday of this week not a market in this city had a pound of fresh pork on hand. Just now a few porkers could find a ready market here.

M. Pettingill of Staples, one of the recently appointed pineland estimators, was in the city last Saturday, and stopped over a day to visit his nephew, R. M. Stenton. He is also a setter, Clara A. Pettingill, went up on Friday to Thief River Falls, where she will remain during the winter. For many years Mr. Pettingill has been engaged more or less in the lumber business and is thoroughly qualified to fill the position to which he has been appointed.

Fred Anderson has bought the fruit and confectionery business of F. N. Burgess on the corner of Main and Robert streets with the latter's counter attachment. This restaurant business is Fred's own business and by that same token it is his old stand. Those who are old member, when Fred used to dish up as elegant a little lunch as could be found anywhere and, if his right hand has not forget its cunning he can do that same again. Fred did well once at the business and we see no good reason why he should not do so again.

The populist idea, as exemplified in the organ of that persuasion in this city not long since, of creating antagonism between farmers and business men of the cities and villages is entirely erroneous, and against the interests of both classes. Their interests are mutual —are inter-dependent, and this being true both should work in the interest of the other. The business man is taxed for the mutual benefit of all, so is the farmer—a healthy, prosperous city makes more valuable every acre of land adjoining, but neither class should forget their mutual inter-dependence upon the other for the fullest measure of success. The farmer owes it to his own best interests to trade at his nearest city or village instead of sending to some city like St. Paul or Chicago for his goods and groceries, and just as sure as this is true does the home merchant owe it to his own interests to put his prices just as low as he can, and buy his butter and eggs, and all the produce he can use in his business in his own home market—of his neighboring farmer friends and not send off to St. Paul or elsewhere and skip in such things. It is just as much for the interest of the city merchant to provide a good market for produce as it is for the interest of the farmers with whom he deals, if not more, for the farmer can, if push-ito it go to other and more remote places to trade, while the merchant must have the trade of his immediate neighbors or fail. It is in accordance with the eternal fitness of things that all men in the various pursuits should be inter-dependent, one with the other and the man or the paper that attempts to inculcate any other doctrine is a false teacher. The majority of our farmers and business men are sensible enough to recognize these facts and all should be as they conduce to the greatest good to all.

C. M. Baldwin of Emeradо, spent Tuesday in the city visiting the firm of Larson, Carpenter & Co., of which Mr. Baldwin is the head.

Charlie Ristow bundled up and faced the wind on Tuesday for a drive into the city. Said he had seen worse days.

Dr. Just was summoned to Euclid on Sunday to consult with Dr. Chaplin on the case of L. W. C. Misner who has been ill with typhoid fever and who was taken with hemorrhage. Mr. Misner's case was considered critical.

Miss E. Veronneau went over to Grand Forks this (Thursday) morning to see her sister, Miss Eugenie, who is very ill with typhoid fever. She has been ill for three weeks but strong hopes for her recovery are entertained.

Amie, youngest daughter of Halver and Inga Tweiten, died at their residence, the Northwestern hotel, on Sunday at 4 p. m., aged 5 years and 6 months. The funeral will occur on Saturday next at 1 o'clock. Several other members of the family have been sick, but are all reported doing well except one daughter whose condition is critical in the extreme.

The JOURNAL has received an invitation to be present at the wedding of Mr. Samuel Sutor of Fosston, to Miss Hattie Sutor of Chatham, Ont., which event will occur at the latter place on February 7th. The JOURNAL will probably not be represented, but sends its greeting and good wishes. Sam is one of the best of good fellows and is deserving of all the happiness to be found in life.

Peter and Mat Cornelius received a letter from Norway last week announcing the death of their mother, an old lady about 80 years of age.

J. B. Chapin, one of the first settlers of Fargo committed suicide at the Merchants hotel in St. Paul at about 7 o'clock p. m. on Thursday last. Mr. Chapin had been in a hospital in St. Paul for a short time and left on Thursday saying that he would go to the Merchants where he would be liable to meet some Fargo people. Mr. Chapin has been for some time in financial straits as well as suffering from a painful disease. He was well and favorably known by hundreds of the old settlers, who will regret his sad death. He was about 70 years old and had made and lost several fortunes. He always took a leading part in the upbuilding of Fargo, built the Continental hotel and the first opera house and was at one time mayor of Fargo.

Peter Cornelius was able to ride to the city last Saturday—is having a great time with his rheumatism sometimes one being on two sometimes tother. Pete says they do be having great times at the schoolhouse Friday evenings, Mr. Johnson, the teacher, having inaugurated a series of debating exercises, which prove interesting not only to the participants but to the older ones as well. Pete says "some of the kids are getting as sassy as bantu roosters, waggin' their jaws, and some Scandinavian Websters are being developed. We have 20 scholars in regular attendance at school and Mr. Johnson is proving one of the best teachers we ever had."

Winter Rye.

Last fall the JOURNAL urged a trial of winter rye in this country and E. D. Childs procured a quantity of it to supply seed for all who wished to make a trial. Geo. W. Roberts, who is on the old Harry Wyand place, sowed 25 acres late in September. Sowed it four inches deep and says he had an excellent stand by the time the ground froze. M. G. Jennings, in Parnell sowed some, covering it very light, as light as possible. The JOURNAL will watch the result in both these instances, illustrating deep and shallow covering and will report the result. If winter rye proves a success it will help to solve the grain problem which is becoming a serious one.

A MARRIAGE LOTTERY.

London's Queer Mixture of Dowry, Matrimony and Hebrew Philanthropy.

"Michael Harris and Nancy Jacobs having polled the highest number of votes were duly elected to receive a dowry of £25 and marriage fees, and a vacancy was again declared for a couple."

So ran a paragraph in a Jewish paper recently, and a reporter was fired with an ambition to learn more about these folks who give couples dowries, and more about the conditions under which such dowries are won. The benevolence, it appeared, emanated from the Society for Affowing Marriage Fees and a Portion to Young Men and Virtuous Girls of the Jewish Faith. The president of this society one would imagine would be a patriarchal sage with grandchildren in scores about his knees. But Mr. A. Swaab, who is the head of the society, is a young man with a slight black mustache, a clean shaven chin and certainly no grandchildren. When not permanently occupied he is engaged in his business as a diamond merchant in Hatton Garden.

"The society," he said, in reply to the interviewer, "has been in existence nearly 50 years, and has done no small amount of good. It was started among a few friends in quite a small way, and a dowry of £10 only was all that could be afforded at first. But £10 is not such a drop in the ocean, was not quite sufficient to answer the purpose in view, and as the fund grew the dowry was increased to £25."

"Are the operat ons of the society confined to London?"

"No. They extend all over England. Any funds are always welcome in exchange of all amounts, from a penny a week upward, and by donations."

"It gives them a prior claim on the dowry perhaps?"

"No, it doesn't. I will make that clear in a moment. We insist about a dozen couples every year, the dowries and marriage fees coming to over £300. The object in giving the dowry is to enable the young couples to start a little business together. Before becoming candidates for the dowry—several which they need not have subscribed a farthing—they have to be possessed of a home necessaries and furniture, and the man has to prove to the satisfaction of the committee that he is in a position to maintain his wife."

"Only virtuous girls are to be befriended by the society, I gather from its title. Does it not become rather a delicate matter to adjudicate upon the qualifications of the applicants?"

"Every case is investigated by two members of the committee, appointed annually for that purpose. They make their inquiries with proper tact and discretion, and they also investigate the character of the young man before the entire procedure. Say a vacancy has been declared, which means that we have sufficient funds to put another dowry up for competition. We send out notices to that effect and empty forms of application. We get four, five, six, perhaps a dozen couples contesting for the prize. Then we meet before the committee in couples, and are asked questions concerning the money they have saved, the kind of a home they have, and so on. Once, I suppose, I must have been presenting the prospective bridegroom pretty hard for the money, for he only spoke up sorrowfully, 'Well, sir, you got married once, and we want to too!'"

"Well, as soon as they have been admitted as candidates, what follows?"

"We give them a book of numbers, and tell them to go and canvass for votes, the members possessing votes in proportion to the amount of their subscriptions."

"Have you yourself many votes?"

"Yes, I hold something like 80 votes."

"Then you have the right of plenty of beseeching brown eyes and persuasive glances?"

"No, nothing ont of the way, because as president I take no part in choosing the recipients of the dowry."

"Can you give me a specific instance of the good the society has done?"

"I can, and a striking one I think. There are three members of the committee of the society, now men of position, who will be, no doubt, very shocked up on life with dowries from the society."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An Oversight.

"See here," said satan to his friend Beelzebub, "we have overreached ourselves. You insisted that we must put two kinds of man to seven instruments for his destruction, and we have so done. Man has made gatling guns, mitrailleuses, cobalt shot, giant powder, dynamite—every day he offers some new combination which insures greater destructiveness."

"Well, then," said Beelzebub, "all is well."

"What a fool you are!" sneered satan, with asperity. "Don't you see that we have made war so costly that these monkies won't fight?"

"Ah," said Beelzebub in despair, "why didn't I reflect that these people are always calculating expenses."—Kate Field's Washington.

Cheap Rates to California.

The Northern Pacific railroad company has put into effect a series of low round-trip rates to California points. Tickets are good until April 30th, 1894, and are good for stop-over under certain conditions.

These rates will enable those desiring to do so, to spend the winter in southern California, or to visit the Mid-winter Fair to be held at San Francisco. The latter event will undoubtedly be second only to the World's Fair just closed, and will repay a visit as it will exhibit the resources and capabilities of California.

NEW LAND DISTRICT.

A Proposition to Create a New Land District in this State.

Portions of the Duluth, St. Cloud and Crookston District Wanted.

About 9,000,000 Acres Embraced in the Territory Mapped Out for a District.

The Red River Dulen is agitating the creation of a new land district out of the counties of Beltrami, Itasca, Cass and Hubbard and sets the following argument in favor of the scheme:

A change in the present division of the United States land district in the northern part of this state, has been agitated for a long time, and this agitation is justified for many reasons.

Under the prevailing conditions, the majority of the settlers in Beltrami county are travelled to pass through Crookston, where one Land office is located, and down to St. Cloud, when conducting any business connected with the Land-offices. The traveling expenses for the parties and his witnesses will alone amount to at least $100.00 which for them is a large sum. While a large part of Beltrami county now open for settlement, was taken from the St. Cloud district and placed under the jurisdiction of the Crookston Land-office, as proposed by a committee appointed by the City Council of this city, the expenses for the parties concerned would be greatly reduced, and much trouble and inconvenience for the settlers avoided, and we are heartily in favor of such a change. But why not go one step further?

Why not take a part of the territory now belonging to the Crookston, Duluth and St. Cloud land districts and form a new district?

If we take the map of Minnesota, and look at the immense tract of land located between Crookston and Duluth, we can easily comprehend the advantages of this proposition. This large territory is land of rich farm, mineral and timber lands, consistently watered by any amount of rivers and lakes, abounding with fish. When this territory so favored land is opened for settlement, and by railroads connected with the outside world, it will be an "Eldorado" for homeseekers, and we can all understand how much better it would be for him, and consequently for their homes, to be able to "file" and "prove up" their homesteads with as small expenses as possible. The great majority of the settlers are poor and after they have built their humble houses, shanties, and made the necessary improvements on the place, it is indeed a big item for them to make a long and expensive journey to the district land-office, and are afraid it would be almost impossible for many, to raise the necessary amount to cover expenses, or at least they would have to commence with a debt that would prove a heavy burden on their shoulders, while the speculators would soon have the upper hand over the actual settlers.

Very likely the largest part of the Red Lake Indian Reservation will be opened for settlement the coming summer, and the Duluth & Winnipeg railroad extended through it. Naturally a town would grow up at some point along this road, and would have the brightest outlooks for prosperity. Why should not that be just the place for the land-office of the new district?

We promise the plan would be opposed by both Crookston and St. Cloud, but the situation would be of so much value and advantage to the settlers, that this opposition could not be taken in consideration, as much more as it would not be any injury or injustice to either of the two cities.

How large this new district ought to be and where the land-office should be located is as yet too early to be determined, but it seems reasonable that it should consist of the counties of Beltrami and Itasca and the northern part of Hubbard and Cass counties, for instance north of the tenth standard parallel. It would then cover about 14,000 square miles or nearly nine million acres which would require around 50,000 "Entries."

If the government wishes to promote the interest of the inhabitants, something should be done in this matter as soon as possible, and we would be glad to hear expressions from our fellow-citizens on the subject.

Should the above mentioned plan be realized, it would be the best guarantee for the speedy improvement and cultivation of the northern part of Minnesota by actual settlers, and a strong barrier for the imposture and ownership by capitalists and corporations.

While the sentiment expressed is all right, we believe the scheme is a trifle premature, as a land office is seldom or never a pioneer, and it would be well to wait until the country is settled up before asking for a land office; it is true there is a small portion of the northwest part of the St. Cloud district that is settled, and the land is market, but if this territory was attached to the Crookston district it would bring a land office sufficiently convenient to the settlers already out there.

The creation of a new district is all right when the needs of the people demand it, but it looks to the JOURNAL as though a transfer of a small territory from one district to another is all that is required at present, and this should be done at once.

Wells O. Miner.

In the death of Wells Miner, the JOURNAL loses a true and faithful friend, and although elsewhere in this issue a kind friend has spoken fitting words of him we feel constrained to add our feeble mite of tribute to an upright and noble young man. For a time Mr. Miner has been our valued correspondent at Euclid and he seldom missed us with his cheery, hopeful chit-chat and excellent news items. He was a young man of excellent habits, always bright and cheerful and his loss will be keenly felt not only in the little circle in which he dwelt but by JOURNAL readers who have so often read his cheerful items of news. The JOURNAL joins in extending hearty sympathy to the sadly bereaved ones in their hour of sore affliction.

Meeting Postponed.

On account of the Stewart funeral at 2:30 Monday afternoon, the meeting of the stockholders of the agricultural society, which was to be held at the same hour in the city hall, was postponed until 2:30 on Saturday afternoon. Every stockholder and every one interested in having an agricultural fair held here should attend. The success of the first fair which was held last year, under difficulties, shows what a splendid exhibition can be held here every year. It will not only be a benefit to the farmers of the county, but to the businessmen of the city as well, and every one of the latter can well afford to take a couple of shares of stock in the association, for in a year or two these shares will be selling at a premium.

Break in Water Main.

The water main that crosses the river into Jerome's addition, sprung a leak last Friday between the St. Louis hotel and the river, and it was not until Tuesday afternoon that the workmen reached the pipe and shut off the water. Digging a hole in the frozen street at this time of year is a difficult matter. During the leakage, the pumps at the waterworks were moved almost as rapidly as though there was a fire.

Raise Less Wheat.

If we can base an opinion upon what we hear farmers talk we should estimate the acreage that will be sown to wheat in the spring at not over half the usual amount, but our experience in the country so far has been that however sincere a man may be in his winter opinion on this subject, just as soon as seedtime arrives he will generally slap in all the wheat he can find time to cover up—not always in the most workmanlike manner either. This spring, however seed wheat can not be so easily procured as heretofore which will make a difference. If about one-third the usual area was sowed to wheat next spring it would be the best thing that ever happened the country. A larger area than usual in barley could be used if a man has or can get hogs to feed it, and a larger area than ever in oats would pay well for there never has been near oats enough mixed to prevent the necessity of stinging it out in the spring. The prospects are that the hog business cannot be overdone next year at least and per haps for two or three years yet. A year or two shortage on the wheat crop would help the price of that cereal wonderfully. If a man has so much land he does not know what to do with it a little summer fallowing wouldn't hurt.

THE COUNTY BOARD.

Minutes of the Adjourned Meeting Held Monday, January 29th.

Resolutions Galore are Offered by the Members and Spread on the Records.

For the Benefit of the People the Board will Meet Oftener Hereafter.

The board met in adjourned session January 29th, all members present.

Mr. Kirsch offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Believing it to be the intention of the legislature in the enactment of the law relating to the auditor or his deputy of knowingly and feloniously omitting to assess any property which should have the opportunity of receiving his fair share through the medium of a newspaperare an injustice, it is inferred that each newspaper should be of good standing and general circulation, but inasmuch as this important duty is published last year in a sheet called the Tribune, a paper issued at Crookston and declaimed principally around McIntosh and vicinity, and for which act the county auditor was almost spoueliite, and as act for which this board has been cetlclesed for allowing the fees therefor; and

Believing, as a matter of fact, that it is the intention of said law, that the greater number, if not all, of the taxpayers should have an opportunity of being informed on the important matter concerning the security of our homes, and for the purpose of preventing a repitition of such unnecessary publication as practised last year; and

Believing, as a matter of fact, that the fee of 25 cents per description as fixed by law for such publication is excessive and unreasonable.

We therefore request and demand, on behalf of the taxpayers of Polk county, that the county auditor shall make out a full list of delinquent taxes and of redemption, about to be published for the taxes of the year 1893, to be published in the weekly Crookston Times, the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, the Home-of-Crookston, and Red River Dalen, only one of said papers, the weekly Crookston Times, shall be required to publish said list for the Successive weeks, and that we will strive to each of said papers, if they, or as many of them as will agree to this arrangement, a fee of twenty cents each description (the items of taxes carried out). By the arrangement the taxpayers are benefitted in a double manner, first by having at least 15 cents on each description, and second, the distribution of said list with the circulation of each of said papers mentioned will reach nearly every taxpayer of Polk county, but if any of the papers above mentioned should decline or refuse to publish said list, then the county auditor shall forthwith make some other paper in its place, and

That only in this and in no other manner or form, and at no higher cost is the auditor authorized by law, and 12 cents will the board recognize or allow any bill presented for the publication of said list.

The resolution was adopted by a unanimous vote.

The reports of M. E. Kirsch, M. Cornelius and J. E. Opgaard relating to the additional securities obtained from the persons employed on the seed grain loans of 1893, were read and accepted.

The petition of Wm. Schafer and others for the organization of a new school district out of school district No. 32, was presented, and a hearing set for the next meeting of the board.

Commissioner Kirsch offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Whereas, It appears in the report that one Xavier Juneau foreclosed a chattel mortgage given by Praxide Thivierge on the north half of sec. 4, township 151 range 45, and which said mortgage was raised the county of Polk held the first lien for seed grain furnished said Praxide Thivierge; and

Whereas, It appears in the same report that one James Bushell foreclosed a chattel mortgage given by C. O. Nelson on his grain raised on the w½ sec. 18, tp. 149, range 41, (Lessor tp.), and on which Polk county held the first lien for seed grain furnished said C. O. Nelson, therefore be it

Resolved, That the county attorney be and he is hereby required to forthwith notify said mortgagees above mentioned to pay over to the county the amount of the principal sums or on the failure of immediate payment to institute action against the said mortgagees for the recovery of the amount of the county's lien.

Mrs. Catherine Rosenger was ordered refunded the taxes paid in error on the s½ se¼ and s½ sw¼ sec. 10, tp. 151 range 45, for 1891.

The stipulations of agreement entered into by and between Peter Trnux and the committee appointed on behalf of the county relating to the ditch proposed to be established through Lowell township, was agreed to and settled by the board.

On petition of Lars Aleheon, his farm, the nw¼ sec. 30, tp. 150, range 46, was attached to school district No.71.

The following resolution was offered by Commissioner Demers:

Whereas, The action of the county board with reference to the letting of the county printing, has been questioned by some of the newspapers whose bids were not accepted: and whereas said newspapers have asserted that the printing was given to the Crookston Times, East Grand Forks Courier and St. Hilaire Specktator at an additional cost of $2,500 over the bid of the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, which claims to have been the lowest bidder; and whereas a comparison of the bids shows that the prices charged for job work varied but very little in any of the bids; therefore be it

Resolved, That in order to determine the truth or falsity of the statement that the printing was awarded at a cost of $2,500 more than other bids submitted, the county auditor and one or more of the county commissioners to be appointed by the chairman, be requested to examine the printing bills paid during the last year, and report to the board at the next meeting the total cost of all matters published in the official papers during the past year, it being understood that the prices paid last year were exactly the same as this year.

The chairman appointed Messrs. Kirsch and Linden as a committee to examine the bills referred to.

The taxes paid on the nw¼ sec. 24, tp. 149, range 47, for 1887, were ordered transferred to Tell Robillard.

The assessment made against Robillard in the village of Red Lake Falls was ordered transferred to Tell Robillard.

On motion of Commissioner Kirsch the chairman was authorized to employ an attorney to appear on behalf of the county in the appeal case of Cooke & Hammond asking the court to order the commissioners to give the county printing to said Cooke & Hammond; Messrs Linden and Oppegaard dissenting.

E. M. Hoff and C. G. Rapp, of St. Hilaire, were each granted an abatement of $50.00 on the assessments for goods and merchandise.

The assessment of credits against Noe Cullivan in Lake Pleasant was ordered stricken from the assessment book.

The county auditor was authorized to advertise for bids on a combination or iron bridge, to be built across a ditch, the size of bridge to be 16 feet wide and 50 feet long.

On motion of Commissioner Kirsch the bridge petitions were laid over until next meeting.

The report of the register of deeds was received and accepted, the same showing total receipts to be $4,299.65, salaries and clerk hire $2,960.85, net proceeds $1,338.80.

The report of clerk of the court was read and accepted, same showing total receipts, including county work, to be $2,424.

The report of O. L. Hamery, county surveyor was read and accepted. Total receipts for work as surveyor amounting to $631.00.

The amount found placed to the credit of the text book account was ordered transferred to the county revenue fund.

The assessment of goods and merchandise to A. E. Brush of Angus tp. was ordered cancelled.

The financial statement for 1893, as prepared by the county auditor, was read and on motion the same was accepted and ordered published.

H. E. Bowen, of Fertile, was granted an auctioneer's license for one year, he having filed a bond and paid the fees.

The county auditor was instructed to notify G. W. Ralph to correct the copy of a plat of the townsite of Thief River Falls made by him and on file in the office of the register of deeds, to correspond with the original plat thereof.

The amount drawn by the county treasurer of $384.55 in excess of the amount of limit as fixed by the statute for clerk hire in his office for the year was legalized by the board in allowing the amount overdrawn.

The report of Sheriff Grondgeen was presented and read to the board, the same showing total receipts of $4,814.72. His deputies' salaries, traveling expenses, including $600 for the use of horses, buggies and centers, amounting to $3,297.05. The board ordered the report placed on file.

The board joined in the following affidavit:

We, the undersigned, constituting the board of county commissioners of Polk county, do hereby affirm as their true belief that the care of public business in this county requires that special meetings be held during

SUED FOR LIBEL

P. S. Ware of the Thief River Falls Press in Luck.

County Commissioners Rhinehart and Kirsch Commence an Action Against Him.

A Tribute from a Euclid Friend to the Memory of Wells Misner.

Yesterday P. S. Ware, of the Thief River Falls Press, was arrested and brought to the city, a complaint having been gotten out against him by County Commissioners A. C. Rhinehart and M. E. Kirsch. The complaint alleges that the commissioners have been slandered by the publication of the following article in the press: "The business men of Crookston have appointed a committee to investigate the county printing steal committed by Commissioners Kirsch, Rhinehart and DeMers. It will do no good. By the time the committee get fairly to work the printing for the year will be done and the printers and commissioners will have the boodle in their trousers pocket."

Mr. Ware gave bonds in the sum of $200, J. W. Wheeler and C. O. Christianson going on his bonds, and the case is set for hearing on Saturday, February 17th, at 10 o'clock a. m. before Justice Gossman in this city.

It seems almost incredible that these two gentlemen who claim to have been slandered would bring an action on such grounds and there must be something back of this. It is generally conceded that the Press got the best of Capt. Rhinehart in the pine land controversy carried on last fall and this may have some bearing in the present action.

However this may be, Mr. Ware claims to have some facts in regard to the inside workings of the board which will be quite interesting when aired in court.

Perhaps Messrs. Kirsch and Rhinehart think that because the JOURNAL was put to sharp pace to keep up with Judge Searle last week, they can knock out their man every time they enter the legal arena.

But we shall see.

A Fitting Tribute.

EUCLID, Minn Jan. 30th, 1894.

Last night the Heavenly messenger brought the summons to "come up higher" to I. W. Misner, and trusting in "Him who doeth all things well" he passed over the river to dwell forever with the loved ones awaiting him on the other shore.

Wells Misner was born May 7th, 1863 at Scott, Sheboygan County, Wis. Four years later he moved with his parents to Fond du Lac, Wis., where he lived until 1881, when he became a resident of Euclid and associated with the firm of E. Traylor & Co., which connection was severed only by his death. In January 1886 he was united in marriage with Miss Retha Musgat of Fond du Lac, who with three little ones mourn the loss of husband and father. He had for five years been a member of Euclid Presbyterian church and passed away with perfect trust in his Savior. Wells during his life had known scarcely a sick day until a few weeks ago when an attack of la grippe rapidly developed into the dreaded typhoid fever, and despite the most earnest efforts of those dearest to him, another loved one, at midnight's holy hour, passed from the arms of earth to the mansions of heaven. Husband, father, brother, friend, farewell until the dawn of the eternal day! May the daisies of earth ever bloom around thy last resting place!

"Some time when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forevermore have set,
The things which our weak judgments here have spurned,
The things which our souls' judgments here have spurned,
The things shall be explained.

"Things over which we grieved with inches wet,
With faith before us oft in dim dark night.
As mere shine mists in deepest hate of blue,
And we shall see how all God's ways were right;
And how, what seemed reproof, was love most true."

Those Taxes.

The board met on Wednesday to consider the matter of the personal tax assessment. The difficulty seems to have arisen from the fact that a few who should have been assessed were left off the roll and the board cheerfully gave all whose names did appear a 70 per cent raise. The board will see if the error can not be corrected in some way.

TEACHING CANARIES.

Sole Occupation of Seven Hundred Families In a Small Town of Saxony.

In a small town called St. Andreasberg (Saxony) some 700 families are entirely engaged in the task of rearing and educating good canary singers. A great proportion of these singers is sent abroad, far or near—to London, to Australia and to the United States, where one single firm ships 100,000 birds each year. These canaries are the inferior birds, the schreir, as they are called in Germany, on account of their notes. These schreir, which are bought from 70 to 80 cents in the Harz, are sold for $5, $8 or $4 in America. The best birds are kept in Germany, where they are called hohrloller. A good hohrloller cannot be had under $8 or $10—in the Harz—and $20 and $25 are an annual prices. But such birds are certainly splendid singers. The Germans have quite a number of words, each of which applies to a different sort of tune, or intonation; the benlrolle is in minor key; allgarcelle applies to silver notes; koller to a warbling which reminds of the murmur of water, glnchrolle is similar to the nightingale's notes, and ona may say that every detail of the canary's song has been named, and that for every one there is a standard of perfection which the expert fancier knows perfectly well. The song of all canaries is not exactly similar. Each race has its special points, and while the one is great on bellrolle, for instance, it is weak on glnchrolle, while the case is reversed with another race.

Of courses singing is a natural feature with canaries, but the influence of education is considerable. The educational curriculum begins in May for the young canaries, and they are, as soon as possible, separated from their parents. Education is all in this: Keep the young bird from hearing any but excellent singers. Some 15 or 20 young canaries are put in one cage with an older bird, an especially good singer, and he teaches them the elements. They try to imitate him, and hence comes his beneficial influence. In August each of the young birds is put in a small cage and kept in the immediate vicinity of the cage of the teacher. At this time the fancier tries to gather some idea of the progress achieved and of the aptitude of the different birds. The best are put in the nearest vicinity of the teacher. In order to prevent the young birds from getting disturbed their cages are wrapped, with cloth, so as to prevent them from seeing what is going on around them, and in order to encourage singing the cages are generally shaped in form of a dome; this shape intensifies the sound, and the birds are pleased with their own music.—Popular Science News.

Swedish Men and Women.

What enormous fellows and what lovely young persons some of these Swedish men and women are! Nowhere will you see such noble specimens of adult humanity as in Stockholm's streets. The feature seems to pervade all classes, though it is not least striking among the nobility. Sex first is a condition height for a man here, and really I do not believe I exaggerate in saying that men of 6 feet 2 or 4 inches are as abundant in Stockholm as men of 6 feet with us.

The tallness of the women is just as noteworthy. Too much it less, however, because they are so well proportioned. They say it is easy to tell by the size of the boots outside the doors which rooms of a hotel are occupied by the Swedish fair. The is a very undesirable hit at the Swedish ladies. Though they do wear sizes or sevens in shoe leather, no sculptor would find fault with them on professional grounds. Moreover, they have most winsome complexions, and of course blue eyes are now here more intensely blue than here.

It is comforting to know—I speak on the evidence of one of the pensionnaires—that Swedish maidens have a great admiration for English bachelors. They read French novels, but they believe in English bridegrooms. The blood bond still exists, I suppose, between them and us.—Cornhill Magazine.

The Seat of the Brain.

At a certain 5 o'clock tea the other day one dashing creature demanded: "Do tell me, Mabel, what organ we think with? I know we love with the heart and hear with the ears, but I've entirely forgotten how it is about thoughts."

Mabel's pretty face was suspended over the samovar. "Papa says I think with my tongue."

Impossible!" broke in a college sophomore; "it is done with the mind."

"Oh, I know better than that!" from the dashing creature. "The mind is what you make up when you want to do things."

"Nonsense, her," insists the sophomore, "if you like that any better—the seat of the brain."

"Brains, me!" sighs she at the samovar, "that explains something. I didn't know brains had a seat. It must be, then, that mine never get up."—New York Recorder.

Roman Clocks.

"You know," said a man, "there are people who seem to be able to tell the time of day without the aid of a timepiece; I don't mean by looking at the sun or any such thing, but right offhand. If you ask one of these people what time it is he says, 'Twenty-five minutes past 4,' or 'Twenty minutes to 12,' or whatever it may be, and he gets within five minutes of right. It seems as though time had left upon their minds some impress of its flight."—New York Press.

CHAPTER XLIII.

I MAKE HERBERT CONFESS TO TARAS.

I returned to the Grange that evening. Mere Lucas, though she could not conceal the change in her sentiments toward me, did her best to make me feel at home in her sitting room and supply all my physical requirements. For the first time she permitted herself to sit down to table with me, and we shared the same dish that had come from her master's table. There was significance in this. In her opinion I ranked no longer in social distinction with Taras and Mlle. Leroy.

"Fill, your glass again, my dear," said she. "The master begrudges me nothing, as you know, and when I call him I expected Mme. Leroy he bade me fete you."

Presently she left me to answer this dialrag roun bell. She returned with the coffee service, her under lip mined and rueful mingving in her face.

"He wants to see you," she whispered. "Tell Mme. Leroy,' says he, 'that it will give an great pleasure if she will come in and talk to me.' I begged him to excuse you, as you have a headache and are not fit for society tonight, but I do not see how you are to get out of it tomorrow. We ought to have thought of this beforehand."

"I have thought of it. I want to speak to him."

"Mon Dieu! I didn't think you had grown so hardy. Look you, you will have to mumble your words finely, or he will know you by your voice, and then what will happen?"

"If he cannot forgive me, I must bear it," said I. "But whether he forgive me or not I am sure he will not betray me to my disgrace, and that is all I fear."

"No, that is certain. You can count upon his saying nothing about you to any one as surely as you can rely upon my silence. Nevertheless it's as good as confessing everything to make yourself known to him. However," she added, with a sigh of satisfaction, "thank God, there's your clothes, that I brought away from Lambeth, up stairs in the room, and all your linen as sweet and clean as bondocan make them."

Clean linen and a neat appearance were very much more in accordance with her views of true repentance than sackcloth and ashes, and I doubt if she could have felt genuine respect for any one in such a waywoun and bedraggled condition as mine.

Soon after breakfast the next morning she led me into the dining room ,where Taras was sitting and burning hastily introduced me as her cousin, Mme. Leroy, she as speedily withdrew, leaving me to take the consequences upon my own shoulders.

After begging me to be seated Taras said:

"We would have sent a trap to the station; if we had known you were coming last night. It is a long way from the station. I hope you feel better this morning, monbrue."

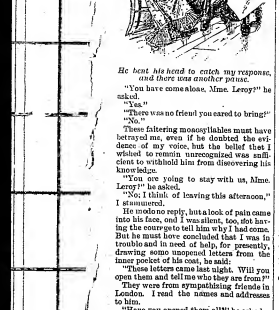
I had intended to disguise my voice, but my heart revolted at such deception, and my dear, stricken friend, and, after a moment's hesitation, my natural voice I answered "Yes."

At that one word, faint as it was, he started, and turning his head slowly toward me—for he had mistaken my position in the room—he fixed me. for a full minute, he was silent, his closed eyelids quivering as if in conflict with the tendency of them to penetrate the eternal shroud that hid me from him.

"Mme. Leroy!" he said interruptively, with emotion in his voice.

"Yes."

He bent his head to catch my response, and there was another pause.



He bent his head to catch my response, and there was another pause.

"You have come alone, Mme. Leroy?" he asked.

"Yes."

"There was no friend you cared to bring?"

"No."

These faltering monosyllables must have betrayed me, even if he doubted the evidence of my voice, but he belief that I wished to remain unrecognized was sufficient to withhold him from discovering his knowledge.

"You are yoing to stay with us, Mme. Leroy?" he asked.

"No; I think of leaving this afternoon," I answered.

He made no reply, but a look of pain came into his face, and I was silent, too, not having the courage to tell him why I had come. But he must have concluded that I was in trouble and in need of help, for presently, drawing some unopened letters from the inner pocket of his coat, he said:

"These letters came last night. Will you open them and tell me who they are from?"

They were from friendships friends in London. I read the names and addresses to him.

"Have you opened them all?" he asked.

"Yes."

"I hoped there was one from a friend—a dear friend of bygone days—from whom I have been hoping and expecting to hear by every post. Do you mind looking through them again?"

I understood his motive in giving me the letters now, and seizing the opportunity I asked him if it was from a poor woman in distress that he expected to hear a nameless creature who dared not show her face.

"It cannot be my little friend," he said sadly. "She would not fear me. We were comrades, she and I, and should be still—companions in adversity. To think that I could judge her harshly is to judge me yet more unwilling."

"She does not fear you, but she dreads those who have less charity."

"She is in trouble, you tell me. Can I help her?"

"She hopes you will. Her happiness—more than she can tell you—depends on this."

"Tell me when she wents."

"She is in need of money."

"Does her happiness depend on that?"

"Yes."

"You are sure she asks for nothing more than money?"

"Nothing."

He bowed his head as if to conceal the pain that came into his face. Then, quickly recovering himself, he said gently;

"Poor soul, if money can make her happy, she shall have it."

He rose, felt his way to a writing table and seated himself before it. From a drawer he took out a checkbook, opened it, and running the long, nervous fingers over the paper he slowly wrote his name in the right hand corner. Then he tore out the check, folded it, and in the former seat gave it to me.

"I have still, I open," he said. "Ask her to write in—my unhappy little friend—the amount she needs, and tell her, in case she doubt it still, that her secret is safe in my keeping and that she has made me happy by remembering me in her distress."

I took the check, faltering some incoherent acknowledgment.

"You will stay with us a day or two?" he asked.

"No; I must go away today."

"Have you far to go home?"

"I am going to London," he replied evasively.

"You are staying with friends there?"

"No; I have no friend to go to."

"Are you quite alone?"

"Quite."

He was silent for a moment, seeming to remember me by his silence. Then he said:

"But you have friends."

"None but Mere Lucas and"——

He held out his hand quickly, and as it closed on mine a smile broke over his face.

"And me," he said. "Oh, if my car and reason deceived me the sound of touch would tell me whose hond this is I hold. Let us give up this game of crooked questions and cross answers and be ourselves. Have faith in me, little friend."

For some minutes we sat thus, with our hands locked, and neither spoke. Some such feeling of mingled joy and sympathetic sorrow as choked my utterance may have silenced him. Perhaps he was waiting for me to confide in him—perhaps to pour out the history of past troubles that he might give me comfort. But I dared not answer that silent appeal, and the tear that slipped from my cheek and fell upon my hand was not one that would aid the confession I could make.

"Have nothing I can do to help you?" he asked in a tone of deep agitation.

"Nothing—nothing more at this time. Do not ask me to help me. I need no help now. The worst is past. Better days must come. This is a fall and a rise."

"I want to know no more than that," he answered humbly with the old confidence. "In past, we will cease to think of it. Let us go in the garden," he added in a brighter tone as he rose to his feet. "The sun ought to be shining today."

He took my trembling arm.

"You know the way?" he asked.

"Yes; I walked across the lawn yesterday."

"I knew it," he murmured. "Something touched my arm, and I did that 'guess' at it. I have been expecting you to come."

He said this in a tone so unconvincing, that the rebilant happiness in his face surprised me, though I knew the vigor and fortitude of his character. Our words not have imagined but for those poor closed eyes that he had lost the most precious gift of nature. He pressed my arm to his side and spoke some wise words of assurance, adding:

"We have both met with misfortune, little friend."

"I think too much of my own."

"Mine," he said to hurry my thoughts, "is not so great as you would think. At first it seems hard to bear—the world seemed so empty. But I am learning to see more with out my eyes, and I find a multitude of beautiful things that I used before escaped my notice. I never weary of sitting here and listening—puzzling out where all the sounds come from and making a better acquaintance with the hidden world."

"As you are saying you have, Miss Bell to read to you and play."

"Yes; she is a good, amiable girl, wonderfully patient and untiring."

There was a great whir of wings over our heads, startling me for the moment, and then six or eight beautiful pigeons fluttered down and settled on Taras' shoulders and outstretched arm. He gave them a handful of maize from his pocket, and then chattered about his head with outstretched wings to take the grain.

"Do they come down to Miss Bell like that?" I asked, with envy.

"They will come to any one who has something to give them," he said, smiling. I wondered if he regarded me in the same light.

I held out my hand timidly to the pretty, fluttering birds, but they had swallowed the last grain, and they took to their wings and flew away to the roof.

I could hear it no longer. The pain at my heart was greater than I could endure.

"I must go away, too," I said, choking down my grief.

CHAPTER XLIV.

A FRIEND IN NEED.

Taras would have had me take his carriage to the station, but I refused. I wanted to be quite alone that I might relieve my heart of its burded in an unrestrained flow of tears. And as soon as I got away from the gates of the Grange they came—those welcome tears—and blinded I stumbled along the road with down bent head.

When the paroxysm was past, I tried to think of the future, and even the prospect of bringing Gordon back and removing the illusion that might have caused Taras's respect and affection for me failed to lighten my spirits. Could she old tie ever be revived? Would Taras ever again feel as he had felt toward me? Had he not already given his heart to Judith? I asked. Then the figure of George Gordon as I had seen him as the last moments standing under the dark pines, waving his hand in a cheerful farewell, rose before my imagination, and at the thought of his bitter disappointment in finding that Judith had transferred her love to Taras—as I felt she must have done, living for so long in close companionship with him—of his experiencing with disappointment and regret as this which tore my heart, I asked if it would not be almost more merciful to leave him there in ignorance of this greater misery. But the thought of doing my duty urged me on and overcame these hesitating doubts.

Mr. Pelham had given me finishing touch of nevroess to his office by the addition of a new clerk, who, when I entered, was engaged in addressing circulars at his desk. After taking my name, which I gave as Mme. Leroy, this young man led me into the inner office, where I found Mr. Pelham waiting for clients to come with the pestience of a spider on the lookout for stray flies, as it seemed to me.

"I have got it," I said triumphantly as I laid the check before him.

"I am delighted to hear it, madame. You wish me to go with you to Mr. Lazarus and see this affair through—which, under the circumstances, would be considered advisable course in a transaction where proof of payment may be needed. No time is to be lost. I"— His enthusiasm was abruptly checked and his countenance fell as he glanced from the check to the letter I folded. "But this is not filled in, madame."

"That is why I came to see you. I want to write is the amount, and I want you to answer how to do it."

"I perceive," he said, but in a dubitative tone, and then, as if anticipating a repetition of the difficulties that presented themselves to Gordon's offer, he added: "It will be advisable perhaps to take this to the bank before we see Mr. Lazarus. Business men are so particular, you know."

His spirit quickly rose again, however, as I filled up the check according to his directions, the prospect of speedy success reviving, I think, as agreeable to him as to Mr. Lazarus himself, and when I had done he rose briskly and took his hat from the peg on the wall.

"Oh, by the way," he said, coming back to the table and opening a drawer, "can you tell me if your Mr. Ravaugh has an office in Lambeth?"

"In Lambeth? Not to my knowledge."

"Ah, thes. is a singular coincidence and nothing more. My clerk," he explained, "is engaged in addressing circulars for certain capitalists respecting a company that is being formed. Among the envelope was among them, and the some catching my eye—your interesting case is continually in my mind —I looked in thedirectory and found, to my astonishment, that the office to which this letter is addressed was occupied by Messrs. Bell & Gordon. I say 'was' advisedly, because probably this is the case completed last autumn. Now, the association of these two names—"

"Of the Old Lambeth Pottery!" I interrupted.

"Yes, that is the address."

"That may be Kavaugh's address now. What is inside the envelope?" I asked eagerly.

"We will see."

He opened it.

"Only a circular. If you think there may be more in this than meets the eye, madame, I will question Mr. Drett before you—here, now, if you please."

"Yes," I said. I feeling that I could not rest in uncertainty as to the extent of the clerk's connection with Kavanagh.

Mr. Pelham placed a chair for me where I could sit with my back to the window, and touched the bell on the table. The new clerk came to the door.

"Come in, Mr. Brett," said the solicitor "I saw a circular addressed to a Mr. Kavanagh, Old Lambeth Pottery. Did you know him?"

"Client of my late employers—Evans & Evans—sir."

"You don't know him personally?"

The clerk shook his head, with a smile.

"A little too high up for that, sir," said he. "A gentleman of fortune—holds a post in the house, I believe."

"He speculates, of course."

"Not sure, sir. I know he has bought up two or three little potteries."

"What potteries?"

"Well, there's the Old Lambeth, but it took that up, I fancy, more from clarity than as a paying concern."

"But the Old Lambeth—why, that's Bell & Gordon's surely!"

"Was, sir, before Mr. Gordon retired."

Mr. Gordon retired!" exclaimed the solicitor in a tone of incredulous astonishment. "Why, this is the first I have heard of it."

Last November. A young lady in the case, I believe," said the clerk, with a gentle grin, which he would certainly have kept for another occasion had he supposed that I was the young lady in question. "Don't know much about that, but I do know that he left his affairs in a regular muddle and behaved shamefully toward his partner, Mr. Bell. Colonel Bell."

"This is bad news, madame," said Mr. Pelham, turning to me with a grave shake of the head. "In what way did he behave shamefully, Mr. Brett?"

"Took Colonel Bell into partnership and invested in a pottery that was worth nothing as all the connoisseurs declared, and shuffling Kina and improving the glazes and then, when he found that the colonel's affairs were not so good as he supposed, he realized what he could and bolted, leaving this poor old gentleman to get out of his difficulties as he could."

"Ah, well, what happened then?"

"Things went wrong for a time with the colonel. The kiln that he still had to pay for cracked in the first time it was used. Then to meet his creditors, the poor old fellow tried to raise money on some mining stock and found the shares worth nothing. Mr. Kavanagh introduced him to us, and I had to go into the affair, so I know all about it."

"And the result of your examination showed?"

"Showed that Colonel Bell had not sixpence in the pound to pay his creditors."

"But he could call upon his partner, Mr. Gordon."

"Couldn't find him, not a trace of him in London, and his solicitor—Cunningham of Lincoln's Inn—refused to produce speedy without his order, naturally."

"Oh, Mr. Gordon had known them?"

"Plenty, but it's all tied up. No one can touch it until he is found or an order is obtained from the court of bankruptcy."

"Dear me! And what did Colonel Bell do in that emergency?"

"Just what might be expected of an honorable and gentlemanly man. He had made business—sold up all his private property and paid over every penny to the creditors of Bell & Gordon. Evans & Evans did their utmost to prevent him making such a disastrous sacrifice and advised him to declare himself bankrupt at once. But he would not be persuaded. Nothing in most things, he was as stubborn as—as anything in life. Old fashioned notions, you know, sir, about honor and the disgrace of being white washed."

"Of course the same realized was insufficient to satisfy the creditors of the firm."

"Didn't satisfy a quarter of them, and left him without funds to work the business. Then was foreseen by Evans & Evans, who told the obstinate old fellow that he was only throwing his money away and advised him to stop."

"So that after all he had to close the works and declare himself insolvent?"

"He would have had to do so to a dead certainty, but just at the last moment Mr. Kavanagh came forward and lent him a sum of money to clear off the debt, rebuild the kiln and start afresh."

"Did Mr. Kavanagh advance the money on personal security?"

"Not exactly, sir—he took a mortgagson the property."

"I don't see my great generosity, Mr. Brett, in advancing money on a mortgage."

"There was in this case, sir. Evans & Evens had thought of raising money by a mortgage, but on looking into the deed of partnership they found an impediment in the way. Mr. Gordon could repudiate any obligation made without his consent."

"I see. Mr. Kavanagh relies upon Mr. Gordon fulfilling the obligation when he returns?"

"Yes, sir, and considering all things that's not very good security."

"Supposing Mr. Gordon should not trouble himself to return, what then, Mr. Brett?"

"Then Mr. Kavanagh will come out all right. Ever farthing the gallant old colonel can scrape out of the affair is made over to Mr. Kovanagh's account toward the payment of the mortgage, and if he only has the luck he will certainly have. Mr. Kavanagh is looking up at the pottery now. I think he's there this morning."

"I think you said that Mr. Kavanagh has been very partial to other potteries."

"Two or three small ones," he snapped them up the moment he heard that Hinton were going to turn their business into a company, knowing thet the first object of the company would be to extend the works, which could only be done by buying up these potteries. And the result proved the justice of his forethought. The company would give him a check for the whole lot at the clerk's notice."

"And transfer the mortgage on Bell & Gordon's pottery?"

"Oh, yes; they would take thorisk of pulling that through all right. A young company, you know, sir, must start at a trifle."

"And if the company chose to foreclose—I suppose they would—Mr. Bell would be forced to shoulder everything and go in for bankruptcy?"

"Oh, of course, as a man of honor, Mr. Kavanagh would indemnify him out of the first money he received as trustee in bankruptcy."

"Yes, as a man of honor, he would," assented Mr. Pelham, and then turning to me, with the slightest indication of a wink, he said in a tone of smurness: "Well, madame, you see your money is quite safe. Thank you, Mr. Brett. If any one calls you can say that I shall be back in an hour."

The cab which had brought me from Waterloo stood at the door. We got in, and Mr. Pelham, with a sigh of relief, told the cabman to take the best beside me!

"I am very much interested to hear of Mr. Brett are the same that you are no-longer in the employ of Messrs. Evans & Evans, madame?"

"Yes; they are, the same."

"Well, you see how matters stand."

"I think I understand what he said."

Of course a great deal was less clear to me than how I have tried to make it in this narrative.

It is pretty clear that Kavanagh is getting all his eggs in one basket for the convenience of selling out and bolting as a company's promoter. All these arrangements are clearly made with a view to the possibility of Mr. Gordon's never coming back to return.

Mr. Pelham's position with regard to Gordon is rendered delicate by the offer made by this company. He knows as well as I do that Gordon is dead in love with Judith. It isn't likely that a man who has made such a sacrifice would allow any feeling should be restrained by consideration for an old man—that he should jeopardize his own future, though it be in a slight measure, merely to keep Colonel Bell out of the workhouse. I think we shall find that he has some stronger motive for this delay."

When the cab stopped, Mr. Pelham left me and took the check into the bank. In a few minutes he returned with a jubilant expression on his face.

"All correct, madame," he said, stepping briskly into the cab. Then he directed the cabman to drive to Houndsditch, and as he settled on the seat opposite me took a bundle of notes caressingly, as if the touch of the crisp paper was a real pleasure to him.

Mrs. Lucas received with unctuous civility, and having counted over the notes in his turn opened a drawer and brought out a bag into which Mr. Pelham thought he carefully read through once more.

"You have come only just in time, my dear lady," said he as he began to fill up a telegram form. "Mr. Schemyl leaves Moscow tomorrow."

"Put my friends are not in Moscow," I said.

"No; they are at Voronstkaya, I suppose. It would never do for Mr. Schemyl to receive a telegram from you. You might not know whom he left in charge of the business when he came away?"

"Yes, I know my friends always."

"His brother Borgis, I think."

"Ah, a very good man, Borgis Schemyl, very clever. I congratulate you—one of the cleverest men in the business. He will get a telegram from his brother Schemyl tomorrow in all probability and put your friends well on the road before Mr. Schemyl returns."

"You think they will get away safely?" I asked anxiously.

"There's every hope if Mr. Borgis has the management. The only difficulty will be in crossing the frontier, but if you have no enemies here who are likely to warn the police you may be certain they will speed on your friends in three or four weeks' time."

Commending my affairs into the care of the clerk, Mr. Pelham said:

"Everything points to the necessity—the vital necessity—of keeping Kavanagh in ignorance of your escape. Even when Mr. Gordon returns you ought not to let him know it before we have obtained an order for his arrest. At the first intimation of danger he will try to slip through our fingers. Now, where is Mr. Gordon likely to go? Have you any suspicion?"

"To Lambeth," I replied without hesitation.

"Why, that is the very place he ought to avoid. Can you think of no means of communicating with him before he arrives here?"

After a moment's consideration I said that it was probable he would call upon the gentleman who had helped me in Berlin, Mr. Hoffman and his wife.

"Considering all things— Excuse me, madam," he broke off, with an apologetic cough, "but your hair behind has worked a little to one side. Considering all things, as I was about to remark," he continued, even as I had replaced the false hair, "do not you think it would be advisable to get to Berlin and wait there with these friends until Mr. Gordon comes?"

"No," I said, "I could not do that. I must be in England. I will write to Berlin that will answer the some purpose."

He shook his head doubtfully and glanced nervously at my treacherous knot. I, too, felt that it would be wiser to go away, but I could not reconcile myself to the idea of going so far from Taras, even for a few weeks, little as I had to hope in staying near him.

"May I ask where I may write to you in case I have anything important to communicate?"

"I will let you have an address. I do not know yet where I shall stay. I think near Woking."

"Woking. Of course you have a reason to suggest that, but Mr. Kavanagh might by chance go to Woking?"

"I know he passes through the town occasionally, but," I added with a sigh, "I run the alarm expressed in the little solicitor's face. "One thing I thought of staying at no roeslede inn quite out of the town, where we should have little chance of stopping."

"Still, many people visit a roadside inn. You could not always stay in one room out of sight, and—may I say anything so—your appearance might excite curiosity and give rise to gossip, which would be in the highest degree undesirable. I positively think, madame, that you should expect to the gentleman who has advocced this money."

"I will not go there," I said, already convinced of the folly of the idea. "It is merely morbid and sentimental motive. "Will me that I ought to do, and I will do it."

"Have you any idea where Mr. Kavanagh lives?"

"At Sydcbam, I think."

"Ah, well, if you took a lodging at Sroke Newington, say, I think you would be perfectly safe—especially if you laid aside your disguise."

I feel sure my hair had gone wrong again.

"And what shall I do then?" I asked, feeling that the long period of suspense would be intolerable without some occupation to divert my thoughts.

"What should you have done at Woking, mademe?" Mr. Pelbem asked pertinently.

"I think I should have walked a great deal in the woods."

"Unfortunately there are no woods at Stoke Newington, but there are other attractions for a lady. There are shops and—a free fond of music."

"Music!" I echoed, jumping at the suggestion. "That is the very thing. I want to learn the piano."

"In that case I think I can suggest the very thing that would suit your requirements. I have a sister living there who gives lessons in pianoforte playing. She would be happy to give you lessons, I dare say, and there would be no necessity for explanations, which might be required elsewhere. I myself live at Stoke Newington, and there is no reason why you should not come to my sister Jane and myself for a week or two."

I accepted this offer eagerly, for the notion of learning music fired my imagine tion with the wildest hopes. In my innocence I thought that by working all day I might in a month be able to play as well as Judith Bell. And that night I took up my quarters under the roof of Miss Janet Pelbom.

CHAPTER XLV.

I DISCOVER THE FIRST CAUSE OF KAVANAGH'S ANGER.

Miss Janet Pelbom was the dearest little old soul that ever lived. She had the blessed little clearity and cheerfulness of her brother, but with a sweet and amiable dispositon that was far more prepossessing in its character because of the restraint imposed by circumstances. Possibly she was poor, but maybe. But indulgent as her nature was, Miss Pelbam could not permit me to practice on the pianoforte on Sundays, as few for her neighbors, for the walls were thin, and though I carefully learn exotic music many for six days of the week to entitle them to a day's rest on the seventh. But her kindness which was not restrained by this inclemtable to me, and so on the second Monday I put a fair sum of money, for which I had bought over night, in my pocket and left Stoke Newington at an early hour.

There was but one place in the world that had the slightest attraction for me, and that was Butterford, and with a wild feeling of freedom and delight I resolved to go on my own adventure and the sense of the risk I ran, I took the first train from Waterloo to Woking.

I was alone in the compartment when the train started, and taking advantage of this opportunity I carefully pinned on the veil that I had purchased for the occasion, and put on the thick, spotted veil to complete the disguise.

Mrs. Lucas received with unctuous civility, and having counted over the notes in his turn opened a drawer and brought out a bag into which Mr. Pelham thought he carefully read through once more.

"You have come only just in time, my dear lady," said he as he began to fill up a telegram form. "Mr. Schemyl leaves Moscow tomorrow."

Commending my affairs into the care of the clerk, Mr. Pelham said:

I crept round the seat and dropped in the trench behind it.

ging that I should be secure there while they passed. It was not likely that they would stop to pry into the debris at the base of the seat. They had ceased to talk, but as they drew nearer and nearer I heard the sound of their footsteps. I could see nothing but the banks and the loose growth about me. The sound ceased, and then, all at once, I heard Kavanagh exclaim in admiration:

"By Jove, what a glorious view!"

"This is my favorite walk. When it is fine, we come and sit here for a time," Judith answered.

"A pleasant suggestion. Shall we rest a while?"

I heard the rustle of Judith's skirts as she seated herself, and then Kavanagh spoke again:

"Ah, there's the Grange below there, and Taras with your father."

"Poor papa! Even from here I see the change in him. He used to sit on a seat."

"It's that detestable office. He sticks at it too close. He is there bending over his desk from morning till night. It is too much for a man of his age. Why should he, I ask, as Chairman of a work could do the work he does."

"Simply he does not know it."

"Unhappily I think he does. That blundering idiot, the accountant, made it clear to him that his share in the business is practically nil, and knowing that but little remains to be added to make him rentire."

"How can he refer to it as his nothing?"

"He might have ill it spared."

"You are thinking of Taras' generous offer."

"No; I know your father's character too well to believe that he would accept any offer from Taras or from me that carries the smack of charity with it. It is only from his desire to see you settled—to take a gift and still feel independent. You owe him still for all he has bestowed on you."

"When the trouble came last year, I gave up all I had and have barely covered the house debts. I cannot rely on money to the end of papa's life the salary Penna pays me. It is more than I could have asked, I know that, but I have sacrificed my own little share of comfort in the hope you point to. Oh, I have thought of it over and over again. But how can I give papa a home when my future is so uncertain? It would be dreadful to take him away from business and then find that I had not enough to support him."

"But your own future need not be so uncertain case. You know that I am ready to offer him a home and surroundings as pleasant as the Grange below there—a home in which you might be to him what you now are to me."

"I could do this—I!" she murmured in a tone of bewildered surprise. Then, after a moment's pause, she added in a questioning, "Mr. Kavanagh?"

"Yes, I cannot let this hope go until you have heard me out and I know whether there is hope for me or not," he answered, with low and passionate earnestness. "It is time to speak. I have been silent as long as silence was endurable—watching my feelings toward you as only one with my tormented desire could. I love you, Judith! I have love you for more than a year—from the first day I met you. I loved you then—barely until Gordon came, I never away the treasure that his soul was too base to value. Since then I have built every hope upon the possibility of making you my wife."

In that instant it flashed upon me that here was the secret motive for which we had been searching—a motive stronger than avarice. It was to rob George Gordon of his sweetheart and his fortune that we had been kidnapped and sent to Berlin.

When Editor Ware gets through with his libel suit he will be a formidable candidate for the legislature, and as for his paper, he will have to increase his printing facilities.

Gov. Nelson has appointed C. A. Gilman State librarian, to succeed W. H. H. Taylor who died recently. The governor never forgets such a friend as Charlie Gilman has been to him.

It is said that Adj. Gen. Mullen is a candidate for commander at the coming State encampment G. A. R. The General is an indomitable hustler and would make an A. 1 commander. He has hosts of friends among the G. A. R. boys in the State. Capt. Van Sant, of Winona, is also said to be hustling for the position.

Farmer Donnelly is complaining of hard times, as usual, this winter and boarding, meanwhile, at the Ryan hotel in St. Paul. It is indeed hard times when farmers have to work so hard all the year round and can't afford anything better for themselves and families than a $8 to $10 dollar per day hotel, but it strikes us that, if we were the landlord of the Ryan we should dislike to have our guests find so much fault with the board.

The Northfield News protests against the coupon system, whereby a subscriber by cutting out six coupons, sending them to the publisher with 15 cents receives in return a picture or something like that, the original cost of which to the publisher is two or three cents. The News characterizes the business as beneath the sphere of true journalism and the Journal concurs in that opinion and has thought so for some time. It would be a first-class Jewfake, but is wholly unworthy a legitimate newspaper enterprise.

Sauk Center Avalanche: "The cities of Grand Forks, N. D., and Crookston, this state, have been suffering from a siege of typhoid fever, and in both cities many deaths have occurred. The epidemic is attributed to the water furnished by the water works. At both cities the water supply is obtained from the Red River, which at best is a dirty, filthy stream."

You have mixed those children up, Frank. It is true that Crookston has had several cases of fever, but it is not true "that many deaths have occurred" here, from that cause. No one should have to be scared on the river water, having plenty of artesian water, which is used by probably two-thirds of our citizens. It is probably true that the river water is responsible for the cases of fever we have had, as it is noticeable in every case that the victim had been using river water. Grand Forks would give half she is worth if she could procure as good artesian water as we have.

The Grand Forks News man is making a blooming jackass of himself in his insane attack on Crookston during the fever epidemic that prevails there—but we believe he is the only one who feels that way. To read the News one would get the idea that Crookston people were a set of villains whose greatest delight was to manufacture fever for innocent victims at Grand Forks! We are led to wonder what earthly good his insane ravings can do him, anyhow. They can only serve to point to the fact that Crookston is by far the healthiest city of the two, lying high and dry with excellent drainage and an abundance of artesian water—an article by the way that Grand Forks has not and cannot obtain. The location of Grand Forks is also favorable to the perpetuation of disease, lying as it does low and flat. These are facts that cannot be controverted and and would not be referred to by us only for the unprovoked and unjust attacks upon our city by the News. While we sincerely deplore the sad affliction of our neighbor we cannot remain passive while such lies are being promulgated. It is a fact which we do not pretend to deny that we have had cases of the fever here but the fatal cases do not begin to compare with those of our neighbor and every effort is being made to prevent our neighbors from suffering ill effects from the cases here. If the News will see that Grand Forks is as careful to prevent the spread of the disease it will have its hands sufficiently full and the dwellers along the river below Grand Forks will have cause for gratitude.

In the municipal election at Duluth on Tuesday, there were 9,775 votes cast. Lewis, the republican candidate for mayor, received 6,355 and Jenswold, the demo-pop candidate only 3,420. That is the proper way to handle Mr. Baldwin—better than a hundred burnings in effigy.

Believing the Journal was entitled to the county printing, having offered the lowest bid for the work, we decided to commence an action against the county board to find out whether or not there was any relief under the present statutes in regard to printing, which are very vague and uncertain.

An order commanding the commissioners to show cause why they had not awarded the printing to the Journal was taken to Judge Ives, but that gentleman refused to sign the order on the ground that he was disqualified from hearing the case, nor would he sign the order and have the case heard before another court. He gave us his reasons for refusal, the following:

"I refuse to grant the order asked for, on the ground that I am disqualified by reason of being a relative to one of the parties in interest and be deprived of the benefits of the contract now existing."

The judge's son Harry, who runs the St. Hilaire Spectator, is the party referred to, and lest he be deprived of $150 or $200, the judge could not hear the case, or sign the order and have some other judge hear it. Leaving the people to estimate the calibre of our populist judge, we pass on. The order was signed by Judge Searle and the hearing took place last Friday. On motion of the defendant's attorney, the judge granted a motion to quash the application for a peremptory writ of mandamus compelling the board to award the printing to the Journal. The judge held that the board cannot be compelled to reward a contract, and that a mandamus in this case would not lie, and found as to that the question of the validity or legality of the bid of the Times could not be raised under this proceeding. The case was therefore decided on a legal technicality and not on its merits, as is averred by the Times with so much gusto, clubbing "vindication" and "endorsement" and all that. And the case been tried, evidence adduced and arguments submitted and then the judge had ruled that it was right for the board to award the contract to the Times its claims of vindication would have been just. But the whole decision on a legal technicality does not vindicate the Times nor relieve the taxpayers of paying two prices for their printing.

Fargo Republican: At the funeral of his wife and many times afterwards Mr. Chapin had expressed the wish that a band might play at his funeral, and in line with this desire the Union orchestra of nine pieces was stationed near the coffin and opened the services with an overture. Mayor Smith then introduced Hon. S. G. Comstock. Mr. Comstock was one of Mr. Chapin's earnest friends and it was in accordance with a well known desire of the deceased that he was invited to make an address at his funeral. The speaker briefly related the career of the deceased in California and his early struggles in Moorhead and at the birth of Fargo and the abiding faith he and gentleman had from that moment in the city's future. He feelingly touched upon his sterling worth, and with deep pathos and dramatic ability alluded to the unfortunate end of his friend and commended his soul to Almighty God.

At the close of Mr. Comstock's address a quartette composed of Messrs. Holgate, Adams, E. C. Geary, jr., and Nugent sweetly sang a "Farewell" to the departed.

THE REVIEW TABLE.

The Review of Reviews for February is strong in all of its departments. In the "Progress of the World" the important political, social and industrial events of the month are reviewed and their significance clearly and frankly set forth. This department also contains many timely illustrations, chiefly portraits of well-known men and women. Among the portraits are those of President Dole and his cabinet and sketches, drawn from life, of representatives, William L. Wilson, of West Virginia; Charles F. Crisp, of Georgia; Thomas B. Reed, of Maine; Benton McMillan, of Tennessee; Thomas L. Johnson, of Ohio, and Julius C. Burrows, of Michigan.

The secret of the great success of The Cosmopolitan is not so hard to find, if one looks carefully over the number for February. A story by Valdes, the famous Spanish novelist, is begun in this number. Arthur Sherburne Hardy's story, "A Rejected Manuscript," is charmingly illustrated by L. Marold. A profusely illustrated article on the designing and building of a war-ship and a thrilling description of a naval coup but under the significant title: "The Meloban and the Penjberon" describes, after the manner of the Battle of Dorking, a possible sea-fight, the outcome of which is watched by the entire naval world. "Gliding Flight," is an interesting contribution to the problem of aerial navigation by one who has studied the flight of soaring birds in the east for twenty years.

Among the interesting articles in the North American Review for February are "My American Experience" by the President of the Swiss Republic; another article on the South Carolina Liquor Law, by the governor of South Carolina; "Are we a Plutocracy" by W. D. Howell's and a timely article on the Wilson bill, by Senator Roger Q. Mills.

A model number—The February New Peterson is brim-full of interest. The opening paper on "The Bermuda Island," by B. C. Walsh, is an admirable account of that delightful winter retreat, and it is illustrated by a series of very effective photogravures. "In Edinboro Town," by Mary Gray Unsted, is another beautifully illustrated paper, and a ramble through Scot's picturesque old city is described in a very fresh and entertaining manner. "A Strange dwelling," by Robert N. Keely, Jr., takes the reader on an interesting trip into Nicaragua, and the accompanying photogravures are as unusual as they are good. "The Fireside" is up to its customary high standard, and the illustrated book reviews are by Louise Shoulton and other well-known writers. Terms, one dollar a year. Address The New Peterson Magazine, No. 112-114 South Third St., Philadelphia.

Raise More Pork.

Speaking with Robert Stanton not long since that gentleman informed me that he is not getting near as many hogs this winter as he could earn for. He showed us by his books that since he has been carring hogs for farmers he has made a profit for them every year, of course some years more than others and this year all who have had pork have made a handsome profit. We have sometimes heard farmers say: "You can't make a cent raising hogs in this country even at the best prices ever paid for pork here, because the hogs will eat their heads off," and having noticed the way they go to work we are prepared to believe what they say. Such men keep their hogs shut up continually, and of course, have to feed them grain, more or less all the time. They also, as a rule keep their hogs till they are 18 months old, thus being obliged to feed them during one winter—and a very severe one—a grain. President J. J. Hill, of the Great Northern road is a great believer in stock for this country and has done much for its stock interests. Sending out along his line a lot of thoroughbred Shorthorn and Polled Angus bulls for distribution. We learn that this winter he will be buying 40 head of brood sows, and doing it with very little grain, as an experiment to see how cheaply pork can be produced. Of course it would not be advisable for everybody to go extensively into hogs—for that would glut the market, but everybody can increase to a every year to great advantage, and it should be done in such a way as to leave a profit even with pork at the lowest figure ever paid in the market, and it can be so produced. Pigs will do exceedingly well on grass or clover during the summer and make a good growth, and millet mixed with barley and sowed makes a good substitute when clover can't be had. Sowing a small patch of peas to turn your hogs into in the fall just before you want to shut them up to fatten, so much the better. A few hogs to turn off every year, a few good cows from which to make a gilt-edged article of butter, a few good laying hens, a few sheep, a few acres to grow and turn off every year, with plenty of barley and oats for home consumption is very much better than just one crop—wheat.

What More do We Want?

Bismarck Tribune: Congressman Johnson, in his discussion of the tariff measure, made a great point when he remarked that after taking the duty off barley, and destroying a home market for 10,000,000 bushels annually, which the farmers have, will gave the American farmer, the democratic party would console him by offering him free of duty such things as acorns, balm of Gilead, bologna sausage, dried blood, bladders, bristles, catgut, cuttlefish bones, dragon's blood, fashion plates, fish skins, flats, fossils, manna, moss, sauerkraut, skeletons, shrimps, snails, teeth and turtles. To the ordinary observer, even, must the great benefit of this free list be evident. What a blessing to the farmer is it to get his balm of Gilead, free of duty! The duty on balm of Gilead has been one of the things which has kept the farmer back all these years. Dried blood, too! When the duty upon this important article shall be removed from every farmer may have dried blood on his table, and rejoice that it is no longer a luxury. Then, too, the farmer may have cuttlefish bones whenever he wants 'em, and every tiller of the soil may lay in a huge stock of dragon's blood and fish skins entirely free of duty! Acorns and skeletons, also, are articles which the McKinley bill has kept beyond the reach of the agriculturalists for, to, all these years, and they will shed huge tears of joy to learn that catgut and bristles are no longer taxed, but are as free as salvation. The duty on flints, fashion plates and fossils, accounts for the impoverished condition of innumerable wheat raisers, and when the duty shall be removed, the coffers of farmers will run to overflowing with the yellow gold, which is saved to them by this wise provision of democrecy. With turtles on the free list, there will be no reason why any farmer should not have a flock of 'em in the barnyard, while a herd of snails and shrimps will soon become a common right on the typical American farm. And then can the farmer gaze about him, and contemplate all these blessings of democracy, in exchange for which he is only asked to stop the raising of barley, or knock off a few cents on each bushel. Truly the farmer will be blessed, under the careful provisions of the Wilson bill!

DUNN'S BUDGET.

Interesting News and Gossip from the National Capital.

Washington.—The Democrats of the Senate will indulge in a little humbug in their management of the tariff bill. They intend to report the income tax feature as a separate measure. This will insure the defeat of the income tax bill and they can promise the Eastern Democrats who are so anxious for the income tax that they will send it over to them after the other part of the tariff bill is out of the way. That is what they will promise, but they will do nothing of the sort. It will be a long hard contest between the House and Senate before an agreement is reached upon any kind of a bill, with the probabilities of the bill falling altogether.

Nobody has yet attempted to answer the speech of Senator Davis on Hawaii. The most able "cowkow" do not care to tackle the Minnesota Senator.

The Republican presidential fight will be between Harrison, McKinley and Reed with the possibilities of a dark horse winning.

Senator Washburn took a hand in the finnancial debate the other day. He maintained that it was the duty of this government to pay its debts and maintain its credit, and the men who purchased bonds at this time in spite of the Democratic and populistic attempt to discredit the bond issue were entitled to praise rather than censure.

If it had not been for Democratic success in 1892 there would have been no need of a bond issue, and it is not a popular thing, but if there had been such a bond about the legality of the issue the interest rate would have been about 2½ instead of 3 per cent.

I see the Second district papers are saying that McCleary ought to be returned. Now I go further. It continues to make a good representative he ought to be sent to Congress. It is the continual change that leaves the State busily unrepresented. Lind ought to be returned. He had reached a position of influence in the House held by no other man. You may say he declined; but we all know that he would have been obliged to go into every county in the district and make a fight against some local favorite for the desecration. And Lind would not do it.

WILSON BILL PASSED.

MOST OF THE AMENDMENTS IN LINE ON FINAL VOTE,

Only Seventeen Standing Out Against the Party Measure—The Income Tax Amendment Adopted. Wool Schedule Goes Into Effect Dec. 2. The Closing Debate.

Washington, Feb. 2.—At 0 o'clock last night, at the conclusion of one of the greatest, most exciting and most impressive scenes ever witnessed in the American Capitol, the Wilson tariff bill passed the house of representatives by a vote of 204 to 140. The events leading up to it were almost unparalleled in our annals. At 12 o'clock, after a preliminary skirmish of an hour over the barley schedule, the bill was reported to the house and the closing speeches were made. Such a vast concourse of people as assembled to hear these last arguments upon the great economic issue about to be submitted for final arbitrament to the representatives of the American people, had never before been seen within the precincts of the nation's legislative Capitol. Nothing like it was ever known in the history of the oldest inhabitant of the capital. For hours before the debate began the corridors leading to the galleries were a which finally became so great that men ceased to tremor and women fainted in fright. It is estimated that over 20,000 attempted to gain admittance to the galleries of the house during the day. Their seating capacity is 3,000 and every available seat was occupied long before the gavel dropped. The people were lined against the walls and banked against the doors, and so great did the crush become that the members of the house secured permission to bring their wives upon the floor.

Shortly after the house convened at 11 o'clock, the crowd in the immense gallery on the north side of the chamber became so great that there was imminent danger that some of the people would be pressed over the railing into the house floor. Those in the corridors kept crushing into the doorways, and those still further back pressed forward until the aisles and aisles of the galleries with a mob of restless, impatient men. The crowding at the doors continued until Speaker Crisp, who had been nervously noting the dangerous packing of people, interrupted the roll call long enough to say that it was not to be tolerated of safety to human life that the doorway should be cleared. He asked the doorkeeper to see absolutely no room for the ejectment of those who had found entrance into the aisles, but the policemen kept pressing back the people until they had materially reduced the danger that was so very apparent.

Reed Opens the Debate.

When Mr. Reed, the first speaker, arose at last to deliver the final plea for protection, the overhanging galleries were black and dense with the spectators who thronged them. Every inch of space upon the floor was taken. Only 10 members of the house were absent. Many gray-haired senators and other distinguished personages were on the floor, and in the galleries were Mrs. Cleveland, Mrs. Carlisle and other ladies of eminence and distinction. Then for three hours the oratory of the champion of the two succeeding days followed—Reed, Crisp and Wilson—while their partisans made the air vocal with their shouts of approval. The final passage of the bill was a surprise. Amid the most intense excitement, Democrats and Democrat who had been counted upon to vote against the measure in the affirmative. Only 17 Democrats of all the boastful Democratic opposition to the measure stood up on the roll call and voted against it. As each one cast his vote it was greeted with applause and cheers of the Republicans. Those who vote against it were Bartlett, Campbell, Covert, Cummings, Haines, Hendrix, Schorchorn and Sickles of New York, Cadmus of New Jersey, Sperry and Page of Connecticut, Geary of California, Shell of Kansas and Maxwell and Davey, Maynr, Price and Robertson of Louisiana. The majority for the bill, 64, exceeded the most sanguine expectations of the ways and means committee. When the speaker announced the vote, cheer followed cheer on the part of the Democratic side. Papers, hats, congressional records, and in fact everything which could be got hold of, were handed upon were flung in the air, and amid a perfect pandemonium of joy the vote was declared.

At the conclusion of Mr. Wilson's remarks, the speaker announced that there were pending amendments reported of the committee on ways and means to increase the duty on barley from 30 to 36 per cent ad valorem and on flax seed malt from 25 to 35 per cent, and the amendment of Mr. Towney (Rep., Minn.) to increase the duty to 22 cents per bushel on barley malt. The first vote was taken on the Towney amendment, which was lost upon and aye and nay vote by 120 to 197. The committee amendment was then agreed to, 202 to 104. A vote was then taken on the amendment fixing Aug. 2, 1894, as the time when the wool schedule goes into effect, and it was carried—205 to 104. The manufactured wool schedule goes into effect Dec. 2, by a vote of 198 to 42. The amendment repealing reciprocity and placing petroleum on the free list was then agreed to—177 to 68, and the income tax amendment by a vote of 183 to 60. The bill was then passed.

A Little Daughter

Of a Church of England minister cured of a distressing rash, by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Mr. Richard Birks, the well-known Druggist, 267 McGill st., Montreal, P. Q., says:

I have sold Ayer's Family Medicines for 40 years, and have heard nothing but good said of them. I know of many performed by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, one in particular being that of a little daughter of a Church of England minister. The child was literally covered from head to foot with a red and exceedingly troublesome rash, from which she had suffered for two or three years, in spite of the best medical treatment available. Her father was in great distress about the case, and, at my recommendation, at last began to administer Ayer's Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which effected a complete cure, much to her relief and her father's delight. I am sure, were he here to-day, he would testify in the strongest terms as to the merits of EXERCISE FOR THE EYES.

Absolutely Necessary In Order That the Vision May Be Preserved.

When the eyes are treated fairly, they are strengthened, not weakened, by work. Just as the arms of a blacksmith grow the stronger for his trade, so the eyes of watchmakers who work under healthy conditions are found to improve and not to deteriorate in vigor and quickness. It is the abuse of the eyes, not their use, which is to be avoided.

If a man is aware either that his eyes need an artificial correction or else have received their proper adjustment, and if he works, whether literary or mechanical, is done in a light both steady and sufficient and with a due regard as to ordinary sanitary rules, he may feel sure that he is strengthening his eyes, not weakening them, by his work. Men of intellectual parents sometimes are afraid of losing their mental powers in old age because they have drawn so much upon them when young. The reverse is nearer the truth, and if they have not overtaxed their brains the fear is absolutely groundless.

The man whose intellect goes first in old age is generally the man whose labor who has never strengthened and invigorated it by use; not the politician, the lawyer or the writer, but he who does. Men of intellectual parents sometimes are afraid of losing their mental powers in old age because they have drawn so much upon them when young. The reverse is nearer the truth, and if they have not overtaxed their brains the fear is absolutely groundless.

The man whose intellect goes first in old age is generally the man whose labor who has never strengthened and invigorated it by use; not the politician, the lawyer or the writer, but he who does. So with the eyes. Those who had strengthened their eyes by using them properly keep been sight longer than those who have never trained them. In the case of the man who has neglected to give his eyes full development they will fail in power along with his other bodily functions. Those, however, the man who, born with good eyes, has kept them in constant hard work and yet never strained them reaches old age, he may find them capable of performing their functions better than any other organ of the body.—Philadelphia Times.

Three Prayers of a Little Girl.

"God bless me every one." A little girl in bed in the other room is praying to go to sleep, but fighting to stay awake. "O Lord," said she, "make me good and let me go in the omnibus to see Aunt Margaret and all the aunts and nieces and mothers. Don't let it hail or snow or rain, for I want to go in the omnibus to see Aunt Margaret very much indeed, and all the aunts and nieces and mothers. Make me well so that I can go in the omnibus, please do. Bless grandpa and grandma, Aunt Kate and Aunt Sophia and Mr. Charles Swan, Aunt Margaret and mamma, and make us all good so that we can go to heaven at last, for Jesse' sake. Amen."

There was a pause of about two and the wide awake, defiant voice went on:

"Keep grandma from dying before she gets here. Don't let dog Rover happen to her. Don't let any bears or wild beasts eat her up. Bless grandpa and grandma and Mr. Charles Swan and Aunt Kate and Aunt Sophia."

Another pause, a little longer than the last and the unconquered one began again:

"I long for apples. I long for milk. I long for pie. I long for bread. I wish I had not that cold. I long for some brown bread. I long for some molasses. I long for some white bread. I long to be a woman. I thank thee that it did not rain or snow. Give me a clean spirit. Let me be good when papa is here, for it grieves him to have me naughty, and he buys me things—playthings. I have prayed that I should go to sleep. That makes three prayers."

A yawn, a long drawn breath, and then silence presently announced that the last prayer was answered, and sleep reigned.—Dan McCauley in Washington Post.

MR. CHILDS IS DEAD.

THE PHILADELPHIA PHILANTHROPIST GONE TO HIS REWARD.

He Commenced Sinking Friday Evening and Died at 3:01 a. m. Saturday—His Last Illness and Cause of Death—The Funeral Arrangements.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 8.—George W. Childs' illness ended in his death at 3:01 a. m. A midnight his physicians issued a bulletin that his last respiration, which became embarrassed at 10 p. m., was steadily growing worse; that his pulse was flagging, and his condition was beyond hope. After midnight the patient sank rapidly and it soon became certain that the end was very near. At the bedside where the beloved journalist and philanthropist passed away were George C. Thomas and James W. Paul of the firm of Drexel & Co., Mr. and Mrs. John Drexel, Miss Peterson, niece of Mrs. Childs, Mrs. Stanley, companion to Mrs. Childs, and Colonel Edward De Morrell.

Mr. Childs' Last Illness.

Mr. Childs' last illness began with a fainting spell which seized him while he was in his office in The Ledger building at 5 o'clock on the afternoon of Thursday, Jan. 19, just as he was putting on his overcoat, preparatory to go to his home. From that time on there have been alternating periods of hope and fear, as the semi-daily bulletins announced changes for better or worse until at midnight came the announcement that hope was dead and death imminent. There is but little reason to doubt that the immediate cause of the attack was overwork and anxiety attendant upon his efforts to see that the memory of his lifelong friend, the late A. J. Drexel, was properly honored. All of the day upon which came the attack was spent by Mr. Childs in preparing for the Drexel memorial services held in the Drexel Institute on Saturday, Jan. 20, two days after the fatal Thursday.

Funeral Arrangements.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 5.—The funeral arrangements for the late George W. Childs have been completed. The funeral will occur Tuesday afternoon from St. James Protestant Episcopal church. Only relatives, immediate friends, employes and delegates from various organizations will be present. Those will fill the church. A movement has already been started by the union printers of the city for a monument.

M'GLYNN'S LATEST.

He Declares Public Schools All That Could Be Desired.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 1.—Rev. Father Edward McGlynn, in an interview here, insists that he has not retracted one word of his opinions on parochial schools, which led to ecclesiastical censure being placed on him. Now he goes his old ideas one better, and declares that it is not the purpose of priests, monks and other ecclesiastics to teach anything but religion. Public schools, when properly conducted, were all that could be desired. Parochial schools were improper for the reason that the children who attended them were isolated in a manner. Religion should be taught only in churches, Sunday schools and at the mother's knee.

A Letter from Willis.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The president has transmitted to congress the dispatch received from Minister Willis last Saturday. The letter of President Dole is not inclined for lack of time to transcribe in time for Willis' steamer.

The letter contains nothing of importance beyond the information that the letter of Mr. Dole would be sent by next steamer.

Congressional Election.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—The special elections for two congressmen in the Fourteenth and Fifteenth districts resulted in an even distribution as far as political parties are concerned. Lemuel Ely Quigg (Rep.) and Isadore Strauss (Dem.) were the successful candidates.

It Was Officially Denied.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The report that Archbishop Ireland is to succeed Mgr. Satolli as the pope's allegate in this country, and that Mgr. Satolli was to be recalled, was officially denied at the residence of the allegate.

Bonilla Has Nicaragua.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—United States Minister Baker has transmitted to the state department a decree of the government of Nicaragua dated Dec. 28, recognizing the provisional government of Policarpo Bonilla, president of Honduras. Nicaragua is declared the ally of the provisional government under Bonilla.

Midwinter Fair Extended.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6.—The midwinter fair will be extended a month beyond the first time proposed. The managers have decided that as there was a delay of a month in opening, that it should be made up at the other end. The fair will not close until July 21 and probably not until August.

Corrigan Not Summoned.

ROME, Feb. 6.—Cardinal Rampolla, the papal secretary of state, has authorized the Associated Press to deny that Archbishop Corrigan of New York has been summoned to Rome.

How to Care For Sponges.

A large sponge is always a somewhat expensive item, and when it becomes odorous, as it sometimes does after a little use, one hesitates to throw it away at once, expecting to restore it. This is a very difficult matter to accomplish. Repeated scaldings will often fail to make a sponge sweet and soft, as it was originally. The best way to do is to take care of it at first. If the sponge is freed from soapsuds and hung where it will get dry each time after it is used, it will not become sour. In order to this, wash the soap out with warm water after using it and rinse it in cold water. Squeeze it as dry as you can with the hands, but do not wring it, as that would break the fibers.

It is a good thing to dry sponges in summer in the bright sunshine. In winter they must be dried by artificial heat, and for this reason special care must be taken to rinse them clean after using them. It is a great mistake to shut a sponge up in a close box, even though it may be one of solid silver. A sponge shut up in this way with the least dampness is sure to acquire an impure odor in time. The best place to keep a sponge is on a hanging wire soap tray or in an open basket of wire near the bathtub, where it can dry and is always convenient.

How to Make Apple Punch.

Quarter and core 12 tart apples. Do not pare; cover with a gallon of water, bring to boiling point and cook without stirring for 20 minutes; add a tumbler of quince jelly, strain through cheese cloth, add a pound of sugar, juice of 6 lemons and a pound of white grapes cut into halves. Serve in punch glasses. Very good.

It Depends Upon Circumstances.

The Commercial club of Birmingham, Ala., has some 600 members, nearly all of whom are Democrats and rank free traders—that is, when it affects the other fellow. The club, however, has passed an indignant protest against the removal of the duty on coal and iron ore, both of which are natural products of Alabama and both of which they desire should be protected, but just a year ago those very same people voted that protection was "unconstitutional" and "a fraud." This, it is to be presumed, is the case only when a party that protects the industries of the north, east or west, but when it protects southern industries and southern products then there is no "robber baron" in it at all.

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE IN THE payment of the sum of one hundred and eighty dollars, (180), which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Peter Larson and Ruby Larson, his wife, to Lensdell and Manning dated the 19th day of December, A. D. 1892, and given to secure the payment of the sum of three thousand and eighty hundred dollars interest thereon payable annually, which said mortgage with the power of sale therein contained was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk and State of Minnesota on the 20th day of December, A. D. 1892, at 9 o'clock a. m. in Book 47 Mortgages, page 19, and it being expressly provided in and by said mortgage that if default be made in the payment of the interest or any part thereof on said mortgage indebtedness for the space of six months it shall be lawful for the said mortgagee to declare the whole amount of said mortgage indebtedness due, and whereas the said mortgagee has elected to declare the whole thereof due, and whereas there is at the date of these notice and according to the conditions of said mortgage due and unpaid the sum of one thousand nine hundred and eighty-five dollars and the further sum of forty dollars as attorney's fee as provided in and by the terms of said mortgage, and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises described as "and conveyed by said mortgage, viz: The Northeast quarter of section three, township one hundred and forty-six, range forty-three in Polk County and State of Minnesota with the appurtenances." Which said premises the said sale will be made by the sheriff of said Polk County at the front door of the Sheriff's office in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on the 20th day of March A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon or said day, at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay the said debt and interest, and taxes if any on said premises and fifty dollars attorneys fees stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure by advertisement allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

THE CHINESE AT HOME

MANY OF THEIR CUSTOMS ARE THE REVERSE OF OURS.

How They Compare With the Japanese. What Constitutes an Education—No Hereditary Aristocracy in China—The People Vary In Different Sections.

The samples we got of China in our country give us very inadequate ideas of the people. In the first place to contemplate a civilization entirely unlike our own, but in itself much more complete than ours. In the presence of the Chinese, all Europeans and Americans are parvenus. These people learned coal before the Christian era. They invented printing 1,000 years before Gutenberg and Faust flourished, and they knew the use of gunpowder when our forefathers were using bows and arrows. Almost things which appear on the surface they are our antipodes. They mount a horse from the right side instead of the left, read from left to right, say west south instead of southwest, their mariner's needle points to the south, the men wear petticoats and the women trousers, they shave the fronts of their heads and not their faces, shake their own hands instead of each others as a greeting, write their family names first and their given names afterward, have their marginal notes at the top of their books, place a distinguished guest on the left and are grateful not to uncover in his presence, wear white for mourning, the men sew and the women work in the fields, and so on to the end of the chapter.

We shall find in China the origin of much that we have seen in Japan. The position of woman in the family and society is about the same, except that the Japanese women do not cramp their feet, and therefore can go about more freely. The domestic architecture is similar, so far as external construction goes, but the Chinese houses have no mats, and the people do not squat on the floor. Both wear loose, flowing robes, which the Chinese imitou, but the Japanese do not. In the conversation of the people the Chinese indulge in honorifics as much as the Japanese. It is the correct thing to ask your friend to condescend to come from his elegant house to your miserable hovel, or to allow his distinguished cup of tea to descend to your unworthy self. The Chinese classics are also the classics in Japan, and the Chinese ideographs are used by Japanese writers. Education is mainly etiquette. The Chinese have 3,000 rules of behavior, which the educated man must know. If a man have bad manners, they say he is not educated.

The Chinese sages, like Confucius, Mencius and others whose works are classics, enunciated a high grade of ethics. Confucius stated the golden rule, though negatively, thus: "If there is anything I do not want done to me, I will not do it unto another." His ethical teachings take rank with those of the Greek and Roman moralists and of the Hebrew prophets, but are without reference to a Supreme Being who requires us to keep his commandments. The family customs are similar to the Japanese. Society is patriarchal. The family, not the individual, is considered. Marriages are arranged as in Japan to perpetuate the family, and go between are employed to settle the terms. There is only one wife, but concubines are taken into the house at will. The wife finds life becomes a mother-in-law as she gets her own innings and makes it warm for her daughter-in-law.

The Chinese have as many gonuflexions as the Japanese and numerous grades of obeisances to be employed according to circumstances. These prostrations, each with three knockings of the head against the floor, are supposed to be about the extreme exhibition of respect. The people vary a good deal in the different sections. The south of China is mountainous, and the people there are smaller, more volatile and brighter than in the north, where the crowded dwellers on the plains and paddy fields are heavier, less excitable, not so quick to see or act. There is no hereditary aristocracy in China. All the people are bound to obey the will of the emperor and have no rights he is bound to respect. There is no caste, as in India. The people are classified as natives and aliens, the latter being subdued people in the provinces; coquerors and conquered, with special reference to the prohibition of marriages between the Mantcho and Chinese, and freemen and slaves. There are no laws against slavery. Every native is allowed to purchase slaves and retain their children in servitude, but the number of slaves is small, and their condition is comparatively easy. Probably there are no better mannered people in the world than the educated Chinese. They are also very competent business men, and as such enjoy an excellent reputation.—Cor. Boston Herald.

Marriage Proposal Reform.

A suggestion is made for a legal reform which, while retaining breach of promise actions, would deprive them of all their ornamental triminings in the shape of love letters and the other usual incidents of courtship. It is proposed that no promise of marriage should be held valid unless it is made in writing upon properly stamped paper. Young ladies might affix a sixpenny stamp to the letter in which the swain declares his affections and ask him to be so good as to cancel it with his autograph.—London Tit-Bits.

She Was Invited.

"Did my one say anything to me?" asked Mamie as she saw the family at luncheon.

"No, my child, but will you have some salad?"

"I don't know," replied the child. "Mama said I must not eat 'less I 'vited."—Newport Daily News.

HE LEADS THE NEW YORK BAR.

James C. Carter Takes an Active Interest in Municipal Reform.

Although James Coolidge Carter, who presided over the recent national conference on the subject of good city government at Philadelphia, has long been regarded as the leader of the New York bar, his national fame is of recent growth. This is probably due to Mr. Carter's retiring disposition, and to the fact that he is a counselor rather than an advocate and has not figured publicly in sensational trials. In the profession, however, his abilities are known and respected, and so sound and accurate are his opinions that in all great cases of recent years they have been sought by one side or the other. In some respects Mr. Carter stands where Charles O'Conor stood when in his prime, and it is said that O'Conor was the first to discover Mr. Carter's ability.

JAMES C. CARTER.

Mr. Carter has long been engaged in the study of municipal governments. In 1875 Governor Tilden appointed him a member of the commission to devise a form of municipal government for the cities of the state, and he has ever maintained an active interest in the subject of municipal reform. He has never participated in politics, but accepted from President Harrison the position of American counsel in the Behring sea arbitration. His arguments in Paris attracted worldwide attention and reflected great credit on himself and his country.

James Coolidge Carter was born in Lancaster, Mass., Oct. 14, 1827. In 1850 he was graduated from Harvard university and from the law school three years later. He began the practice of his profession in New York city and soon achieved a leading position at the bar. Mr. Carter is a bachelor, and although cordial with his intimate friends he cares little for the social gayeties which figure so prominently in New York life. It is said that the vacant seat on the supreme court bench was declined by Mr. Carter before it was offered to Wheeler H. Peckham.

PRETTY LIPS IN A PUCKER.

Society Girls of San Francisco Have a Fad For Whistling.

In apparent defiance of the ancient adage about whistling girls and crowing hens, the young society women of San Francisco have taken up a novel fad and are studying the art of whistling under the tuteulage of competent professors. Though are said to be several classes in the city, one of which comprises 35 members. The whistling course is similar to vocal instruction or that taken for the flute. The class stands during the lesson, and the girls pucker their pretty lips in unison at the command of the teacher. The position is said to impress workers humorously, but they soon become interested and whistle in all seriousness.

Miss Helene Berger, a handsome young woman who is quite a favorite in San Francisco society, is said to be the most expert amateur whistler. Speaking of the accomplishment, she said: "I have studied whistling as I did singing. I suffered with bronchial trouble and was recommended to try whistling to strengthen the muscles of my throat. I thought it a foolish amusement, but tried it, and in a short time found I was greatly benefited.

"Physicians are recommending it now for throat trouble, and it has proved very effective in many cases. The way the girls are taking up whistling is very amusing, and it is sure to become a craze before long. The society set got the idea of just taking a few lessons, learning a few showy pieces, boarding school fashion, and seem to think they will then know all about it. They do not realize that whistling is an art and should be studied as such, and that it requires as much time as any other branch of musical education. It is not simply by any means, and constant practice is needed. One cannot practice long at a time, for the upper lip does the vibrating, and it is a muscular strain.

"They say a person always betrays his temperament in his whistling, but I never gave much attention to that idea. I know whistling does make one feel light hearted, and I believe doctors are recommending it for dyspepics. Strange, isn't it, but dn you know I never feel the least self conscious or nervous when whistling? It completely absorbs me."

USE OF A FLYING MACHINE.

What May Be Gained by the Perfection of the Invention.

What important purpose can flight in air serve? Maxim, Langley and all who have studied the subject thoroughly agree that the speed of aeriation will greatly exceed that of any terrestrial locomotion.

From this follows an entire economic change in the direction of rendering inhuman tracts or comparatively worthless territory at distances of 20 to 40 miles from cities much more available.

There would also result the relegating of city property in large measure to business and storage purposes.

This would to a large extent accomplish what Henry George sighs for, but would do it by means which do not involve any wrong to the land owner by the wage earner.

With flying navies capable of carrying unseen at night large quantities of explosives to the center of a city war would become so destructive that it would be soon supplanted by arbitration as a matter of common sense and self preservation.

Arbitration once established, an international police system controlling nations as we do individuals, and enforcing the decrees of boards of arbitration, would be enormously assisted by this power of rapid and if necessary destructive patrolling.

Immense areas of country, now well nigh impenetrable, would be opened to usefulness. Large sources of wealth would thus be added to the civilized world and would reanlt in the amelioration of the condition of the savages of such regions as central Africa.

We should have to give up selfish legislation and restriction upon the commerce of other nations, and be obliged perforce to "stand on a broader heritage than that of a nation or of zone."—Samuel Cabot in Boston Traveller.

The Final Splurge.

Arthur Quiller-Couch's story called "The Pauper" contains the description of a poor old couple who give the last little entertainment to their friends before going into the workhouse. It seems to be the usual thing for Cornish folks, whose hospitality even under the most disadvantageous circumstances is proverbial. They like to make a splash before going under. "Miss Brown, you did it better'n anybody I've heard tell of," say these gossips. "When she fell into redooced circumstances, and when the eight day clock, that was the only thing o' value she had left, Brown o' Tregarrick made it, with a very nice one brass dial, whereon he carved a full rigged ship in relief, and he an' she made an went down stern foremost when the hour struck. 'Twas worth walking a mile to see. Brown's grandson bought it off Miss Scantlebury for 2 guineas, he being proud of his grandfather's skill, an the old lady drove into Tregarrick workus behind a pair of grays wi' the proceeds. Over and above the carriage hire she'd enough left to adorn the horses wi' white favors an give the rider a crown, large as my lord. Aye, an at the workus door she bade me fare-fellow, said she: 'All my life I've longed to ride in a bridal chariot, an though my only hour died on Monday when I was scarce 22 I've done it at last,' said she, 'an now heaven an mirth can't undo it!'"

The Earth's Journey.

The earth does not travel at the same rate all through its journey. Its orbit being elliptical, it is at some time approach nearer to the sun than at others and will take less time in moving through one part of its path than through another. In winter the earth is nearer the sun than in summer and moves through apogee more rapidly. On Jan. 1 the earth is about 3,000,000 miles nearer the sun than it is on July 1, and as the velocity of a planet increases with it nearness to the sun the earth passes over one-half of its orbit in less time than over the other half. Between the vernal equinox, which passes on March 21 and the autumnal equinox, which falls on Sept. 23, the earth in 186 days in accomplishing that half of her journey round the sun, while the other half occupies only 179 days. It has been said that, owing to the friction caused by the tides and other reasons, the earth is moving more slowly than it used to do, and that the days are consequently lengthening, but as this is only to the extent of half a second in a century it will be n long time before there will be any apparent difference.—Brooklyn Eagle.

National Handwriting.

If individual character influences individual handwriting, national character should influence national handwriting. Authorities tell us that such is the case; that the art of the Italian, the pride of the Spaniard, the veracity of the Frenchman, are all displayed in their penmanship.

It may be so, but as a rule it would take an expert or an enthusiast to tell the difference between the writing of the shrewd Scotchman, the staid Englishman and the lively Irishman. German handwriting, however, is truly indicative of the national character; it requires nearly as much patience to read it as to write it.

On the other hand, one looks in vain to discover the temper of a Jew from the dots and points of Hebrew, or to decipher the character of Mr. Pitman from the phonetic alphabet.—Chambers' Journal.

Treatment of Cholera.

Dr. Norman Kerr, the London physician, was asked, "What treatment would you say in a wise one in case of cholraic seizure?" He answered: "If I had cholera, after a first preliminary treatment for the diarrhea, I would rather have no physic. I would take lots of hot and cold water—all I thirtnn, in fact. And I would keep myself in surroundings of warmth. I would rather have that treatment than all the medicines in the world."—London Exchange.

THOUGHTLESS MINISTERS.

The Cheeky Drummer Catches Two Divines on a Simple Proposition.

Absorbed at nothing, a commercial traveler in the south was propounded a question to a couple of clergymen, whom he encountered on a railroad train, which illustrates how easily a man may be tripped on a simple little catch question. The drummer entered into a conversation with the ministers and entertained them amusingly with his brilliant conversation, touching men and affairs. Gradually the topics changed, until at last the talk was upon the marriage and his visit to the Holy Land.

"Speaking of the Holy Land," said the graceless commercial man, "I was quite interested to read in a New York paper recently that a party of explorers in Palestine had discovered a large heap of bones, which, from their size and quantity, are supposed to be of the children which Herod ordered killed. They were found in a cave, which had been closed for centuries, which accounts for their preservation."

"Indeed!" replied one of the clergymen, much interested. "I had not heard of it. It is certainly a surprising discovery."

"Yes," continued the drummer, "and, oddly enough, while nearly half of the bones were bleached white, the rest were as black as the ace of spades."

"Remarkable," ejacnlated the clergyman who had already spoken, while the other looked at the drummer suspiciously.

"What is your theory?" he continued. "Do you think it possible that the bleached bones could be of males and the black of females?"

"Possibly," replied the more communicative clergyman, "I am not an anatomist, however, and can't say what effects long exposure has on the bone of the sexes."

"And you," persisted the drummer in the other. "What is your opinion? Do you think it possible that the white bones belong to male infants and the black to female, or vice versa? That is the problem that now excites the discoverers."

"Really," replied the other, "I don't know but, possibly, as you first put it, the white bones may be of the male children, and the black of the female."

Then it was that the clergymen reached their destination and left the train. Just as it was about moving off the drummer, who had been chuckling to himself the meanwhile, thrust out the hand of one a card, upon which was written the words:

"Excuse me if I suggest that you read your Bibles hereafter with greater care. Had you done so in the past, you would have known that boy babies only were ordered slain by Herod."—New York Herald.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Tuesday, Jan. 30.

After another long colloquy between Senators Gray and Chandler the Republicans consented that general debate on the federal elections bill should close next Tuesday at 4 p. m. After that hour amendments may be presented and passed upon, but the final vote must be taken before adjournment of the senate on that day.

The bond question came up again during the day, and, after a long debate, went over by unanimous consent. The significant feature of the discussion was the firm stand taken by Senator Sherman in favor of the authority of Secretary Carlisle to issue the bonds.

The debate on the income tax amendment waxed warm in the house. Several leading Democrats opposed it in speeches, but it remained for Bourke Cockran, the great Tammany orator, to eclipse with his eloquence against the measure, all the speeches he has ever made in congress. Mr. Dyrna of Nebraska closed the debate for the day in defense of the income tax, and he, too, made an eloquent speech.

Wednesday, Jan. 31.

By a vote of 173 to 90 the house adopted the internal revenue bill, with its income tax, on an amendment to the tariff bill. It extends the income tax to cities and inheritances, and refuses to increase the blended whisky period from three to eight years.

The entire time of the senate was consumed in six discussion of the resolution of Senator Stewart of Nevada, declaring that the secretary of the treasury has no right to issue bonds. Senator Allen opened the discussion in support of the resolution. Senator Hoar surprised his Republican colleagues by sustaining the position taken by Senators Allen and Stewart.

Thursday, Feb. 1.

The house spent the day on the Wilson bill, finally passing it by a vote of 204 to 140.

The senate discussed Carlisle's bond issue and the federal election laws repeal bill.

Friday, Feb. 2.

The debate on the Hawaiian matter occupied the house during the day under a special order which will bring it to a vote next Monday at 4 o'clock.

In the senate, after an hour's debate early in the session the resolution of Senator Peffer was adopted calling upon the secretary of the treasury for the names of the persons and corporations bidding for United States bonds and the amount of bids and the rate of interest. The original resolution of Senator Stewart denying the authority of the secretary of the treasury to issue bonds at this time was then taken up and consumed the remainder of the day.

Saturday, Feb. 3.

The senate was not in session.

In the house the Hawaiian resolutions were debated to the exclusion of other business.

Monday, Feb. 5.

The Hawaiian debate again occupied the attention of the house during the day, a night session being held to permit speeches by those members who desired to talk, but who otherwise would not have had an opportunity to do so on account of the limited time allowed.

The federal elections repeal bill occupied the entire session of the senate.

POINTERS ON THE GRIP.

A Description of the Disease by One Who Has Suffered.

Ever had the grip? I will give you a few pointers. You will imagine you have a bad cold, and you can wear it out, but you need not try it. The grip has fastened his fangs onto you and will not let go. You have got to give up, go home and go to bed. In a short time you will realize Beecher's dream of hell. You will think your head hoo keen revived and an old hostess with the empty comb left in its place. Your mouth will taste like a pail of ourer-kraut. You have the grip.

The doctor comes, looks you over, puts his thermometer in your mouth, finds your temperature 104 degrees in the shade, your pulse going at the rate of two miles and three laps to the second. He orders you to stay in bed and gives you medicine that is so strong and sour that simply setting the bottle on the dresser will upset the clock. He will tell your wife that she may give you warm drinks and try to get you to sweat and take his leave. Now, all wives are family doctors by right of matrimony and dream of being away to the far north in search of the north pole or out in the center of some bountiful sheet of water, the Lake Superior or the lawn tennis skating rink, helpless and alone, with the ice breaking all around you and you slowly sinking. You finally awake, burned, blistered and baked. The doctor calls, finds your temperature better, convalescing; orders beef tea, chicken soup, gruel and toast as a diet. You take the big rocking chair exhausted, tired, discouraged and ugly; you feel like kicking your wife, kicking the dog and breaking up the furniture, but you won't do anything but sit there day after day, helpless and tired.—Winona (Minn.) Herald.

Making Billiard Cushions.

The making of billiard cushions is an important industry, but is carried on by two or three firms only, and with all the story of the difficulty which has been overcome in preventing the ball from sinking into the rubber and thus destroying the angle desired to be taken is an interesting one it has been told before and will not be repeated here. In the early days of the industry the manufacturer employed valve rubber and obtained a much better price for it when it was worked up into the cushion.

Then the cushion maker set his wits to work to get the valve rubber cheaply, but in those days it was strongly held, and none was allowed to pass to that industry unless it paid the enhanced royalty. Finally the combination was broken by a firm in Pittsburg ordering the valve rubber ostensibly for another use, but in reality for the New York for the intended purpose. So skillfully and patiently was this done that a great quantity was accumulated, and the valve rubber man threw up the sponge. Now billiard cushions are made of molded rubber, an evolution which came along later.—Hardware.

La Fontaine's Opinion of Himself.

"La Fontaine," said one of the most brilliant critics and wits of the famous fable writer's time, "is such a fool that he does not know he has more sense than Æsop or Phædrus."

In truth, he was a severe critic of his own work. He attended the first presentation of his "Astrea," and sat near some ladies who did not know him. At some of the important passages he exclaimed: "That is wretched! That is absurd!"

When they protested that it was good, and that it was by the great La Fontaine, he replied—

"That makes no difference. The piece is bad. I know that La Fontaine is a very good sort of fellow. He's a stupid fellow. He's myself."

Then he went out, entered a cafe and went to sleep in a corner. Some of his friends found him there and inquired why he wasn't listening to "Astrea."

"Why," said the author, rousing himself and stifling a yawn, "I just came away. The first part displeased me greatly. No one agrees with what I said about it, but I didn't care to hear more. I admire the patience of the Parisians."—Youth's Companion.

Gambling.

A considerable proportion of failure in business and 90 per cent of the defalcations and theft and ruin of youth among people who are employed in places of trust are due directly to gambling. I have seen in my years of employment so much misery from the head of the family neglecting its support, and squandering his earnings in the lottery or the policy shop, and promising youngmen led astray in a small way, and finally becoming fugitives or landing in the criminal dock, that I have come to believe that the community which licenses and tolerates public gambling cannot have prosperity in business, religion in its churches or morality among its people.—Chauncey Depew.

Coyote and Eagle.

W. C. Plummer of Prineville once witnessed an exciting fight between an eagle and a coyote. The eagle had caught a rabbit, and the coyote undertook to take it away from him. The eagle defended his prey manfully for some time, but the coyote was too much for him and finally got away with the rabbit, but not until after the eagle had clawed sawful handfuls of hair out of his back and left him somewhat disfigured.—Portland Oregonian.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, which seems so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Now force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the force which makes them work. The brain is the great generator, the nerves direct the force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut, the long nerve descending from the brain to the stomach is supplying the second plexus, which is the pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nervous system, as it supplies the lungs, heart, liver and bowels, etc., with the nerve

One day last week, while hauling ice he pulled a load weighing 6040 pounds out of ice across some bare plank, just to see what the little rats could do. Jim says he will rest on his laurels now until somebody beats his record and then try 'en again.

The funeral procession that followed the remains of the late A. M. Stewart to his last resting place in the Oakdale cemetery was one of the largest ever witnessed in our city. There were 44 teams in the procession. A large number of the members of Crookston Lodge No. 141 A. F. and A. M. acted as the escort of honor. Mr. Stewart was one of Crookston's most popular young business men and he will long be missed.

Frank Montagne had the misfortune to fall and dislocate his shoulder Monday evening.

Henry Barkhardt Jr., has gone to Winnipeg to take charge of his father's butcher shop for a while.

Dr. Chaplu and H. C. Misner came down from Euclid on Sunday for the purpose of attending the funeral of A. M. Stewart, but returned when they learned of its postponement.

Lewis Ellington and Alex. McKinnon went to St. Paul to look up Duluth & Winnipeg matters. They are much pleased with what they have learned, but are not giving out much information for publication.

Mrs. Newland returned on Wednesday morning from her visit to Wisconsin, and Alvah was reported to be doing as well as could be expected at this stage of the game. As yet his illness appears to be of the mild type.

The Thirteen Towns intimates that "maybe editor A. W. Foss has gone to Canada to get married." While the Towns does not say this for a fact, we propose to give the prisoner the benefit of the doubt and hope that such a dire calamity will not overtake the young man thus early in his promising career.

Frank Farnham, who has been laid up for six weeks with typhoid fever, and who was taken from the St. Louis hotel at the time of the fire and placed in the hospital, has so far recovered as to be able to leave for his home at Fennimore, Wis., Wednesday. Frank looks like a skeleton of his former self, having lost 60 pounds of flesh during his sickness.

Wm. Goodsell, of Euclid, was in on Tuesday. Talking with a JOURNAL man of A. M. Stewart Mr. G. said: "I knew Arthur when he first came to Euclid and went into business there, and have known and done business with him ever since. He was one of the most upright men I ever did business with and his death comes as a personal bereavement to me and all of my neighbors who knew him. Wells Mauer was also another honest and upright young man, whose loss will be keenly felt by our little community. Seldom has our county been called upon to lose two such noble, honest young business men, and both so supremely strong and healthy. No words of mine can fitly express my feelings, and this feeling seems universal.

The Times, in its issue of Tuesday, takes occasion to jump upon the ice men indiscriminately, and advises somebody to go to the expense of putting up another ice-house and filling it with ice taken from the pond near the N. P. depot. The Times, (without investigating as to the truth of its assertion) says that all of the ice cut for the use of the city for the coming summer is taken out below the dam. The JOURNAL, being interested in protecting the interests of the city, has taken pains to investigate the matter and finds that the supply put up by Peter Becker, for the city trade, is all taken out of the pond above the dam, that the ice is taking out some from below the dam to fill the brewery ice house, and that ice is used by them solely for cooling purposes and for no other purpose. The absurdity of the Times article may be shown when Mr. Becker takes ice from the pond—just what the Times advises somebody else to do. Moreover in order to be perfectly sure about it, Mr. Becker has taken steps to have a sample of his ice sent away for analysis, and should it prove injurious, will procure a supply elsewhere. There is no doubt but the ice in the pond is as pure as the Red river ice above Grand Forks, and the chief consideration is that of cost.

"Prof. Vaughn, of Ann Arbor, to whom a sample of Red river ice and water was sent some time ago for analysis, states in a letter to the JOURNAL that there are no typhoid germs contained in the ice. The dealers in the city will be allowed to go ahead putting up Red river ice as soon as they please."

Be this as it may, Mr. Becker assures the JOURNAL that he intends to supply all customers with pure ice if it can be got.

Mrs. E. E. Bangs kindly sends us a copy of the San Francisco Examiner, which contains ninety or a million pages filled with the good points of California as a residence. We have with interest perused eighty or ninety pages of it, and while as yet we have seen no reason why we should emigrate, yet by the time we have read it all through we may do so, and if we do we will faithfully mention it. While it is probably true that California is a pretty good place to live at (if one has lots of money) we see no reason why us poor folks should go back on the Red River valley of the North as yet.

Ed Rufton who has been laid up with fever since Christmas, is able to be out again.

Mrs. Ingebret Skiple, who died on January 20th, was buried last Friday. She was 36 years of age, and had been married since last April. She was a daughter of Rev. B. Anderson.

In his lecture to-night, Rev. Squier will talk of Egypt—old and new—the land of ancient civilizations and modern wonders. No other country possesses history like Egypt, and no one has ever been able to explain the wonders of that wonderful country—the pyramids. The lecture last Thursday was well attended, and the interest increases as the course progresses.

F. T. Hazeltine: "The Crookston Nurseries will be right in deck for the coming spring trade and I contemplate a good one considering the times. I am somewhat surprised to see that farmers did not have pork enough this year to supply their home market. I think they missed it."

Rev. L. W. Squier, who is vice-president of the Detroit Lake Assembly attended a meeting of that organization at Fargo last Tuesday. He was unanimously elected superintendent of the assembly, which will meet this year at Detroit on the 15th of July and continue till the 30th.

A. M. STEWART DEAD

The Angel of Death Again in our Midst

Again it becomes the sad duty of the JOURNAL to chronicle the death of one of Crookston's prominent young business men—Arthur M. Stewart, who died at his residence on Houston Avenue of typhoid fever at 2:30 p. m. on Friday last. Mr. Stewart was the oldest son of Uriah and Helen M. Stewart, of Berlin, Wis., where on Aug. 30th 1858 Arthur was born. He was given the advantages of the best schools available and being of a quiet, studious nature made the most of these advantages, developing into an honest, upright, good business man. In April 1879, he came to Crookston, where his uncle, M. R. Brown had already located in business and went to Euclid where he established a lumberyard, at which place he was the first postmaster. Later on he came to Crookston where he engaged in the lumber business with Joseph Laurence, under the firm name of Stewart & Laurence which business was continued until after the Walker saw-mill was built. On January 4th, 1883 he was married at Fairview, Minn., to Miss Helen Brown, of that place, who had been a resident of this city for a while previous to the marriage. Jan. 12th, 1885 the firm purchased the hardware store of E. M. Walsh and soon began to branch out, putting in a store and lumberyard at Inkster, N. D., and a hardware store at Stephen, Minn. This venture did not prove a financial success and in '87 they concentrated their business in this city adding a lumberyard to their hardware business, opening up on the Catholic church block and moving the old Lumberman building up to a point on Main street opposite M. R. Brown's new sale stable. This put them splendidly located until Mr. Laurence went to Tacoma, when about January 1st, 1889, he was succeeded by Wm. C. Spotswood and the hardware business was continued under the firm name of Stewart & Spotswood until April 1st, '91, when the stock was moved to West Superior, Wis., where for a time the firm did very well but eventually closed out the business. In May 1892, Mr. Stewart returned to Crookston, secured a site near the Northern Pacific depot where he opened a lumberyard and was doing a thriving business when called away by death. Ever of a genial nature he had made hosts of friends which was attested by the attendance at his funeral which was so great that many could not get into the church building. He was a member of Crookston Lodge No. 141 A. F. & A. M., being for a time its valued secretary, and the lodge attended the funeral in a body, and conducted the very solemn and imposing ceremonies at the grave. Mr. Stewart leaves a wife and five children, 3 boys and 2 girls, an aged mother and father and a brother, to mourn his early death. His mother was a sister of M. R. Brown, of this city and was partly through his instrumentality that Mr. Stewart became to this county, and to whom he was almost as an own son and who was as interested in and proud of his career as he could have been had that of an own son, so much so indeed that he was frequently spoken of as a son of Mr. Brown's. Mr. Stewart was a member of the Baptist church of this city, converted three years ago under the ministry of the Rev. F. C. Whitney, who came from Austin to preach the funeral sermon and whose discourse paid a deservedly high tribute to the worth of the departed friend and brother, to which tribute words of ours could not add. His was a life that could well be taken as a pattern for the youth of the present day. Born of poor parents he yet managed by industry and determination to secure a perfect education to fit him for an honorable business career. A full life and an unimpaired as any youth, he never indulged in any of those excesses that ruin the lives of so many and destroy their constitution; his ambitions as any one could be, yet he never yielded to the temptation that is so frequently leads young men to commit a dishonest act; ever of a genial, social nature, yet he never allowed that influence to drag him down through the drink habit, but he ever led a quiet, sober, industrious, honest life and thus at the age of early manhood we find him with a sound and vigorous constitution, fully equipped to manfully meet all the trials of life—a noble upright man. While he has not left riches to his children he has left an heritage far richer—the example of a noble well-spent life, an example that will be a blessing to all who will copy from it.

Miss Emma Veronness informs the JOURNAL that her sister in Grand Forks who has been so ill with fever is convalescent and doing nicely.

The fire bell sounded at 9:40 on Wednesday evening giving warning of a fire at the warehouse of Stone & Columbus. It seems that Mr. Stone was painting a bigger in the office and had a lamp sitting on the buggy box when Mr. Swenson came in and somehow managed to get against the buggy box, upsetting the lamp which was broken in the fall and the oil was ignited. Instantly the office was in a blaze and Stone stepped quickly to the safe, closed and locked the door, then taking the books from the desk, lit out. By this time Mr. Columbus had procured a pail of water and by the aid of some old clothes the flames were subdued before the department arrived and with little appreciable damage. But it was a close call, as the office was full of flames and getting extremely hot. Mr. Swenson lit out and may be running yet for all anybody knows for "he never came back."

Fred's Sample Case.

Somehow Fred Rusch is not saying anything about the sample case he received by express one day last week, but he got one just the same. When he opened it he found various and sundry articles such as toothcombs, nest-eggs, pieces of plug tobacco, ginger cakes, bottles of hair-oil, essences and a thousand and one things, many of which he couldn't find a use for, but looked like he had seen them before on his own shelves in his own store sometime in the not very dim past—and he had, for it now transpires that a couple of tramps had been in the habit of loafing about the store at times and when Fred was busy with something or other they would slyly hook a few things until they had secured a stock large enough to fill an ordinary sized dry goods box. After they had secured their prize they were seized with compunctions of conscience and after cogitating on how they should return the plunder they decided to return it by express—which they did, and Fred now rejoices at the return of his property—though he had to pay the freight. Fred is now lying low trying to find out whence came the goods.

Why Hood's Wins.

President Lincoln said, "You cannot fool the people a second time." They are too quick to recognize real merit or mark of it, and cling only to those things which they find to be what is claimed for them.

It is especially gratifying that the sale of Hood's Sarsaparilla increases most rapidly in those sections where it is best known.

The inference is plain. Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven that it possesses genuine merit. It maintains a high standard, which others cannot ever approach. It is the people's favorite blood purifier and building up medicine, and is more popular this year than ever before. All this is because Hood's Cures.

Cheap Rates to California.

The Northern Pacific railroad company has put into effect a series of low round trip rates to California points. Tickets are good until April 30th, 1894, and are good for stop-over under certain conditions.

These rates will enable those desiring to do so, to spend the winter in southern California, or to visit the Mid-winter Fair to be held at San Francisco. This latter event will undoubtedly be second only to the World's Fair just closed, and will repay a visit as it will exhibit the resources and capabilities of California.

COURT CASES.

Several Court Cases Argued Before Judge Ives in Chambers this Week.

About Sixteen Cases in all to be Disposed of by the Court.

The Merchants Bank vs Robert Stanton—H. B. Haney vs Joe Jarvis.

Monday morning at 10 o'clock court convened at chambers to finish up the cases yet on the calendar.

The first case called was that of Scandia Bank of Minneapolis vs Hovland, Messelt & Co. It was agreed by the counsels, Montague & Buckler for plaintiff and A. A. Miller for defendant, that the case be tried at any time in the future before the court upon ten days notice from either party.

Waller Bros. vs Nels Olson was next called. Oen J. Vanle appeared for defendant. This was an appeal from justice court. Defendant moved to dismiss the appeal. Motion granted. No appearance on the part of plaintiff.

The case of M. E. Kirsch vs D. Berthiaume and the Great Northern Railroad Co., garnishee, was next called. Plaintiff appeals from the judgment of the justice court setting aside the garnishee. Plaintiff garnished some money in the hands of the railroad Co. The garnishee made a disclosure that it owed the the defendant about $10. That the defendant claimed as exempt and the court below held he was entitled to the exemption. The case is being considered by the court. Wm. Watts attorney for plaintiff and A. C. Wiltmass attorney for garnishee.

A motion in the case of Fontaine & Anglim vs City of Crookston was made for a new trial. The motion was granted unless the plaintiffs remitted all of the judgment except $350 and interest thereon from March 19th, 1888. The case was tried in January and a verdict rendered for plaintiff for $278.

On Tuesday the attention of the court was occupied in the case of Horace B. Haney vs Joseph Jarvis. Messrs Montague & Buckler for plaintiff and Wm. Watts for defendant. The universal difficulty as to a contract is the trouble. This time it is in regard to the sale by plaintiff to defendant of the S. E. ¼ of section 21, Town of Fisher. The case was finished late in the afternoon, and briefs are to submitted to the court later on.

Wednesday morning the case of Merchants National Bank of Crookston vs Robert Stanton et al, was taken up. A. C. Wiltmason counsel for plaintiff and C. A. Miller counsel for appellants. The case has been to the supreme court and was sent back to this court to decide the question of ownership of the oatmeal mill and machinery therein; to determine whether it is real or personal property. The case is taken under advisement.

This afternoon the case of W. E. McKenzie vs Board of County Commissioners will be taken up and the question of law therein argued.

A Morning Blaze.

Capt. Gale of the Salvation Army, who lives near the N. P. depot, gained considerable information yesterday morning about the properties and powers of gasoline, though the experience was quite expensive.

The fire in his coal stove was not burning very good and he thought a little application of gasoline would brace it up. The gasoline was applied, the can exploded the stove was blown open and the housekeeper fire. Mr. Gale was slightly scorched. An alarm was turned in, and the department responded briefly, but so quietly had the flames spread that the inside of the house with its contents, was practically ruined before the blaze was extinguished.

The building is owned by A. C. Wheelock, of Lowell, Mass., and there is an insurance of $500 on it, in the Guardian Assurance Company.

Fair Association.

Last Saturday the stockholders of the agricultural society met in the city hall and chose the following board of directors for the ensuing year: Hugh Thompson, S. L. Collins, E. M. Lundeister, J. E. O'Brien, Archie McKinnon, E. M. Walsh, Frank Bivins, J. R. McKinnon, D. Morrow, J. B. Merrill, Elias Steenerson, J. E. Sullivan, A. Sture, J. Warnlinger and J. O. Berglund.

The directors then elected the following officers: President Hugh Thompson; first vice-president, Frank Bivins; second vice-president, E. M. Lundeister; treasurer, E. M. Walsh; secretary, J. V. E. Wyatt.

Public Examination.

Examinations of teachers will be held at Red Lake Falls and Mcintosh on March 6th and 7th; East Grand Forks March 8th and 10th; Crookston March 13th and 14th.

Uniform second grade certificates and uniform third grades issued later than August 1, 1893, will be endorsed on application.

Holders of limited or special certificates to be re-examined.

Uses No River Water.

Having been told that the cows in E. D. Childs' dairy have been supplied with river water our reporter meeting that gentleman on Monday popped the question to him fair and square. "Well," said he, "you may say to our customers that we did give our cows river water—one time last summer, but that we have not given them river water this winter. We have a sufficient supply of artesian water that is pumped into a big tank and these goes to each animal and we have no occasion to use any other kind except when something gets out of rig, (as was the case one last summer to which I referred) and should a like occurrence happen again and we are obliged to go elsewhere I shall get a supply from the artesian well on section 18, so our customers need have no fear on the score of our furnishing them pure milk."

Good Milk and Butter Important.

Earlier in the winter, at the time the typhoid fever first made its appearance in this city, it will be remembered that there were those who attributed the cause to the use of river water—but the fact that there were two or three cases of it where the parties used only artesian water seemed to counteract that theory. These cases, however, are made perfectly plain, and can be just as clearly traced to the same cause since the doctors who have analyzed the river water have shown that the typhoid germs may exist in milk and butter from cows that have drank of river water. This necessity of the use of great care in the matter of milk and butter that is not perfectly healthy for people can engage their supplies from those who have artesian wells upon their farms and use no other water for their stock. The doctors attach as much importance to the matter as they do to the diet use of the water.

Salvation Army Meetings.

The salvation army meetings continue to be well attended and are of great interest. We note a disposition on the part of a few unbinkling ones to jeer at these people and make fun of their out-door meetings but the soldiers keep right on attending their own business and seem only anxious to do good to those who make fun of them. Their mission is all right and persons can be as truly converted through this instrumentality as in any other way, if they are led to abandon the evil of their ways and live humble, devoted Christian lives. This change does not consist solely in attending meetings regularly every night, leaving about the streets following the flag, and exhorting and praying—but it must be of a character that will induce the person to abandon his evil habits, whatever they were drinking, cheating, stealing and all other sort of thing and living lives of sobriety, truth and honesty before God and their fellowmen. Professions are all very good so far as they go and are all right when backed by a blameless life—but here is where the test of practical Christianity comes in—to live an honest, upright Christian life, to love one's neighbor as one's self, to live to exemplify the golden rule in one's daily life. This kind of a life, as we understand it, is the end and object of the Salvation Army to inculcate, and that object is a grand and noble one. This little band of faithful workers is not depending upon their own strength, but upon the strength of One who when on this earth went about doing good and who taught His followers to do so also.

CITY COUNCIL.

Official Proceedings of the Meeting Held February 13th.

The Mayor Addresses the Council Regarding Ownership of Waterworks.

The Question to be Voted on at the Next Municipal Election.

Proceedings of a regular meeting of the City Council of the city of Crookston, held in the city hall on Tuesday evening, February 13th, 1894:

Meeting called to order by President Cromb.

Roll call.

Aldermen present, Anderson, Childs, Jennings, Gervais, Morrisey, Simmons, Watts and Cromb.

Aldermen absent, Marlette, Norrie and Walker.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and approved.

Alderman Childs reported that the fire department had been furnished with rubber coats for their use at fires. Report accepted.

The bills of the Great Northern Railway Co. were referred back to the city attorney for further consideration.

The city attorney presented reports upon the Joseph Netzer damage matter. Moved by Alderman Anderson, seconded by Alderman Watts, that the city attorney be authorized to appeal the case. Alderman Childs moved to amend, seconded by Alderman Gervais, unless Joseph Netzer and all parties interested agree to sign a release of all liabilities against the city for $250. Aldermen voting in the affirmative, Childs, Jennings, Gervais, Morrisey, Simmons, Watts. Aldermen voting in the negative, Anderson and Cromb. Amendment declared carried. The motion as amended was passed unanimously.

The city attorney presented a report upon the Fontaine & Anglim matter.

To The Honorable City Council of The City of Crookston:

Gentlemen:—In the suit of Fontaine & Anglim vs. the city, I have to report, that the case was tried at the adjourned term of the district court held in January 1894, before the court, with a jury. The jury rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant for $278, a stay of proceedings was granted for sixty days. On February 12th 1894, I made a motion on behalf of the city for a new trial on the statutory grounds. The motion was granted by the court unless the plaintiffs would remit all of the verdict except the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars with interest at 7 per cent from March 17th, 1893.

Respectfully submitted,

De Forrest Dueller,
City Attorney.

Moved by Alderman Watts, seconded by Alderman Morrisey, that the city attorney see what a settlement can be made for and to report at the next meeting. Carried.

The liquor bond of F. W. Markmun, with Carl Reldesel and F. Schaegel as sureties, was presented and approved and a license ordered made out upon the presentation of a receipt for the amount due thereby.

G. Thompson presented an application to sell liquor and same was ordered published.

A communication was received from John Miller relating to damages from the sewer and same was referred to the city attorney.

A communication was received from Hugh Thompson relating to the grading in Sampson's Addition, and same was referred to the committee already appointed to look into the matter.

A petition was presented from the druggists:

To the Honorable, The City Council of the True City of Crookston:

Gentlemen:—Your petitioners, the licensed druggists of the city of Crookston, respectfully request of your Honorable body, that you cause to be strictly enforced the ordinance of the City relative to the licensing of druggists, or if it shall found, upon investigation, that said ordinance is void, that you cause to be prepared and passed an ordinance upon this subject that will be enforcible.

Dated January 23rd, 1894.

Respectfully submitted;

Cahoon & Lytle,
Wm. Grigsby,
Sargent Bros,
John Helstab,
Thomas Young,
Geo. Young,
A. Bloom,

Joe McMahan,
W. E. Walker,
I. N. Simmons,
A. Lytle,

Moved by Alderman Morrisey, seconded by Alderman Gervais, that the city attorney be instructed to prosecute any person or persons violating the drug ordinance, when complaint is laid before him, which, in his opinion, will warrant a trial on the merits. Carried.

Mayor Stephens addressed the council on the matter of the water supply for the city, and recommended that a committee be appointed to look into the matter of securing a plant whereby purer water can be furnished to the users of the river water throughout the city. On motion the Mayor and Aldermen Childs and Gervais were appointed a committee to look into the matter, the committee to have power to expend any necessary amount in gathering the information needed.

Whereas, There is a strong sentiment among many citizens of Crookston that the rates that the city are now paying for water and lights is altogether too high in proportion to service received.

1. That the present location for the tie-take pipe for the water works is dangerous for the health of the city.

2. That it would be a matter of economy for the city to own its own hospital rather than to pay such large bills to the county hospital as we have been doing for the past two years, and

Whereas, These three propositions are to be the main matters of great importance to this community, and

Whereas, This Council would not feel justified in instituting any of these radical changes in the policy of the city, except upon a full and fair expression of a large majority of the electors of the city, that they desire them so to do; and

Whereas, We know of no manner in which such an expression could be more fully and candidly given than at the polls, now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the clerk of this city be, and is hereby authorized and directed to have prepared and distributed at the polls at the next municipal election ballots which shall read as follows,

1st. In favor of the city putting in its own water works and electric light system.

Against the city putting in its own water works and electric light system.

2d. We desire the "tie-take" pipe at the water works removed to a point east of the N. P. depot, even if it must be done at the expense of the city.

We are opposed to a change of the tie-take pipe if it must be done at the expense of the city.

3d. We desire the city to own its own hospital.

We are opposed to the city owning its own hospital.

Resolved, That said clerk is also hereby directed to prepare a suitable lot-box in each ward for the reception of said ballots, and that the judges of election be instructed to count and tabulate such vote on a blank to be furnished by the clerk of same to the city clerk with the other election returns, and that each judge of election be further instructed to notify the voters in the several wards that this vote has no binding force, but is taken for the purpose of securing an expression of opinion that may be a guide to the council in its future treatment of this question.

Aldermen voting in the affirmative, Anderson, Childs, Jennings, Jerome, Morrisey, Simmons, Watts, Cromb.

Aldermen voting in the negative, none.

Passed this 13th day of February, 1894.

John Cromb,
President of the Council.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

E. C. Carruth, Clerk.

Approved this 14th day of February, 1894.

A. D. Stephens, Mayor.

At a regular meeting of the City Council of the City of Crookston held the 13th day of February, 1894, Alderman Anderson offered the following resolution, which was seconded by Alderman I. U. Jennings:

Resolved that the sum of $10.00 be and the same hereby is appropriated to pay G. A. Ralph for a map of the Crookston, Minn., Land district and different portions of the St. Cloud Land district, and an order be issued for the same.

Upon the call of ayes and nays, the vote stood as follows:

Aldermen voting in the affirmative, Anderson, Childs, Jennings, Gervais, Morrisey, Simmons, Watts, Cromb.

Aldermen voting in the negative: none.

Upon this vote the resolution was declared carried by the President of the Council.

Passed this 13th day of February, 1894.

John Cromb,
President of the Council.

Approved this 14th day of February, 1894.

A. D. Stephens, Mayor.

Attest: E. C. Carruth, Clerk.

On motion council adjourned.

THE STEENERSON CASE.

The Railroad Commissioners Listen to the Arguments Over Freight Rates.

The Railroad Submits a Mass of Figures Regarding Construction, Etc.

The Case Finished and Given to the Commission for a Decision.

The hearing of the Steenerson freight rate case took place before the railroad commission at St. Paul last week. The railroad company submitted a volume of misleading figures, about cost of construction, operating expenses, interest on bonds, etc., and Mr. Steenerson made an able argument on behalf of the people. The case was finished and the commission will probably give a decision in three or four weeks. The following is taken from the St. Paul Globe:

The state railroad and ware house commission yesterday heard the case of Elias Steenerson, of Crookston for a reduction of rates on the Great Northern from Polk county points to St. Paul and Minneapolis. The complaint asks that the rate be reduced from 16 to 12½ cents per hundred. The petitioners submitted their testimony at a meeting held in November, and since that time the railroad company has been preparing its answer. The witnesses called yesterday were A. Guthrie, a railroad contractor and formerly division superintendent of the Great Northern; W. A. Scott, general superintendent of the Omaha; S. P. Folsom, who has been connected with the road some years, and Col. William Crooks, fax commissioner and right of way agent of the railroad. C. B. Yale, chief agent of the Great Northern, and W. H. Fisher, president of the Duluth & Winnipeg, were also called.

The testimony taken was almost all on the cost of equipment and maintenance of the road except Mr. Guthrie's. He gave very little information as to cost of construction, saying that he would need the plans in front of him in order to be able to testify.

Mr. Folsom gave some information in regard to the cost of terminals, saying that the forty acres on which the terminal facilities belonging to the Great Northern in this city are, cost in the neighborhood of $250,000. The land, being swamp, had to be filled in and this work is very expensive. In addition to the cost of filling, the company had incurred court expenses to the amount of $30,000.

Supt Scott, of the Omaha, informed the commission as to cost of equipment, and stated that the cost of ten miles, built last summer in Nebraska, including equipment, but without ballast, was about $15,000 per mile. He also stated that the cost of the ordinary passenger coach was $5,500; of a parlor car, $8,000, and a dining car $14,000. A freight locomotive, with Westinghouse air brake, was $11,000. Mr. Scott said that, as the cost for the past few years had increased, he estimated that of the Great Northern at about $30,000 per mile.

Col. Crooks stated that these figures were about right, and gave a great deal of valuable information concerning cost of construction, from laying of ties to final equipment. He said that the road as built in Minnesota, outside of the terminals in St. Paul and Minneapolis, might be reproduced at $25,000 per mile, but not any less. He and Halvor Steenerson, the attorney for the complainant, in the cross-examination got into a wordy warfare as to the correctness of their guesses and approximations. Mr. Crooks has prepared a table to show the cost of construction of different parts of the road on which he has done work, and the figures he gave certainly go to prove that railroads are not built for nothing.

Col. Crooks said in conclusion that in his opinion it would cost more to reproduce the piece of road under discussion than almost any other line of the same length in the Great Northern system.

WINTER ON THE FARM

"THE SWEETEST SLEEP IS JUST BEFORE YOU'RE CALLED."

Every Farmer's Boy Knows Just How True That Is—Memories of Foddering Stock Before Dawn—Underbrushing and Burning Log Heaps In the Fallow."

It is the general impression of those who have thought of the matter at all that the man who wrote the line, "The darkest hour is just before the dawn," didn't know what he was talking about. There used to be another saying that had to do with the very early morning, current in a certain happy valley when I was a boy, to the effect that "the sweetest sleep is just before you're called."

If you were a farmer's boy, you know how true that saying is. If you are still a farmer's boy, your knowledge on this point is one of the most positive of the convictions that have forced themselves upon your consciousness. You regard the call, no matter by whom uttered, as the most unkind act of all human acts. You sometimes wonder that its utterance does not paralyze the throat of him who does the uttering. But the chances are that you always obey it promptly. There are reasons, concerning which you do not wish to discourse at length, why you do not dally with Morphens after you are called.

This call opens the day for the farmer's boy. In midwinter the day begins while it is yet dark—likewise cold, unless you live south, so cold some mornings that it is necessary to dress in a hurry to save freezing. After dressing the first work is to build the kitchen fire. The wise farmer's son will have shavings and paper and dry kindlings all prepared by the side of the kitchen stove, or he will have covered a heat of live coals with ashes the night before, so that the fire building will mean simply raking the old fire open and putting on fresh seasoned wood.

When a cheerful blaze has been established, it is the boy's duty to call the other members of the household, all of whom are still asleep save the hired man. He it was who gave the first call before going to the barn to begin the "foddering" of the "stock." The boy who is thoroughly human will give the general second call in such a way as to surely wake every one in the house, even if the intentions are to call only the girl who is to get the breakfast ready. In arousing all at once the boy gets his revenge for his own earlier awakening, and after he has enjoyed his revenge he is ready to join the hired man in the foddering operations at the barn.

Sometimes this foddering is a tedious job. In isn't a long one if there are only two or three horses, as many cows and a few head of young stock. But when there are six or eight horses, 20 cows, three-score and 30 or 40 head of young cattle and colts it will take the hired man and the boy a full hour to get around. Like as not the boy must be got down from a loft reached only by way of a ladder of pegs in an upright beam. The boy climbs the ladder, of course. He is lighter and more sure of hand and foot than the man and is supposed to be able to see in the dark.

The man and the boy will finish their task at about the time the grey light appears, bringing with it the farmer himself and a fine assortment of shining tin milk pails. All fall to at the milking, and all—the boy anyway—feel thankful that most of the cows are dry at this time of the year. Even as it is, all three pairs of hands are kept busy at the milking until breakfast is ready. If there is a kicking cow in the lot, it will fall to the boy to milk her, of course, and during the operation he will be in constant fear, first that the cow will upset the pail just about when it is well filled, and, second, that the upsetting will be followed by a good licking.

After the morning meal, which, if the farmer is kind and "forehanded," is begun and sometimes finished by lamplight, there is more work to be done at the barn. The horses must be groomed and watered, of course. Like as not there is some wheat to be cleaned. If the boy is big and strong enough, he will of course turn the crank of the fanning mill, even if he has to be kept out of school to do it. It's an even chance that he would rather work on the barn floor all day than climb through the drifts to school anyway, and he may have to stay at home even if he is not big enough to turn the crank. In this case he may become inquisitive about the cogwheels of the machine, and maybe he will put his fingers between them, to the satisfaction of his curiosity and the damage of his fingers.

Sometimes there's a little work to be done in a "fallen." Perhaps that word should be spelled fallow. At all events it was pronounced as I have spelled it —"fallen"—in the happy valley years ago. A fallen is a clearing, and it was customary for the farmers whose fallows were on the hills surrounding the happy valley at the time of which I am now writing to make "log heaps" of most of the timber felled and burn them. It was the duty of one boy I know of, now the pastor of a big city church, to go out into the fallen on winter days with the hired man and burn these log heaps and "underbrush." I use "underbrush" here as a verb. "Underbrushing" is cutting the wild shrubbery and saplings that have escaped the work of the clearing ax.

The hired man used to cut the twigs like young trees with a sort of short, stout scythe called a "brush hook," while the boy went from heap to heap and kindled the logs. Man and boy need to keep sharp watch of each other for fear of fire in their clothes. Sometimes a spark would lodge in a wrinkle in their coarse woolen coats and smolder for some time before either would notice it. When it was discovered, the cry would be "Sparks!" and the one who was burning would lie down and roll in the snow, and so smother the incipient blaze.

This hired man and boy always had a team of oxen with them to haul heaps of brush to the burning log heaps and to make over again half burned log heaps that had gone out before they were entirely consumed. They used to work pretty hard, and sometimes their fingers got pretty blue and stiff with the cold, but they could always get them warm again by the mighty blaze of a log heap. It used to be necessary for them to look out for cyclonic storms when near the heaps. The reports would sometimes be quite so long and almost as dangerous as dynamite bombs, then unthought of and unheard of in the happy valley.

The noonday dinners of this man and this boy, when they were at work in the fallen, or the eloquent preacher who has been the boy told me a day or two ago, were marvels of good eating. Thick slices of bread and butter, cold potatoes, coffee reheated at the log heaps, fat pork and pie were what they were made of, but to these rude ingredients was added the sauce that nature furnishes for the benefit of those who are healthy and have hard to such a pure and invigorating atmosphere as that of the hills about the happy valley.

At night, when this pair of workers would go home, they would both be blacker than as if they had covered themselves with grease paint and burnt cork for the minstrel stage. They would help milk the cows just before supper and then go to sit about the kitchen fire with the rest of the household after supper, but this trial would not often be successful. The cry of their systems was for sleep then, and as both of them would shortly drop off, whether they went to bed or not, they usually gave up the struggle by 8 o'clock or earlier, and five minutes after getting under the blankets they were given to everything, even the wonderful scenes of dreamland, for their sleep was of that sort that is not disturbed by visions of the night.

For this boy and for thousands like him there were few days of recreation summer or winter, and yet as I knew him then and know him now in the days of his maturity he was and is a marvel of clear, calm cheerfulness. Just how he ever managed to prepare himself for collage and his way through after he had accomplished the preparation no one knows but himself, and he is far too modest to exploit his own achievements. It is likely that the stredy health that came to him from his habits of early sleep and early waking, the breadth of chest that followed days of winter in the fallen, and the persistence that he learned when he was taught the routine of work on his father's farm—all had something to do with his success at the schools where he finally left the happy valley and his success in his chosen occupation when he left the schools.

TWILIGHT.

A clear, pale sky—serene and autumn cold.
Thin floats the buoyant crescent silver keen
Through luminous far dream spaces dusky green.
Save for one long, low, lingering streak of gold.
Blue mists the hushed and sapless land enfold
And dim the winding line the river runs,
Where, darkly clustered, shadowy willows lean.
And chill and heavy lie on plain and wold.
Now as the daylight's eager voices fail,
And life is narrowed to a shrinking span,
A prelate breath of calm and peaceful shade
Now on the hot and restless heart of man,
From individual hopes and fears set free,
A quiet touch from out the unknown is laid—
The thought of compassing eternity!

An Exception to Nature's Laws.

According to the general laws of nature, when a body is cooled it becomes heavier than when it is hot. There is at least one exception to this rule, and that is in the case of water. Now, before you read further, shut your eyes and see if you can figure out just exactly how important this exception is to humanity. Cool a can or other vessel of water from, say, 70 degrees down to 40 degrees and then pour it into a tub of water the temperature of which is say place between 50 and 60 degrees. You will notice that the cold water will immediately sink to the bottom, and right here is an explanation of the mystery of river and lake circulation. But when your cooling process goes below 40 degrees, strange as it may seem, the water becomes lighter than it was when it was only one or two degrees warmer, and if poured into a tub heated as directed above will stay on top or immediately rise to that position. Now, let us suppose that water continued to get heavier as it got colder, as other bodies do; what would happen? Ice as soon as it formed would sink to the bottom, layer upon layer, and in this way seas, lakes and rivers would be frozen solid. But one freezing would do for all time, as the rays of the sun would not penetrate the thin skin of cold commer water to a sufficient depth to thaw the rigid mass. "For us it is fortunate that there are exceptions to all rules."—St. Louis Republic.

Treatment For Wounds.

Dr. Eichler, in the "Aerzt, Prakt," advocates Peru balsam as a dressing which causes lacerated wounds to heal quickly, its points of adaptation being that it adheres well and covers the entire surface of the wounds; it has a drying effect, but stimulates granulations, and following application a scab is formed under which healing goes on. Dr. Eichler states that its use is especially indicated in the treatment of wounds having a tendency to marked suppuration or partial gangrene, and in injuries of the hands and fingers the results are excellent. In practice, after coagulation of the marginsof the wound, the Peru balsam is poured over the entire surface, which is then covered with thin layers of gauze moistened with balsam and an ordinary bandage. The latter may be left in place for several days, though it is an advantage to remove the outer dressing daily and moisten the gauze with the balsam without removing it from the wound. —New York Tribune.

Maori Women.

The Maori women are a potent factor in island life and must not be forgotten. Liquid dark eyes, soft voices, affectionate and merry dispositions, light brown skins of ivory smoothness and gracefulness in every movement are their most striking characteristics. Seldom are they to be seen in a passion, and not a single "case word" for man or woman is to be found in the vocabulary of this charming people. In the most furious rage they exh only call each other cat, hatlock, dog, sheep or pig. The most deadly is wild duck, implying a child whom nobody will own.—Fortnightly Review.

CHAPTER XLVI

PREPARING FOR POSSIBILITIES.

"Oh, I cannot marry!" said Judith, her voice betraying extreme agitation.

"With Gordon's infidelity fresh in your memory the idea of marriage must have been repugnant to you," Kavanagh replied. "For that reason I have subdued the natural impulse of my heart and controlled the expression of my dearest hopes never to be uttered, of seeming reserved and cold. If Gordon were dead and had died faithful to you, I should feel that his memory was still a bar which respect for widowhood would force us to pass. But the proofs of his preference for a worthless woman, of his heartless treachery toward you, must long ago have extinguished every spark of affection you felt for him or I am utterly mistaken in your character. No; I would rather have you refuse to be my wife for another cause, much as that other cause would strain the bonds of a dear friendship."

"That other cause—I do not understand you quite now?"

"I will speak plainly, though I betray my own weakness. I am jealous of Taras. I have been jealous of him since you came here, and this feeling has grown, not without reason, until it is too great to be concealed. It urges me on to this last point. I can be silent no longer—hide my passion no more. I must speak out and let you mete in which I live. The vitriol that was thrown into his eyes is nothing to the corroding venom that seems to decay soul and blinds my reason when I see him take your hand!"

"Oh, Mr. Kavanagh!"

"No, no—you must hear me out now that I speak, for it may be the last time. You are all in all to Taras. You are with him every hour of the day. He loves you—you must know that."

"If I knew that, I should not, I could not, stay with him."

"Tell me that again," he said eagerly, "for if you do not know that it is because you do not love him."

"He does not love me. If I thought it necessary to defend myself, I could tell you why."

"I do not ask for explanation. It is enough for me that you say it is so, and I thank God for it. Forgive me if I have offended you. You must forgive me, knowing how deep my passion is by the mad lengths to which it has led me. Look in my face—see how my hand trembles. Oh, if you knew, as one day I hope you shall know, what I have done to make you mine!" He paused, as if perceiving that his passion had brought him to the edge of an abyss.

"You frighten me. Let us go. You hurt my hand." Judith said in pain.

"It is past. See, I am a rational being again now. There, you are free to leave me if you will, but for pity's sake give me an answer now. I swear to abide by your decision, and if you bid me go I will go, and you shall never see my face again. But I have told me you cannot marry, but not why."

"I do not know. It may be only sentiment that makes it seem impossible—a feeling that I ought not to marry."

"If it be only sentiment, reason will in time prevail. Take time to consider my offer. It is too grave a question to be decided in one moment. Consider the question of being my wife has not presented itself to your imagination."

"Indeed it has never entered my thoughts. I have regarded you always as a friend—a most generous and loyal friend —but not—not"—

"Not as a lover. No, my manner is against me. Flirtation is odious to me. Love seems to me too great a thing to be flittered away. A man should keep one passion and no more, a grand passion to which all else are subordinate, and that is love I offer you. Think of me during the coming week not as a friend only, but as a lover, and until Sunday let me know my fate. I ask you now only to promise me that."

"I promise," said Judith faintly.

"With all my soul I thank you. Rest assured that I shall not attempt to alter your decision. It shall be final. If you tell me that you cannot be my wife, I shall throw up everything on the morrow and leave England forever. Come, let us go back more friends as we were. Your father still there—see."

Judith made no answer. She may have been thinking, as doubtless Kavanagh intended she should think, of her father's behalf her father if she refused to marry.

I thought it advisable to tell Mr. Pelham of the discovery I had made, or at least part of it, and that, I confess, not the least important part, to my estimation. An opportunity occurred that evening.

Mr. Pelham had brought his sister home from church, and being induced to stay to supper with us we were left together while the precise Miss Janet was changing her churchgoing dress up stairs.

"I am delighted to see you looking so well," said he, smiling, as he seated himself opposite to me and drew off his gloves. "You look if anything younger than when I saw you last Tuesday."

"I feel 10 years younger," I replied. Indeed I had not felt so happy and hopeful since the day I returned to London. "I have been in the country today, and—and I have something to tell you."

"It must be good news to have had such an effect upon you."

"It is good news. Oh, better than any I have dared to hope for!" I said, thinking only of Judith's positive assurance that Taras did not love her. "I have found out Kavanagh's motive—a motive which explains every act of villainy he has committed."

"That is a very satisfactory discovery. As my rats, it is to me; for, as you may recollect, I intimated that some special purpose must have induced him to take Colonel Bell's affairs in hand."

"He had a special purpose. He is in love with Mr. Bell's daughter, Judith, who he engaged to George Gordon, and today he has made her an offer of marriage, there according to throw up everything and leave England at once if she refused."

"You don't say so!" exclaimed Mr. Pelham, regarding me in astonishment, not unmingled with perplexity. The poor man must have been quite at a loss to understand the connection between my presumed emotion and the revelation of poor Judith's distress.

"Has Miss Bell consented to marry Mr. Kavanagh?"

"No, she has to give him a decisive answer next Sunday."

"Next Sunday—hum!" He held his head on one side and looked down on the ground exactly like a bird at an empty hunk, and then perking up he asked, with a little hesitation, "Have you anything else to tell me?"

"No; then is all I have to tell you."

He regarded the hunk again, seriously this time, and then twiddling his thumbs observed:

"Well, really, I am not see any great cause for exultation over this affair, for if Miss Bell consents your friend, Mr. Gordon, may lose his sweetheart, and if she refuses he may as certainly lose a considerable part of his fortune."

"I was not thinking of that," I confessed, sobered at once by this plain statement of the position. "But George Gordon will be back before they could be married."

"That depends on a variety of circumstances over which we have no control. In my opinion, we must not count too confidently upon Mr. Gordon's escape. We have to trust to the honesty of Mr. Lazarus, the good faith of Peter Sherry, the diligence of a long line of officials, and at any point we may be deceived. Then, again, three weeks is a long time, and a clever rascal may do much before it expires. If Miss Bell consents, he will probably hurry on the marriage. With a special license, they might be married in a few days. If Miss Bell was engaged to Mr. Gordon only three or four months back, she would probably wish to avoid publicity and be glad to get it over as quickly as possible. The moment they are married it is pretty certain that Kavanagh will accept the terms offered by the Potteries' company and decamp, taking Miss Bell with him and leaving her father in very queer straits to be can with the company. That, I think, is fairly presumable when we bear in mind the nature of this unmitigated scoundrel and the extreme danger in which he stands. On the other hand, if Miss Bell refuses he is his wife, we may be equally confident that he will put his threat into practice—sell up everything and fly—the only argument to expose himself to the risk of discovery and punishment. Is there any one you follow me?"

"Tell me what we can do," I said eagerly.

At that moment Miss Janet Pelham, having changed her silk, came down in her best attire—bonnet, shawl, and all.

"A little five minutes!" her brother suggested, with the cheerful manner and chirpy tone of a canary asking for sugar.

Miss Janet withdrew, with discreet celerity.

"Do you think it probable that Miss Bell will accept Kavanagh?" said the solicitor.

"She has known him a long while, and has looked upon him as a friends. George Gordon has been made to appear treacherous and wicked. She does not love any one else, and looks upon Kavanagh as a good friend and most generous man, and he is heartbroken for love."

"Then the probability is she will accept him. I understand your delight in making this discovery. Mr. Bellevieg thinks the marriage would be delayed for the ordering of the settlements, and therefore I perceived that Kavanagh would be dictated to London until the time when Mr. Gordon may, and, as we hope, will arrive to confront him."

"No, I did not think of that. It was a selfish consideration that made me hope."

"Well, be that as it may, my dear young lady, such a consummation is possible and encourages us to regard the affair in a hopeful spirit. Now, do you think you can find means of learning what answer Miss Bell gives?"

"Yes, I believe I can learn that."

"How soon after the event, do you suppose?"

"The day after perhaps—on the Monday."

"That would do. Where will you acquire this information?"

"In Surrey."

"You could telegraph at once to me—the single word 'Yes' or 'No.'"

"Yes, I could do that."

"Precisely. If Miss Bell refuses, we must take your measures to prevent the Potteries company making any payment to Kavanagh; if she consents, we must find means of stopping Mr. Bell from the marriage. The course to be taken in either case necessitates the utmost precaution; but we have all the week before us for consideration and reflection, and so, I think, we may safely dismiss the subject for the present and let the maid bring up the supper."

CHAPTER XLVII.

JUDITH LEARNS THE TRUTH.

On the following Sunday I went again to Woking, rather because inactivity at my Hackney was unendurable than from expectation of learning Judith's decision that day. It was not likely that she would go up into the wood to give her answer to the offer made there the week before, or that accident would again favor me as it had done. In this I was not disappointed. A drizzling rain fell all the afternoon, and from the opening in the wood could see the shivering hour after hour I saw no one in the open space below.

I amid the blight at the "Wheatsheaf," and from my little room in the front of the house I watched the road the next morning until shortly after 9, when the carriage passed on its way to the station with Kavanagh and Colonel Bell. Kavanagh had a cigar in his lips and a magazine in his hand, indifferent to his companion, who sat with his chin hands on the pommel of his stick and his head bowed, vacantly looking on his poor old face.

I started off at pace for the Grange. Neither Taras nor Judith was in the garden when I looked down from the wood, but when I reached the entrance gates and looked through I perceived Judith in the long walk strolling listlessly toward me, her hands at her back and her eyes on the ground, as if in meditation.

I had made up my mind as to what I would do on meeting her accidentally, but hastily whipping off my hat I bowed to her, and then I paused upon the gate and entered.

At the sound of my step she raised her head, but she continued to advance at the same pace, for she had seen me but once before, and then very differently dressed and so did not at once recognize who I was.

Suddenly, however, as we drew near to each other, she stopped, and, drawing her self up proudly regarded me with such scorn and loathing in her pale face as I have never seen in another.

I paused also, smitten with pity for her, my heart aching in sympathy for the humiliation and sorrow she had suffered. Then I hurried on to make sure that we were alone before I spoke. As I passed her she drew her skirt aside, as if she feared pollution by the mere contact of our dress, and all the time she kept her eyes fixed upon me, terrible with hatred and contempt.

I went as far as the top of the walk, and seeing neither Taras nor Mere Lotma I returned to where Judith still stood as if reversing the fable of Galatea, hate had transformed her to marble.

"I must speak to you," I said in a low voice as I approached her. "Where are Taras and Mere Lotma?"

"They are in the house," she answered hoarsely. "I will hear nothing that you have to say. If you are in need, I will not help you; if you are dying, I would not move a step to save you. Go!" She trod on all the goodness from my heart. You have made me look—look!"

The tone of self abandonment and misery in which these last three words were uttered belied her asserted heartlessness.

"The goodness is not crushed from your heart, thank before!" said I. "Love is stronger than hate. I know, for I have suffered too."

"I will not listen to you," she said vehemently, turning to leave me.

"Wait!" I stepped before her, barring the way. "You must listen to me," and seeing she was determined to pass by me I added, "I have a message to give you from George Gordon."

She hesitated for an instant; then, with a gesture of refusal, she said indignantly:

"He is nothing to me. It is an insult to speak to me of him. Let me pass."

"He is all the world to you, and you are all the world to him. See," I said, offering the little packet poor George had given me on the eve of my departure, "he has sent you this from Siberia."

She would not take it from my hand, but, looking at me as if she would pierce my very soul to read the truth, she tore to ed my words, "From Siberia!" in a low tone of incredulity.

I tore open the paper and revealed his letter and ring, upon which he had cut out of pale lilac ribbon—some treasured relic from her dress, which had its pretty story doubtless.

From Siberia!" she repeated, with an accent of doubt, alarm, she stooped to see her pale cheek as she recognized the objects that lay in my hand.

"The carriage is coming back," I said, catching the sound of wheels. "I must not be seen here. Take me where I can speak all unseen and unheard."

"If your intentions are honest, what need is there of secrecy?"

"The need of obtaining one who is not honest. What have you to fear? You must as it is likely that I should come to insult you or do you injury? Come this way," I added eagerly, stepping toward an alley that turned from the drive as the sound of the returning carriage suddenly became more distinct.

She hesitated to comply.

"What if I refuse?" she said half aloud, as if putting the question to herself.

"Then God forgive you, for the ruin of the man who loves you may be your doing."

She followed me down the alley as the carriage came in sight. A farmer's cart brought me to an arbor cut in the thick yew hedge. I stepped quickly into the recess, and Judith followed me. I remained self on one of the rustic stools, but Judith stood before the table with her hands behind us. When the carriage had passed the end of the walk, I held the ring on the table before her, saying:

"Let it be; you will your heart bids you take it. It should not be there. Judith, it is not a proof of his constant love and fidelity that he sent to London until the time when Mr. Gordon may, and, as we hope, will arrive to confront him."

"No, I did not think of that. It was a selfish consideration that made me hope."

"Well, be that as it may, my dear young lady, such a consummation is possible and encourages us to regard the affair in a hopeful spirit. Now, do you think you can find means of learning what answer Miss Bell gives?"

FARMER BOEN.

Contrasting Farmer Boen's theories on farming with the practical results of farming to him the Fergus Falls Journal says: "In the course of his speech to congress Congressman Boen painted the following doleful picture of farm life:

"In farming every member of the family works—man, woman and child. All their time, strength and skill to the process of production. Ceaseless, unremitting toil from early morn till late at night, from childhood to the grave. And when near the end of a busy life the weary worker views his or her possessions it is generally found that the chief item in the assets is the knowledge of dreary years spent in the production of wealth that has been enjoyed by others. Sobriety, industry, honesty, a fertile soil and good climate availeth not. Life began in poverty, was spent in toil, in privations, and still ends in poverty, because the burdens of government and the fuss and feathers of the butterflies of society, the support of the drones of the hive, all come from the farm."

Mr. Boen walked into this county because he was too poor to ride. He was practically penniless. He was even more ignorant than he is now. At the end of twenty years—and he is still a young man—he owns a fine farm, a city residence, has money at interest, is drawing $8,000 a year as a congressman and has stock in an elevator company. If we are not mistaken, and yet he is nothing but an Ottertail country banker. Now in the face of these facts he goes to Washington and paints his dismal picture of the farmer. When Boen decided to go to congress we thought it was an an exhibition of "nerve," but it takes even greater nerve to tell such a story as he tells above in the face of his own experience.

LAST Friday was a sort of JOURNAL day for the Times, which was fairly sloppin' over with matter about this paper, and did the people not know the unscrupulous character of the little individual who runs the Times, they would be led to think that the JOURNAL folks were terribly wicked people. To briefly review some of the statements made in that issue we will commence with "Judge Ives' position," as the Times is pleased to call it.

The JOURNAL is said to have abused the Judge. This is queer. In the article meant the case against the county board, the Judge's reasons for refusing the order were printed without criticism, but with an explanation as to who the Judge's relatives were who would be deprived of the benefits of the contract now existing." The facts as briefly stated by the JOURNAL, seems to have stirred up the Times and "an attorney," who, not satisfied with trying the case in court, must again try it in the press. "Attorney" claims that the written reason given by the Judge for refusing the order was not his real reason, and that his real reason was because he "believed the order should not be issued, and did not want to put the parties or the county to the expense of a trial or a hearing." This is putting the Judge in an awkward position. The JOURNAL accepted the written reason as a good truth. The JOURNAL was willing to have the case heard before Judge Ives, firmly believing that he would not knowingly deal out poor law; and as to the expenses of arguing the matter before Judge Ives, all the county would have to pay was an attorney fee—if the commissioners were not satisfied with their county attorney. "Attorney" is a pretty good sort of a fellow, but his association lately with some of the county commissioners has had a demoralizing effect on him, and this may account for his surer dependgard for truth in his mouthed-for misrepresentation of the JOURNAL'S position.

The Times says: "He (Judge Ives) undoubtedly also foresaw as every one else did who had any knowledge of the law or justice of the case, that he would have been obliged to decide as Judge Searl did." The Times man evidently had knowledge of no justice or license, for when the papers were served on the Board it immediately stopped work on the last bit in his office, and as much afraid was he of the case going against the county that he did not resume work again until the case was decided. So much for his foresight. After a case is tried every one "knew just how it would go," but previous to this trial there wasn't an attorney in the city who was certain as to what could or could not be done under the statute in regard to county printing, and it is the silliest rot for an attorney or any one else to say now he "knew just how it would be decided."

The Norman County Herald says "there was no political significance" in the fact that the republicans swept Duluth by the largest majority ever known. Well, maybe not, Norby, and maybe it is because some people have to be struck by lightning before they will tumble to a great truth in way you can't see the significance of that vote.

At a banquet given by the St. Paul Press club last week to Henry Watterson, some of the democrats present expressed themselves freely in regard to the administration. P. H. Kelly, Chairman Cutcheon of the democratic state central committee, and Mr. Watterson all agreed that Cleveland's second term should have been his first. Open confession is good for the soul.

AMONG the first fruits of the recent decision of the supreme court in relation to the probate laws is the release of a red-handed murderer from the Fergus Falls asylum. The man killed his wife and child last November and was sent to the asylum and now his brother comes and demands his release and his demand had to be complied with—and the murderer goes free.

The love that the democratic administration has for the veteran soldier is shown in a bill that is now before congress providing that the National soldiers homes shall be placed under control of the war department. Not satisfied with trying to disrupt the pension system the democrats must try and break up the soldiers homes. Wonderful case for the men that saved the country, this is!

The Wilson tariff bill, having passed the House and reached the Senate with its income tax rider, will now be amended to a considerable extent and probably the rider knocked off, when it will be returned to the House for concurrence. It is very doubtful whether the House will concur and there is a possibility that no compromise measure can be adopted this session.

The Merritts of Duluth have succumbed to the inevitable (and the good old democratic times) and their interests in Missabe mines passes into the hands of the great king of finances—Rockefeller. The boys have done more for the upbuilding of Duluth than any one other family there, and no doubt could have pulled through all right if the good old democratic times had not paralyzed the business interests of the country, but time was too much for 'em and they had to go.

The Editorial Association will hold its annual business session in Minneapolis to-day and to-morrow. The boys will have a big feed at the West, will exercise their grey matter in plenty chin music for two hours, and then adjourn to the classic regions of the home den, and—the old world will wag along about the same as usual. If they would ever hatch out some plan that would be of mutual benefit to the craft there would be some object in their annual pow wows and every newspaper man in the State would join.

The mutterings of the great storm that will sweep over the country in '96 already begin to be heard in the reports of last fall's elections and the municipal election held in Duluth last week. If the Wilson bill or anything akin to it becomes a law it will be the best practical educator that the republican party could wish. While it would be a pretty rough dose of medicine for the country to take it might be worth all it cost eventually.

And now the "law and order" howlers of St. Paul begin to see what they have done since Mayor Wright has declined to stand for re-election. The democrats have been bitterly fighting him ever since he was elected so that the "good old times" with the wide open policy prevailing might be restored under democratic administration and the "law and order" cranks didn't have sense enough to tumble to the situation until after their parties had so disgusted the mayor that he positively refused to stand the nonsense for another term, and then they began to realize when they were at and with one accord they now begin to wonder what they are going to do about it. To a man up a tree it looks like they would find out sooner than they want to—they are liable to wake up some fine morning and find themselves under the good old democratic wide open policy. Serve 'em just right if they do.

CHAS. S. ENGLISH has been appointed receiver and Jas. V. Brooks register of the Grand Forks land office. J. Adam Bede, the eccentric newspaper man of Tower, has been appointed United States marshal for Minnesota.

The governor of Kansas will have to try some other man to hang. Lessed from office as his order resigning her is no good. Gov. Lewelling ordered Mary Ire-Lease her hold on official life, but Mary appealed to the supreme court and the decision of that body reverses the governor's order and gives Mary a new Lease of official life. She says she was going to resign but now she wont do it just because the governor is so anxious for her to "do them now!"

Of all the blatant demagogues that ever graced a community, Editor McKenzie, of the Times, stands head shoulders above his fellows.

Take the following sentence for instance from the Times' criticism of Editor Ware: "It is always better to prove a fact than to simply state it." Just think of a man like McKenzie—a man who is constantly making the most willfull, malicious and libelous statements—offering such advice. Oniglast week he intimated that the clerk of the court and the county auditor would have had a "rake-off" had the printing been given to other institutions than the Times. A malicious lie made out of whole cloth.

Then again he announces that the auditor gave the publishing of the notices of expiration of redemption to the Tribune at 25 cents per description, when the board resolved to have them published in four Crookston papers at 12 cents per description. The facts are that the auditor had the notices printed in the Tribune, Pertle Journal, and McIntosh Times for 12 cents per description. But when the Times gets caught in a lie now, it crawls out by saying it was a "typographical error."

Another word in regard to this matter. As long as the county board insists on giving about $5,000 worth of printing to a democratic paper on partisan grounds—which the two democrats on the board privately acknowledge is their reason for awarding the printing as they did—then the auditor is perfectly justified in giving out the expiration notices—about $125—to his party papers. Year after year McKenzie has had these notices —at 25 cents per description—and last year, because he knew he could not get them—his string on a certain individual having been broken—he offered to print them for 6 cents per description. What a magnanimous fellow!

And we might go on mentioning instance after instance where he has made statements that were false, and for which he had no proof, but the people generally are aware of his unscrupulous character, and his libelous articles only set us a boomerang to him.

Replying to our little touch on his county seat scheme, in our issue of February 1st, Bro. And. J. Clark, of the Roxy Region comes back at us thusly:

"Say, Bro. Cooke, you probably remember a young fellow—"party hail guide fuller himself," who, by way back in the misty past, was botherin' we'uns a good deal about a county seat down in Roxy Region, and we helped persuade him to go away up in the Red River Valley" where nobody but Bill Stuart and Old Shelly lived, and start a newspaper —where we'uns supposed and hoped he whirled he would starve to death. Well, we have always had a kind of suspicion that the joke isn't that deal on the other fellow. And now, if you will quit laughing and kindly help us even up a little in the "Rosy" matter, we will call it square and all will be forgiven."

Do we remember it? Well, we should smile! And we remember also a good deal better "joke on the other fellow" too. It seems that "the other fellow" was a candidate for county attorney for Beltrami county in a three cornered fight in which Capt. J. G. McGrew, then of Anderson, was one of his competitors. Conceiving the idea that McGrew was much the weakest man in the fight "the other fellow" went to Lake Park, and rustled for votes; when he could not get a single man to work for himself direct he would induce him to work for McGrew, thus (as he thought) weakening the man he thought the stronger. The result showed that he shot his granny, for the "other fellow's" work at Lake Park was the very paper that elected McGrew! Do you remember that, Bro. Clark? However, we do not lay up any thing "again" you for your efforts to have us keep you in peace in Becker county and come to Crookston, and if you will intimate how we can aid you in your present project we will cheerfully do it on our.

Recent medical statistics in Switzerland show that 50 per cent of the young men who would otherwise be eligible for military service are rendered unfit by excessive drinking.

DUNN'S BUDGET.

Interesting News and Gossip from the National Capital.

WASHINGTON, February 12.—The Senate Finance committee has been trying to make the Wilson tariff bill pass muster in the upper House. They have been hoping to make it suit the Senators whose votes are necessary to carry it through. It is possible that they will be able to get it in form to suit the Senatorial taste. There is no denying that the way the bill went through the House has convinced the Democrats of the Senate that they must pass some kind of a bill. It is probable that we shall have the tax restored to sugar. Coal and iron will be taxed and many other changes will be made in the Wilson bill in order to get it through the Senate.

The income tax will remain in the bill, and I am glad of it. That kind of a tax can be enforced It is the most popular and satisfactory kind of a tax. The government needs the revenue, why not make men who are receiving over $4,000 a year bear a little more than the other people. The best kind of a tax is that upon foreign transportations which affords both revenue and protection; but we cannot get that with the Democrats in power, so let us take the next best thing.

The fruits of the work of Senator Washburn as a member of the commerce committee were seen the other day when the Sundry Civil appropriation bill was reported, and it carried nearly a million dollars to improve the Mississippi river from Minneapolis to the mouth of the Ohio. He will have something more to do when the river and improvement bill comes up.

It would probably be impossible to tell in a short letter what is meant by the "coinage of the seigniorage," but briefly it means to estimate the amount of bullion, if coined in dollars, would be necessary to redeem all the treasury notes issued for the purchase of the bullion, and then to coin what is over bullion there may still remain. Actually it would make about $55,000,000. This bullion is the surplus obtained in buying silver, the amount of silver in the dollar note purchased.

Senator Davis has been on the sick list for a few days owing to a serious case of grip, which caught a great many people in Washington this season.

In the debate between Baldwin and Towney over iron ore the former charged that Baldwin was the host of it; but that could not be so. Baldwin said he represented the iron ore interests of Minnesota and Towney represented the iron ore interests of Pennsylvania. This one we thought it was funny and shouted.

They do say that partisan politics has disappeared from view in the Minnesota delegation; that Fletcher has a democrat for his clerk and that Towney has a populist. Of course that it is now the wiping out of party lines, but that these shrewd representatives intend to use these appointments to help them in the coming campaign.

Col. Hatch has introduced his anti-option bill. It does not differ materially from the bill which Senator Washburn pushed through the last congress. The Minnesota Senator's bill was a good bill practicable, will give it as hearty support as if it were his own. He says his object is to get a bill that will put a stop to gambling in farm products and keeping down the price.

ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Mr. Albert Favorite of Kansas City, Kan., wishes to give our readers the benefit of his experience with colds. He says: "I contracted a cold early last spring that settled on my lungs, and had hardly recovered from it when I caught another that hung on all summer. I left me with a hacking cough which I thought I would never get rid of. I had used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy some fourteen years ago with much success, and concluded to try it again. When I had got through with one bottle my cough had left me, and have not suffered from a single cold since. I have recommended it to others, and all speak well of it." 50 cent bottles for sale by S. THE MEN PLEASED

WITH THE RESULT OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC CONFERENCE.

They Were Granted Many Concessions by the Receivers—Meetings For the Argument of Differences Lasted Sixty-two Days—Terms of the Agreement.

ST. PAUL, Feb. 12.—Joseph B. W. Johnston of Tacoma stepped out of his way home from Milwaukee, and put up at the Windsor. He was one of the delegates who has been conferring with the receivers of the Northern Pacific relative to disputes. He is a conductor and took an active part in the conferences. He told a reporter that the conferences has ended very satisfactorily to employes of the road. They secured a majority of the concessions asked and were granted points on other requests that gratify the employes and make them that they went into the conference. He said this has been the most noted conference with receivers of a railroad ever held in the country. It began over two months ago and was conducted for 62 days in this city and Milwaukee. During this time all branches of the service had been given conferences before the full board of receivers. Mr. Johnston expressed himself as well pleased with the concessions to the trainmen, and said that other branches received about the same concessions. They had not asked to have the scale of wages in force last year restored, but had asked, and been granted, concessions as to what shall constitute a day's work and to be Allowed For Overtime.

Feel More Than Satisfied

The conferences in St. Paul had resulted in securing 27 concessions, and a number of others were granted at the Milwaukee conference. In cases of delays by snowstorms, washouts and wrecks the man are to be allowed for overtime. There were concessions made that where men work on short lines, and are required to make two or more trips a day, they are to be allowed for all delays between runs that amount to over two and a half hours, and trainmen doing switch duty to make up full time are allowed concessions as to ways of pay. Another point conceded is in the promotion of men to vacancies.

THE TERMS OF AGREEMENT.

Northern Pacific Receivers and Employes Settle Differences.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 12.—The wage question, over which the receivers of the Northern Pacific railroad and the employes have been conferring in this city, has been amicably settled, and the receivers will ask the court for permission to modify the wage schedule according to the terms agreed to. The conference has been a peaceful one throughout. The representatives of the employes pointed out where the new wage schedule did them injustice, and wherever it was possible the receivers agreed to make the desired changes. The men did not secure all they wanted, but they reluctantly accepted what was given them.

By the decision of the receivers the schedule will remain as it was promulgated Jan. 1, the concessions being merely changes in rules governing the service. The men wanted the schedule of 1892 raised, but the receivers refused this. The demand of the trainmen to be paid for overtime caused by delays was conceded. It was agreed that a standard run should be 100 miles and the time allowed to make it 10 hours. Shorter runs also to be paid in proportion to the number of miles. The telegraphers demand that a minimum salary of $60 per month be fixed was denied. The receivers are making contracts to operate 33 branch lines of the road.

FAVOR THE EMPLOYES.

A Decision by Judges Hallett and Hazel In Union Pacific Cases.

DENVER, Feb. 9.—Argument was concluded before Judges Hallett and Riner on the petition of the Union Pacific receivers for the extension to 10 per cent of the new wage schedule. The judges gave a decision during the evening in favor of the employes, refusing to enter in the districts of Colorado and Wyoming the order made by Judge Dundy of Omaha. They will not appears by the pleadings in this case that there is the appointment of receivers certain duties and responsibilities and schedules were in force, organized and acted upon by the employes and managers. Consequently it is if the receivers deem it advisable and necessary to the economic economic management of the property or interests that rules, regulations and schedules at the time the property came into their hand should be adopted, the employes affected by any proposed change be notified and be given time and opportunity to point out to the receivers any inequality in the schedules or any injustice which they may think will be done them, and if after such negotiation and consultation, the receivers and employes are unable to agree as to any proposed rules, regulations, item or items of wages or schedules proposed, that the matters of difference be referred to this court for final determination. It this be pursued the result, in our judgment, will be a fair and full consultation and discussion of these matters between the receivers and employes, meeting as they will in a spirit of "fair play," little will be left to be interfered with by the court in relation to that matter."

Different From Those in Force

Another World's Fair Fire.

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—The magnificent building at the world's fair grounds was slightly damaged by fire late in the afternoon. The fire was discovered in the southeast corner, inside the building, and was extinguished before it had done any material damage. After the fire was out a section of cement floor weighing fell from the roof, narrowly missing a number of firemen who were passing underneath.

A Racking Cough

Cured by Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Mrs. P. D. HALL, 217 Genesee St., Lockport, N. Y., says:

"Over thirty years ago, I remember hearing my father describe the wonderful curative effects of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. During a recent attack of La Grippe, which assumed the form of a catarrh, soreness of the lungs, accompanied by an aggravating cough, I used various remedies and prescriptions. While some of these medicines partially alleviated the coughing during the day, none of them afforded me any relief from that spasmodic action of the lungs which would seize me the moment I attempted to lie down at night. After ten or twelve such nights, I was

Nearly in Despair,

and had about decided to sit up all night in my easy chair, and procure what sleep I could in that way. It then occurred to me that I had a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I took a spoonful of this preparation in a little water, and was able to lie down without coughing. In a few moments I fell asleep, and awoke in the morning greatly refreshed and feeling much better. I took a teaspoonful of the Pectoral every night for a week, then gradually decreased the dose, and in two weeks my cough was cured."

WILL TURN PATIENTS LOOSE.

Minnesota Insane Asylum Trustees Take Radical Action.

St. Paul, Feb. 8.—The trustees of the state insane asylums are in session at the Ryan discussing what shall be done with the patients who under the recent decision of the supreme court are now illegally detained in the hospitals. In reply to their request for information made at a special meeting a week ago, Attorney General Childs submitted to them an opinion in which he holds that the superintendents of the asylums have no authority to assume further custody or control over the patients committed under this law, and that every patient so committed has the undoubted right of withdrawal at pleasure, but that it is not incumbent upon the hospital authorities at public expense to the counties from which they have been committed. The obligations of the authorities will be discharged when the patients are informed that they are at liberty to leave the hospitals. Justice, however, requires that both the committing officer and friends of the patients shall be notified and requested to remove the patients at once.

The board late in the afternoon instructed the superintendent to notify the judges of probate of the respective counties from which patients were committed and the friends of the patients to come and remove them, and in case of their refusal or neglect, to set the patients at liberty after a reasonable time. Two hundred and eighty-eight per one were committed under the defective law.

FIGHTING FOR THE BALLOT.

The New York Woman's Suffrage League Conducting an Active Campaign.

Encouraged by the result of the last state election in Colorado, when the proposition to grant the ballot to women was carried by a handsome majority, the woman suffragists of New York have entered upon a vigorous campaign with the object of convincing the delegates to the approaching constitutional convention that equal suffrage for both sexes is the one thing needful to the moral and material prosperity of the Empire State. The campaign is conducted under the auspices of the Woman's Suffrage league, of which the veteran Lillian Devereux Blake is president. The practical direction of the work, however, is exercised by Mrs. Harriette A. Keyser, who bears the title of "organizer" and has charge of the headquarters in New York city.

In addition to sending out floods of letters and making personal appeals to the men elected as delegates to the convention, popular meetings are held in the various assembly districts, where eloquent women endeavor to educate public opinion on the subject. In the natural course of events these conventions pass resolutions calling on the delegates from the district to use their influence to strike out from the constitution the word "male" as a qualification for voters.

Mrs. Keyser says the labor unions are with them and that "nearly all working women know that the right of suffrage will greatly improve their condition. They know that it will give them equal pay with men for equal work. Knowing that, how can any woman who works for a living do other then desire equal suffrage? Then most liberal, progressive men want women to have the suffrage if they wish it.

"Some conservative people say to me, 'But only the lowest class of women will vote.' I answer, 'Does the history so far of states where women do vote bear out any such assumption as that?' No. It is in every instance the better class who have used the enfranchisement of women has had an elevating, purifying effect. I believe that most men hold this opinion. It is from the women that we have to fight if they wish it.

It is from the women that we have to fight if they wish it.

"Some conservative people say to me, 'But other arguement mostly."

It is a case of "now or never" with the New York Woman's Suffrage league, for if this constitutional convention fails to consider the matter favorably it will be a long time before the desired amendment can be submitted to the people.

OLDER THAN GLADSTONE.

Frederick Fraley Elected President of the National Board of Trade 27 Times.

For 26 years the venerable Frederick Fraley of Philadelphia, and the presided over the deliberations of the national board of trade, and at the recent annual meeting in Washington he was re-elected for the twenty-seventh term. The period of Mr. Fraley's service as president is unequal with the existence of the organization, and it is fair to presume that he will occupy the office as long as he is able to attend the conventions.

He was born in Philadelphia in May, 1818, and was at least 43 years of the age when venerable Gladstone first saw the light of day; but, as in the case of the English statesman, the hand of Father Time has rested lightly on Mr. Fraley's brow, and he retains the vigor of middle age. He was one of the founders of the Franklin institute in his native city in 1824 and was its treasurer for many years. In 1834 he was elected to the city council, later becoming chairman of its finance committee, where he proved his worth when the suspension of specie payments had brought the city to the verge of bankruptcy in 1837 by proposing the issue of certificates of debt of small denominations, which averted the impending disaster.

On the completion of Girard college in 1847 Mr. Fraley was elected a member of the board of directors and for several years was the head of the board. During a vacancy in the presidency of the college he for six months filled that important position. The University of Pennsylvania conferred on him the degree of LL. D. in 1880, he having been a trustee of that institution since 1833. He was also active in promoting and organizing the Centennial exhibition of 1876, being treasurer of the board of finance and contributing greatly to the success of that colossal undertaking.

Forestry as a Profession.

Alfred Fincher is the first American to be graduated at a school of forestry and take up forestry as a profession. He is the consulting forester on the state of George W. Vanderbilt in the North Carolina mountains and has published a pamphlet, illustrated with photographs and a map, showing the progress of the work on the Biltmore forest. His attempt in this domain is the first practical application of scientific forest management in the United States.

AN HISTORICAL SPOT.

A TABLET TO SHOW WHERE THE BALTIMORE CONGRESS MET.

How Congress Was Compelled to Leave Philadelphia in 1770 and Take Up Temporary Quarters in the Old Fife Tavern in the Monumental City.

Baltimore is a city rich in historical landmarks, and another very interesting event in American history is soon to be recalled by the erection there of a tablet where the continental congress met on the 20th of December, 1776. That place, on Baltimore street, between Sharp and Liberty, was a three story brick tavern without architectural pretensions. Its owner in those days was one Jacob Pite. The interior of the house was burned in 1860, and a few years ago the restored building fell before the march of improvements.

The Maryland Society of the Sons of the American Revolution did not believe in allowing such an important spot to remain unmarked, and on Feb. 22 the tablet the society has prepared will be planted near where the old Pite tavern stood. The tablet will be of bronze, 4 feet high and 3½ feet broad. In the upper left hand corner will be a plate bearing a relief picture of the tavern and the following inscription:

Here stood the house of Jacob Fite, known afterward as Congress hall, in which the continental congress met Dec. 20, 1776, and Dec. 25, 1776, conferred on General Washington extraordinary powers for the raising of troops and the conduct of the Revolutionary war.

Above the plate containing the picture and inscriptions will be an ornamental cornice, with an eagle with outstretched wings at each corner, and a shield with supporting scrollwork in the middle. The sides of the tablet will be rounded and about eight inches deep. On one of these rounded corners will be the names of seven of the original states—Maryland, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Delaware, New York, Rhode Island and Connecticut—with a star between each. The other six—New Hampshire, New Jersey, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia—are to be on the other side.

On Oct. 7, 1765, the first colonial congress, which was the prototype of the congress of today, met in New York to take action on the objectionable stamp act and adopted a declaration of rights announcing that American colonists would not consent to be taxed except by their own representatives. The stamp act was repealed, and the excitement died down, but other oppressive acts on the part of the mother country caused the assemblage of the second colonial congress in Philadelphia in September, 1774. This congress voted to back Massachusetts in her warlike opposition to British oppression and adjourned to meet again May 10, 1776. It was hoped that by George Washington in command of the colonial armies. Congress met repeatedly in Philadelphia as the struggle progressed, and finally the Declaration of Independence was adopted there July 4, 1776, and the old bell in the old tabernacle sounded the note of freedom throughout the city and country.

Congress continued to meet in Philadelphia until the British, who had driven Washington out of New York, were about to descend upon the Quaker City. The body on Dec. 12, 1776, moved to Baltimore, engaged the old Fite tavern because it was the largest structure in the city, and held a very important session there. Washington was given extraordinary powers and was practically made dictator of America. He was given authority to raise and officer additional forces, displace and appoint all officers under the rank of brigadier general and seize all necessaries for his army et appraised values. This authority made him complete master of the situation, and in the six months that he enjoyed it he made great reforms in his army and increased its efficiency in a wonderful degree.

During the same session in Baltimore congress also gave its commissioners in France authority to borrow $10,000,000 at 6 per cent for 10 years, issued $5,000,000 in currency "on the faith of the United States" and prescribed that vigorous punishments should be inflicted upon all persons who should refuse to receive the money. From Dec. 20, 1776, until Feb. 27, 1777, congress continued in session in Baltimore and then returned to Philadelphia for the reason that in the meantime General Washington, with his usual daring, had struck the enemy a disastrous blow.

The battle of Trenton had filled the continental forces with new hope, and militia from neighboring provinces flocked to Washington's standard; Robert Morris, the great financier of Philadelphia, at once devoted his entire fortune to the cause of liberty; Washington had ironnced the British forces in his sudden and unexpected attack on them at Princeton; Cornwallis' army, instead of attempting its meditated attack on Philadelphia, was slowly retreating toward New York; Philadelphia was no longer threatened, and congress joyfully returned to the old quarters in the statehouse in Philadelphia.

The spot selected for the memorial tablet is at the Sharp street crossing of Baltimore street. Here the 70th day of December, 1776, Robert Morris, the great financier of Philadelphia, at once devoted his entire fortune to the cause of liberty; Washington had ironnced the British forces in his sudden and unexpected attack on them at Princeton; Cornwallis' army, instead of attempting its meditated attack on Philadelphia, was slowly retreating toward New York; Philadelphia was no longer threatened, and congress joyfully returned to the old quarters in the statehouse in Philadelphia.

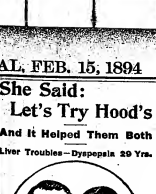
She Said: Let's Try Hood's

And It Helped Them Both

Liver Troubles—Dyspepsia 20 Years.



Mr. & Mrs. James Cox

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen—My husband and I have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I can truly say it has helped us both. My husband had so that he could not stand up straight, and went around half bent over. He had to have a cane to help himself out of his chair. He had taken so much medicine that we were discouraged. But I read so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla, I said, 'Let's try it.' My husband has improved a great deal. His back is much better, and his eyes, which have troubled him a great deal, also have better. Hood's Sarsaparilla has given him a good appetite. I have been troubled with dyspepsia 20 years, but since I have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla my stomach is better, and I also have a good appetite. My complexion is also much improved. We have only taken four bottles, and are well pleased with it." Mr. and Mrs. James Cox, Centerville, Wisconsin.

Liver Complaint and Rheumatism,

PROBATE NOTICE.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk.—ss. In Probate Court, special term January 20th, 1894.

In the matter of the estate of Peder Olson Chrogen deceased.

Whereas, an instrument in writing, purporting to be the last will and testament of Peder Olson Chrogen deceased, late of said County, has been delivered to this court; and

Whereas, Ole A. Haugen has filed therewith his petition, representing among other things that said Peder Olson Chrogen died in said county on the 16th day of January, 1894, resident, and that said petitioner is the executor named in said will, and praying that said instrument may be admitted to probate, and letters testamentary issued thereon;

It is ordered, that the proofs of said instrument be heard on the 10th day of March, 1894, before the court at the probate office in said county, on the 1st day of February, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, when all persons interested may appear for, or contest the probate of said instrument.

And it is further ordered, that notice of the time and place of said hearing be given to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week, for three successive weeks prior to the day of hearing, in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston in said county.

Dated at Crookston the 1st day of January, A. D. 1894.

By the Court,
C. M. Benson,
Judge of Probate.

A GREAT BLIZZARD.

TERRIFIC STORM SWEEPS OVER THE COUNTRY,

Impeding Street and Steam Railway Traffic—Great Damage Was Done at Chicago—It Skipped the Northwestern States.

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—This city was visited during the day by the worst blizzard ever experienced here. The storm began during the early morning and raged with increasing velocity all day. At 4 p. m. business of all kinds was at a standstill. At that time all the big office buildings were practically deserted, people having started for home, in order to do their travelling before nightfall. Trains were badly delayed during the afternoon, and most of the Eastern roads did not send out trains of any kind. The New York limited on the Erie pulled out at 2 o'clock with two engines and three hours later was 12 miles from Chicago, stuck fast, and two additional engines had to be sent out after it could do no good. The incoming New York limited on the same line, at Fourteenth street, one mile from the depot, and six engines gave it up as a bad job. The Rock Island started out one passenger train, and it came back, after running something over a mile in three hours. The same conditions prevailed on all lines.

Stuck in a Snow Bank

Owing to the driving snow, which made it impossible to see 50 feet, a wreck occurred on the Lake Shore road at Seventy-ninth street and Stony Island avenue. The fireman, Luther S. Webster of Elkhart, Ind., was caught between the engine and tender and badly crushed. Several freight cars were knocked into kindling wood.

On the streets collisions and accidents were numerous. Charles Chase, driver of a bakery wagon, received a broken leg when his vehicle was Overturned by the Wind.

W. B. Cunningham was blown down by a gust of wind, which struck him as he was passing the corner of Wabash avenue and Adams street. His left arm was broken and he was badly bruised.

Moses Bloom, Jr., a member of the board of trade, was struck by a gust of wind and badly injured.

John H. Wood, manager of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co.'s retail store, was struck by a falling sign and painfully injured.

An exceedingly dangerous spot to pedestrians was directly behind the Masonic Temple, which is 22 stories high. The wind was drawn down the narrow alley behind it at an awful rate and whoever attempted to cross the alley was blown off the sidewalk and was very fortunate if he kept his feet. So many people were injured here that a special detail of police was made to keep everybody off that side of the street.

Postoffice Building Damaged.

The new addition to the postoffice was badly damaged. Windows were blown in and the glass roof shattered. Snow an inch deep covered the floor, and the water, dripping through the roof, softened the plaster covering the supporting beams, and great lumps of the plastic material fell to the floor.

The gale from the lake continued to blow furiously well into the night, and before it was driven a blinding snow. Drifts six or more feet deep, which formed in the streets along the lake front, rendered them almost impassable. The high wind caused numerous fires, and it was almost impossible for the firemen to get through the streets. Four out of six horses were put on each fire engine, and even then, with the most desperate efforts, one block in five minutes was considered progress.

Dispatches from all over Northern Illinois, Southern Wisconsin and Iowa tell the same story of furious storm and interruption of business.

WORKMEN IN DANGER.

Repetition of the Tragedy of Last Spring Feared at Milwaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 12.—Swirling clouds of snow in which there has been but one or two rifts since daylight have shut from view the house at the intake tunnel one mile from the shore of the lake. In this building are 19 workmen, at least they were Sunday night. There is considerable fear expressed that the tragedy of last spring may have been repeated. At that time 14 workmen were caught in an air shaft under the water, to which they went for safety when it was apparent the house would be carried away. At 10:30 p. m. a white light was visible, which indicated that the building was intact, though the waves were no doubt washing over it. It is more stormy built than the shell which succumbed to last spring's gale.

AT TOLEDO.

Railroads Tied Up and Business Suspended.

TOLEDO, Feb. 13.—The blizzard struck this city at 5:30 a. m. and at 7:30 every street car in the city was abandoned. The wind blew the water up the river from Manmee bay and the docks and Water street are inundated. Business has been at a standstill. A blinding snowstorm has filled the streets with drifts and all trains are behind time. Trains on the Hocking Valley and Pennsylvania railroads were stalled at the depot platform.

IT REACHES NEW YORK.

Traffic on Land and Water Badly Impeded.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The blizzard scheduled by weather prophets has arrived on time and the streets are already covered with a heavy mantle of snow. All traffic is impeded. The railroad trains are behind time and mails from all parts of the country are delayed. The street railways are operated with difficulty and traffic on the river has been greatly impeded.

A NUMBER REPORTED KILLED.

Louisiana and Mississippi Swept by a Destructive Cyclone.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 13.—A cyclone, accompanied by heavy rain, passed over Central Louisiana and Mississippi about 11 p. m., doing considerable damage, especially in the section traversed by the Illinois Central railroad. It is reported that Newton, Miss., has been wiped off the map, but this lacks confirmation on account of the wires being down. A special just received from Jackson says the cyclone passed between Martinsville and Beauregard, 40 miles south of here. A great many houses were swept from their foundations, trees twisted, fences destroyed. Several people killed and a great many seriously hurt.

Trains Abandoned.

WICHITA, Kan., Feb. 13.—Train service in this section of the state has been abandoned since Sunday. The Missouri Pacific and St. Louis and San Francisco trains are stuck in the Flint hills. The storm has been extremely severe, and by reason of high winds the snow varies from one to 15 feet in depth.

Blizzard Over in Nebraska.

OMAHA, Feb. 13.—The blizzard in Nebraska ended during the morning and all day the sun shone brightly. The Missouri Pacific, owing to the great fall of snow, has been having no end of trouble in getting trains through, but the worst is over and trains will soon be running regularly.

Worst of the Year.

DES MOINES, Feb. 13.—The storm in this state for the past 18 hours has been one of the worst of the year. The snow lies from six to nine inches on the level and is badly drifted. Traffic of all kinds has been interrupted.

KEARSARGE A WRECK.

The Famous Old Steamship Struck on Roncador Reef.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—The United States steamship Kearsarge was wrecked on Roncador reef Feb. 2. The officers and crew were saved. The news reached the navy department in a dispatch which came from Colon. It was sent by lieutenant Brainard of the Kearsarge, who reached Colon Feb. 8.

The Kearsarge sailed from Port au Prince, Hayti, for Blufields, Nicaragua, to protect American interests there, in view of the invasion of the military forces of Honduras. She was wrecked three days out. Roncador reef is a little over 200 miles from the Mosquito coast of Central America. Before the coast and the reef lies Old Providence island, only 73 or 80 miles to leeward of the reef. It is to be believed at the navy department that the officers and crew would be able to reach Old Providence without difficulty in case they were in danger of their lives on the reef, and it is believed that they would be safe on the reef, except in the event of rough weather.

The Crew Rescued.

COLON, Feb. 13.—The crew of the United States cruiser Kearsarge was rescued at noon on Saturday. One man was drowned. He was a second class fireman named Anderson Robbins.

The old warship was abandoned on Roncador reef, with the Stars and Stripes still flying at her peak.

The steamship City of Para, with the crew of the Kearsarge on board, will leave this port for New York on Wednesday next.

All Will Die.

CHICAGO, Feb. 13.—Mrs. Charles Krueger is dead, as the result of eating trichina in pork, and the remainder of the family, seven in all, are beyond hope of recovery. The members of the family were taken ill several days ago, and physicians who were called decided that they were suffering from trichina. The doctors now announce that all the sufferers will die.

Without Recommendation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The senate committee on judiciary has decided to report the Peckham nomination to the senate without recommendation. Senator Hoar was absent, and the committee divided evenly in its vote. Senators George, Vilas, Lindsay and Mitchell voting for confirmation, and Senators Hill, Pugh, Coke, Teller and Wilson against it.

Willis Received.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—A Washington special to The Press says: There is a rumor on the street that Hawaiian matters have reached such a crisis in the eyes of the administration as to justify the recall of Minister Willis and that the whole matter will come up before the next cabinet meeting.

Will Go Before the Country.

LONDON, Feb. 13.—A meeting of the cabinet was held at the official residence of Mr. Gladstone in Downing street, prior to the reassembling of the house of commons. It is stated that Mr. Gladstone proposes to drop the parish councils bill and the employers' liability bill, and to make an appeal to the country within a month.

Receiver For a Wisconsin Road.

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 10.—The Kickapoo Valley and Northern railroad, 88 miles long and all in Crawford county, will be placed in the hands of a receiver. Over $10,000 is due employes, and the Continental Trust company of New York holds a $400,000 mortgage. The latter company applies for a receiver.

Board of Trade Destroyed.

DUNLITH, Feb. 12.—The board of trade building was destroyed by fire shortly after noon. The total loss foots up $54,000, $25,000 on building and the remainder on furniture and records of the board and the grain and vessel men who tenanted it.

Another Race Track.

CHICAGO, Feb. 9.—Chicago is to have another race track. It will be located on the West Side, outside the city limits. The ground has been secured and work will be commenced on it at once. It will be known as the Chicago Fair Grounds association.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Tuesday, Feb. 6.

The Hawaiian debate was concluded in the house during the day, but the entire resolution was not passed because of the failure of the Democrats to secure a quorum when a vote was taken upon it. Republicans and several Democrats refused to vote.

The senate did not come to a vote on the federal election bill during the day, as was anticipated. Several senators who had not hitherto spoken desired an opportunity to be heard on the measure, and the unanimous consent the time of general debate was extended another day.

Wednesday, Feb. 7.

The senate passed the bill to repeal the federal elections law by 38 to 28. It was passed just as it came from the house. Several amendments were offered, but were all voted down.

Representative Baldwin's bill to withdraw from sale or settlement gold and silver bearing lands of Minnesota was favorably reported in the house.

The house passed the McCreary Hawaiian resolution by almost a party vote. The resolution censures Minister Stevens, and upholds the action of President Cleveland. It also declares against either protectorate or annexation.

Thursday, Feb. 8.

The deadlock on Mr. Bland's silver seigniorage bill was broken after four hours of continuous filibustering, when, by a vote of 176 to 4, the house carried Mr. Bland's motion of going into committee of the whole for the consideration of his bill. The Eastern Democrats and the great mass of the Republicans made a determined opposition.

The senate considered Stewart's resolution questioning the right of Secretary Carlisle to issue bonds.

Friday, Feb. 9.

The house spent the day in committee of the whole on Bland's seigniorage bill.

The senate was not in session.

Saturday, Feb. 10.

The house adjourned on account of the death of Representative Houk of Ohio.

The senate was not in session.

Monday, Feb. 12.

The Hawaiian controversy occupied the principal time of the senate Senator Gray of Delaware opening his argument in defense of the policy of President Cleveland.

District of Columbia business occupied most of the time of the house.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

Receipts For the First Part of February Show a Decided Increase.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The receipts from internal revenue during the first 10 days of the present month aggregated $2,079,381, as against $1,814,974 during the corresponding period last year, a gain of $264,407. This tremendous increase is regarded by treasury officials as a sure sign of returning business activity. The significance of it will be understood when it is borne in mind that the beginning of the fiscal year the receipts from internal revenue had constantly declined month by month, until the aggregate receipts for the half year were fully $15,000,000 less than for the correspondig period in 1893.

TWENTY-TWO FOOT VEIN.

Largest Find of Coal Yet Discovered In Montana Struck Near Bozeman.

BOZEMAN, Mon., Feb. 13.—The greatest body of coal ever struck in this state has just been opened by Johnson & McCarthy at their mine, 11 miles east of this city. They have at depth unfinished vein of coal 22 feet in width. The coal is of fine coloring quality and is very clean. Experts say that this is a true vein and that every indication points to its keeping up that width as it is mined out.

A Demand for Farm Lands.

WOONSOCKETT, S. D., Feb. 8.—Real estate men here report an active demand for farm lands by Eastern people, both speculators and actual settlers, the latter coming mostly from Iowa and Illinois, and being practical farmers of means. All indications point to a heavy immigration the coming spring.

Mrs. Lease Wins.

TOPEKA, Kan., Feb. 9.—Mrs. Mary Lease won her case in the supreme court which decides that the governor cannot remove her as a member of the state board of charities, of which board she remains president.

Now It's an Aluminium Wedding.

The already long list of jubilees and family celebrations has been enriched by a novelty in the line of wedding festivities. The family and friends of a rich manufacturer living in the neighborhood of Berlin decorated the interval between the silver and golden wedding to be altogether too long, and halving it introduced last week an aluminium wedding by offering the happy couple on the occasion of the completion of 87½ years of wedded life a choice variety of presents made of aluminium. If this novel idea should catch on, the aluminium industry has a great future before it. The Prussian capitals, of all German cities the one most given to soirées and fêtes of every possible name and description, has since gone even one better by celebrating seven years' wedding, which the friends of the parties, with true Berlin humor, christened the jubilee of the seven years' war.—Paris American Register.

Sympathetic Vaccination.

The Baltimore Herald has heard of something very queer and quite new to him. It is sympathetic vaccination, which several people are said to have suffered from. Without having been vaccinated at all, but with vaccinated people all about, you presently feel at times a stinging or itching sensation in a spot on your arm where the doctor would like you vaccinated if you had been vaccinated. In some cases this sympathetic vaccination affects only the left arm, but occasionally it shifts from one arm to the other, appearing first on the left and then for a time on the right. It is believed to be a nervous outgrowth of the continual complaints of vaccinated people and their everlasting description of their sensations.—Boston Transcript.

His View of the Case.

The editor of a daily to his reporter, who looks savage, "What is the matter with you, friend?"

"The matter? Just this: I was told there had been a collision on the western line—10 killed, 20 injured! I wired for particulars. Nothing; not the slightest accident—isn't it vexing?"—Patriote Normand.

Rather Premature.

In the first number of a new German periodical appeared a letter to the editor signed, "A Subscriber of Many Years' Standing."—Hamburger Fremdenblatt.

Employes Will Not Accept.

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 31.—A special to The Times from Cheyenne, Wy., says a union meeting of railroad men is being held there at which over 600 men are present. The meeting is held with closed doors, but from what can be learned, the men have decided to submit to the schedule as proposed by the Union Pacific.

I do not Eat Pastry.

How often you hear this expression, and the explanation that usually follows: "I am troubled with dyspepsia." The explanation is not far to seek. In the past Lard has been used as the principal 'shortening' in all pastry, the result—dyspepsia. The dyspeptic need no longer be troubled, providing is substituted for lard in the preparation of all food. It is composed entirely of highly refined vegetable oil and beef suet. When used as a shortening, it has been voted delicious and healthful pastry. Physicians and expert cooks everywhere indorse it.

THE STORY OF A YEAR

HOW A MIGHTY NATION HAS SUNK FROM PLENTY TO WANT.

Industries Crippled and Ruined and Prosperity Fleeing Before the Free Trade Specter—An Open Letter to the Hon. W. L. Wilson.

One year ago the largest trade ever known in this country gave promise of prosperity and national wealth hoped for all precedent. Mills were crowded with work and all kinds of business stimulated, giving promises of the best results. New enterprises started up to swell the vast volume of commercial trade, and every sign of enterprise was being cast over every door in the land. Yet in one year the hopes have all been blasted, the sun of prosperity has gone down, and gloomy clouds have covered the sky. During the presidential campaign the pledge was made that "if you will only elect Cleveland your wheat will bring a dollar a bushel, corn will go up to the highest figure, and the nation will enjoy the greatest blessings ever known." R. G. Dun, the mercantile agency, shows how this promise has been fulfilled on Dec. 30:

"Starting with the largest trade ever known, mills crowded with work and all business stimulated with high hopes, the year 1893 has proved in sudden shrinkage of trade, in commercial disasters and depression of industries the worst for 50 years. The year closes with prices of many products the lowest ever known, with millions of workers seeking in vain for work and with charity laboring to keep back suffering and starvation in all our cities."

The report of Bradstreet's gives but little more encouragement and confirms the sad testimony not only of R. G. Dun & Co., but of every hopeless citizen of the United States.

The history of this nation, which is in a large measure taken from the words and sentiments of leading statesmen, such as Washington, Adams, Jefferson, Madison, Jackson, Clay, Webster, Lincoln, Garfield, Harrison and a host of others, shows that in the periods of free trade, low tariff or tariff for revenue financial disasters have always come upon the land. It is also true that the national distress brought on by such unwise and un-American legislation has never been removed until the people came to their senses and compelled the politicians to pass a high protective tariff law.

I would say to you, in the language of Mr. Clavaland, "it is a condition, not a theory, that confronts us," and would respond to that the condition is a sad one, and that it is the legitimate result of the free trade policy of your executive and of the principle set forth in the Wilson tariff bill, of which you are the author. Reports from 630 correspondents of the American Protective Tariff league, from 44 states of the Union, show that the present depression is due to the feeling created by threats of tariff reform. It is reported that a delegation from West Virginia has waited on you, requesting against the passage of the bill.

If you persist in this great reform' of which the party make their boast, you will only intensify the feeling of dissatisfaction and will increase the financial distress.

An able writer on protection, D. H. Mason, says: "All trade has been created by the American people—absolutely all the prosperity, without any reservation whatever—from the foundation of the United States government down to the present time, has been under the reign of protective principles, and all the hard times suffered by the American people in the same period have been preceded either by a heavy reduction of duties on imports or by insufficient protection, thus enabling all free trade theories on the subject."

This, you will find by consulting history, is true in every instance, one of which you probably remember—the disastrous period ending in 1861. You know that in 33 years of Republican control the nation has surpassed every other nation of the earth and has enjoyed more financial and commercial prosperity than we have had till that time since the discovery by Columbus.

Are you not aware that the report of your hill and the threats of reform have ruined the sheep industry already and have nearly injured the coal, lumber, lead and silver interests of the country?

Do you not know that manufacturers have closed their works and thrown millions of hands out of work because of the threats of tariff legislation?

Let the Democratic party abandon their fatal policy, and the wheels of industry will again move, and distress will disappear. H. A. BARCLAY.

Arickaree, Colo.

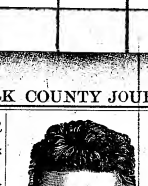
The State Trade.

The slate quarrying industry is one of those that are feeling the dire effects of the free trade object lesson. Slates are produced in a dozen different states, but chiefly in Pennsylvania, Vermont, Maine, Maryland, New York, Virginia, Georgia and New Jersey.

There are 206 different quarries, the output of which is 75 per cent roofing slate. The present tariff on roofing slate is 35 per cent ad valorem, but the Wilson tariff proposes to reduce this to 10 per cent, a loss of 15 per cent to those interested in this industry.

There are over $10,000,000 invested in the slate trade, and there are over 6,000 workers, who receive $3,330,000 annually in wages. A reduction of 15 per cent in the tariff means a loss of $257,000 in their annual earnings, if indeed it does not mean the entire closing of the American quarries in favor of the Welsh slate that will be able to come over as ballast, paying no freight, to swamp our markets.

On other than roofing slates it is proposed to reduce the duty 10 per cent, but that part of the American industry, which is the largest is to receive the greatest injury, in full accord with the policy of destruction of the present administration.—American Economist.



A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting to all. The following is a remarkable and touching letter, which in part discloses 20 years, much of that time very painful, but the two years I was treated by one physician, comparatively. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a year. I had used many remedies and nearly given up hope, when I had a serious condition which a gentleman strongly urged me to try Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by its use. I, too, was again a stronger, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and at the time of writing am using the first dose. I could feel a decided change for the better in the blood of my blood. When I had taken three bottles I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost petrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I could walk three miles that day of my work. Go up reasonably to six others are taking this valuable remedy.

MRS. HARRISON St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee or sent by express, on receipt of price, $2 per bottle, 6 bottles for $5, express prepaid. Book mailed free to all agitates or dangerous drugs.

FOR WOMEN AND HOME.

This well-known journal, a union of four leading women's papers, has won its fame because it deals with what really interests the women of America. Fashions from the standpoint of good taste and economy. Fiction of a pure and helpful kind. Music and Art suitable for non-professional tastes. Household hints written by practical women. Suggestions and aids for self-supporting women. It is a paper for women, by women, and its writers are among the most noted authors. Every line is original, every engraving a gem.

It is a paper of to-day without espousing the great questions of religion, politics and temperance, it gives all the news regarding them. It is ever-ably quoted by the press because its views and articles are bright and unique. Send to Springfield, Ohio, for a sample copy. Formerly $1.00, it is now but 50 cents a year. Washington's Birthday lecture, the British Isles and America; magnificent views of historic scenes in Britain and of Revolutionary battle fields in America at First M. E. Church, Feb. 22nd.

While the Times was abusing the Journal last week, the Journal was gathering news, and published the proceedings of the county board three days in advance of the "official paper"—The Weekly Crookston Times.

Miss Annie Hansen, a daughter of Ole Hansen, of Mentor, died of fever at Grand Forks last Friday, and was buried at Mentor on Monday. She was 20 years of age, and was at one time employed in the household of Judge Benson in this city.

T. A. Harris was intending to have gone to Minneapolis on Monday night to attend the G. A. R. State encampment, but owing to the illness of one of his children, occurring at almost the last moment before he was to depart, he was obliged to give it up, much to his disappointment, for there are two things that Tom dislikes to miss—a good square meal and a Grand Army meeting.

The Round the World Lecture Course in the First M. E. Church will close next week with two entertainments, one Monday night and the other on Thursday night. On Monday night, the subject is "From Egypt to London," and the route will be through southern Europe, taking in the leading cities, cathedrals, and life of Italy, Switzerland, France, Germany, etc., with magnificent views of historic places and scenes in the British Isles, closing with several scenes from the Revolutionary war of '76, made memorable by Washington's dresser as the father of the United States.

The roller-mills at Red Lake Falls sold at sheriff's sale for $30,000 cash.

The Helmicks have been hauling in wheat by the three-horse load for a fortnight or so.

Sunday morning dawned bright and cold—quite a contrast to our February weather so far.

Comrades Fontaine and Cooke went to Minneapolis Monday night to attend the G. A. R. meeting.

Miss Julia Mossedin is attending the general delivery window in the postoffice in place of Miss Twedten resigned.

The sleighing had gotten pretty threadbare before the snow-storm of last week greased the roads in good shape.

H. C. Misner drove down to Crookston last Friday in Hicks' snow-storm, and returned to his home at Euclid facing it.

The Good Templar lodge is making arrangements to have Hev. Battey deliver his course of three lectures on temperance in this city early in March, for the benefit of the lodge.

E. D. Childs went to St. Paul on Tuesday night. Gets back and starts for Fosston this morning, expecting to return on Saturday morning, and start that evening or early next week for Buffalo, N. Y.

Our former fellow-townsman, Thomas Olafson, was one of the victors in the great republican landslide in Duluth a week ago Tuesday. He was elected alderman in the eighth ward of that city.

On Saturday of last week there was not an overly big crowd of people from the prairies—because of the high winds that prevailed to a large extent. It was not what you might call a blizzard, but close enough to it for comfort. It was not overly cold only blustery.

A. Beauchesne was in from the east-side with butter to sell on Thursday of last week. He thinks that more attention will be paid to diversified farming than has been heretofore the case, as farmers are just being forced out of wheat raising whether they like it or not.

Chris. Houston: "I am going into hogs somewhat next season. Have five brood sows and I ought to have from 25 to 40 good large pigs to turn off by the first of December '94. I do not, however, agree with the Journal idea that I can realize a profit at four cents dressed weight, but I intend to know next fall just what it does cost me to produce it."

The following item from the Grand Forks Plaindealer of Saturday last will be of interest to our readers:

"O. J. Barnes, the genial manager of Doheny & Lyons' store in this city, is the father of a daughter, whose age is just one day. Mr. Barnes is receiving the congratulations of his many friends in the city today, who, in a unit, are wishing the young lady a long and happy life."

In view of the prevalence of fever this winter the matter of cleaning up back-yards and alleys this spring should be given more than usual attention than ever. There are icebergs of dish water and slops that have frozen to the depth of six or eight feet that will be sweet scented nosegays when they slowly thaw out unless removed sooner, and as soon as they begin to thaw out they should be cut up and carted off. The board of health will have its hands full if it keeps up with the requirements of the needs of the city this spring.

The Journal is told of a farmer near Erskine who is making calculations on marketing from 300 to 200 hogs next fall. This, we think, is overdoing the matter, for the probability is that if he does this that will be the only crop he will have to market, and if it should happen that others also go extensively into hogs the market will, of course be glutted and the price low, while if he should limit his output to 25 or 30, and have other produce to sell he would do well all round. It is not so very many years since, that hogs were actually a drag in this market and it would not take long to produce the same results again. We think, however, that every farmer could so plan as to add a few more to his last year's stock without overdoing matters any.

Our New Postmaster.

Last Friday Fred E. LePage was nominated to be postmaster of this city. As soon as the appointment is confirmed by the senate, Mr. Le Page will enter upon his duties.

Mr. Le Page has always been considered a good worker for the party and his appointment is a recognition of his past services.

MONEY FOR THE NORTHWEST.

How This Section Fares in the Sundry Civil Bill.

Washington, Feb. 9.—The economists of the Senate appropriation committee cut the Northwest off with absolutely nothing that could be kept out of the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was reported Saturday. It provides for the expenditure of $50,000 for 1895 for the St. Paul public building. Among the other appropriations to be provided for are: For building a reverse gutter for the great lakes, $75,000, the vessel to cost not over $170,000; for the Duluth fish hatchery, $4,440, a reduction of $600; for topographical surveys in North and South Dakota, etc., $60,000; for surveys on Lake Superior and connecting lakes, $25,000, and $2,000 for maps; for improvement of the Mississippi river from Lake to Minneapolis, $1,388,000, of which $886,666 is to be expended between the mouth of the Missouri and Minneapolis. This includes money to be expended upon the proposed Meeker island dam, and $500,000 below the estimate for 1895. The total amount authorized for this expenditure is $4,875,000. The appropriation for Hay lake channel, St. Mary's river, is $150,000, and the appropriation for St. Mary's river at the falls is $300,000. The fall appropriation is a total of $23,201,333. The bill for 1894 carried $41,716,431, or $8,400,000 more than for this year. The estimates for 1895 were for $68,881,023. The greater saving is in the item of rivers and harbors.

CALL IT A FAKE.

The Tacoma Report Is Denied by Officials of the Brotherhoods.

St. Paul, Feb. 6.—The telegram from Tacoma to the effect that the grand officers of the railway brotherhoods now in St. Paul have ordered a general strike over the entire Northern Pacific system, is treated as a fake of the wildest sort by the chiefs themselves. Grand Master Wilson, Grand Chief Clark, Grand Master Sargent and J. B. Wilkinson of the federated board, deny the report so unanimously and decidedly that there is no room to doubt its absolute falsity.

Mardi Gras at New Orleans.

New Orleans, Feb. 6.—The carnival season was inaugurated here last night in a blaze of glory with the brilliant pageant of the crew of Proteus. The trains all day brought many belated strangers and the hotels are reported to be full. The crowds on the streets during the day were quite as large as at any previous carnival for the past seven or eight years and the attendance of visitors from the parishes of Louisiana and from contiguous states was conspicuously large.

Will Meet Feb. 8.

Washington, Feb. 6.—Chairman W. L. Wilson of the ways and means committee, who is also chairman of the executive committee of the National Association of Democratic clubs, has called a meeting of the latter committee, to be held at the Ebbitt House Feb. 8. Mr. Wilson says that the meeting will be of very important one and insists that every member shall be present.

Reversed Stein's Order.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—The Pullman court has reversed the order of Judge Stein, which last summer fining Director General Davis and directors of the world's fair on contempt of court. The officials had been charged with violating the injunction forbidding such action had been granted by Judge Stein. An appeal had been taken, resulting in a reversal.

Lockren Will Wait.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Commissioner of Pensions Lochren will await the decision of Judge Cox of the district equity court on the application of Judge Long of Michigan for an injunction to restrain the commissioner from withholding his pension from $72 to $50 before ordering the suspension of the Michigan judge's pension.

Her Indignation.

A pretty little woman came out of a big dry goods store on Chestnut street, her eyes were flashing fire, and her face was flushed with indignation.

"What's the matter?" inquired a friend who met her at the door.

"Why, she said, "I just saw a man do a thing in there that makes my blood boil. I went over to the dress goods counter and found him there waiting on a stout and letting his wife stand. When I came along, he got up and offered me his seat. And his wife stood there meekly and never said a word. If he'd been my husband I would have snatched him bald-headed." Can you blame her?—Buffalo Express.

Waves on the Great Salt Lake.

A strong gale of wind was blowing over the lake and driving its surface into low, white capped ridges, which along the shore the foam lay like flat banks of new fallen snow. If it had passed across a lake of fresh water of equal extent, that wind would unquestionably have produced such an agitation of its surface that navigation by small boats would have been difficult if not highly perilous.

But the waters of the Great Salt lake, although driven into ridges as just recorded, showed a curious resistance to the wind and the waves, rising to only a slight elevation, moved along with an appearance of lethargy that the eye could not but notice.

Yet there was an immense momentum stored up in those heavy, low lying moving waves. Venturing into the water at a point where the depth did not exceed that of the observer found that it was impossible to stand against them. Their sheer weight swept him resistlessly along.

The curious buoyancy of the water, containing 23 per cent of salt in solution, increased the helplessness of the bather. He was not submerged, as sometimes occurs in the Atlantic breakers, but was lifted and carried like a cork.

It would probably have been impossible to dive through an oncoming wave after the manner practiced by bathers along the Atlantic coast. In the Great Salt lake people are not drowned through sinking, but strangled while still afloat. The hitter water may enter the air passages with fatal effect, but the body continues to float until it reaches the shore or is picked up.—Youth's Companion.

Trouble Over a Trifle.

Last Thursday, while the train was at Fosston, Depot Agent Bush, with the help of Brakeman Fontaine, had occasion to eject a boisterous individual from the depot, and in consequence thereof were arrested, together with Express Messenger Hayes, who happened to be in the depot at the time of the fracas.

The hearing of the case took place before Justice Hunt Saturday, Bush and Hayes were discharged and Fontaine fined $5.00 and costs, but the case appealed to the district court. It was shown that Fontaine had struck the disorderly character and the justice would not take into consideration the fact that he was only performing his duty by trying to preserve order in the depot.

Attorney A. C. Wilkinson went to McIntosh and appeared for the railroad men.

Mentor.

Mentor, Feb. 12th, 1894.

The roads are improved by the recent fall of snow, which was very desirable, as they were in a bad condition.

H. H. Cleary returned to Crookston yesterday with W. G. Faller's lawn press, having been employed by Moe & Baim pressing hay for the last two weeks.

Mrs. O. Hinson returned from Grand Forks where she was called to care for her daughter who was reported dangerously sick. After two weeks of severe sickness Miss Hinson had to succumb and on Feb. 4th, she bid farewell to this world. Her remains was brought to Mentor for interment.

The fish commissioners was in our quiet town on Saturday working up the law offenders of Maple Lake Vicinity. He made a trip to the Lake but being a very stormy day did not find any of the fishermen but lots of shanties and some fish, which he took with him, and burned the shanties. J. H. Fulton, the livery man took him to Fosston on Sunday morning. While here he went through the establishment of Jos. Tingley, but Joe knew some fishing been forewarned and had fed his fish to the pigs (good enough J.)

James J. Hill has finally headed the cattle's petition from Mentor praying for a stock yard here. Not being convenient to load stock here the stock tributary for shipment from this point has always gone to Red Lake Falls, Fertile or Mcintosh. We at last got the stock yards.

A masquerade ball will be given in the town hall on Feb. 22nd under the management of the Mentor comedians. A good time is anticipated.

It is reported that the Roller Mill Co. at Terrebonne has decided to move its flouring mill to Mentor in the near future. This is a very good point for a flour mill, being centrally located for a large farmer's trade, good shipping facility, cheap fuel, and a good wheat producing country. There is only two more business establishments wanted here to satisfy the wants of our town and that is a mill to grind our wheat, and a bank, then we could do our business here.

It is truly a wonderful medicine." For sale by S. A. Wallace.

A Pioneer Goes.

St. Paul, Feb. 1.—Dr. J. H. Murphy died at 8:45 p. m. at his residence, 319 Jackson street. His demise was not unexpected, as for the past three weeks it has been known by the family and medical stepdoints that there was no hope for his recovery.

Discovered Iron Ore.

Brule, Wis., Feb. 5.—Valuable deposits of iron ore have been found five miles north of this place. Prospectors have been at work on the quiet for the past month, and have found the very best quality of ore. There seems to be no limit to the quantity.

Cheap Rates to California.

The Northern Pacific Railroad company has put into effect a series of low round trip rates to California points. Tickets are good until July 15th, 1894 and are good for stop-over under certain conditions.

These rates will enable those desiring to do so, to spend the winter in Southern California or to visit the mid-winter fair to be held at San Francisco. This latter event will undoubtedly be second only to the World's Fair, and will repay a visit as it will exhibit the resources and capabilities of California.

"NOT GUILTY"

This is the Verdict of the Jury in the Ware Criminal Libel Suit.

The Trial Lasted Four Days and the Jury Were Out Five Minutes.

Ware Held a Full Hand, and Rhinehart's Bluff Didn't Work.

The Trial Developed Corruption and Crookedness on the Board.

Bribery was Rampant and Honesty was an Unknown Quantity.

With the Prosecution it was a Case of "Didn't Know it was Loaded."

The Characters of Messrs. Rhinehart and Kirsch Established Beyond a Doubt.

THE ALLEGED LIBELOUS ARTICLE.

"The business men of Crookston have appointed a committee to investigate the county printing steal committed by Commissioners Kirsch, Rhinehart and Demers. It will do no good. By the time the committee get fairly to work the printing for the year will be done and the printers and commissioners will have the boodle in their trousers pocket."

The liberty and freedom of the press has been maintained—not the Thief River Falls Press alone, but the press of Polk county.

Free speech and honest criticism of public officials has triumphed, and damaged characters and sullied reputations are at a discount.

The criminal libel suit brought by County Commissioners Rhinehart and Kirsch against P. S. Ware, editor of the Thief River Falls Press, has been a decided boomerang to the plaintiffs, who little thought, when they commenced the action, what a pitfall they were opening up for themselves.

Mr. Rhinehart, who was the instigator of the action, claiming that the alleged libelous article had injured his character, reputation and business interests, comes out of the fray with his "spotless character" in a decidedly tattered and mangled condition, and his reputation brushed, buttered and shaken in every joint.

When the plaintiffs commenced the action they must have been laboring under the impression that all they had to do was to go into court and declare in an emphatic and wrathful tone of voice that the article complained of was malicious and false from start to finish and that the defense would have to prove that it was true, and this they felt pretty sure could not be done, and Mr. Ware would therefore have to pay a fine or go to jail. Poor, deluded creatures! Mr. Ware did not have to prove the truth of his assertion, but did bring in a lot of testimony to show that there was corruption in the county board, and that he had therefore good grounds for believing that there was something rotten about the letting of the county printing. And no one who heard the testimony and thus got an insight into the inside workings of the county board, but will be convinced, that the half can never be told, and that for ways that are crooked and deeds that are dark, some of the board are to say the least, peculiar.

One of the rumors which Mr. Ware had heard, and which led him to believe there was something crooked about the letting of the printing, was to the effect that Phil Kaufer, publisher of the Red Lake Falls Gazette, had previous to the letting of the printing, given a note or paper of some kind to Commissioner Demers, in which Kaufer promised to pay Demers $100 on condition that he (Kaufer) should get a share of the county printing for 1894. It is supposed that when Rhinehart and Kirsch called Demers to vote for the bid of the Times, that Demers told him there was $100 in it for him if he would vote some other way, and in proof of this assertion, he produced the Kaufer note. Rhinehart obtained the note from Demers, presumably on the ground that he wanted to read it, but he refused to return it and it is supposed that by threatening Demers with exposure for accepting a bribe, this man Rhinehart "bulled" Demers to vote for the bid of the Times. It was clearly established that on the night previous to the letting of the printing, Demers had agreed to vote with the populist commissioners for a combine of three papers, which included Kaufer's publication, at Red Lake Falls. The populists did not want to take in Kaufer's paper, but Demers insisted that it should be taken in. So when Mr. Rhinehart obtained the proof of Demers criminality, it is not very hard to see how the latter was "induced" to vote for the bid of the Times. After the letting of the printing Rhinehart had shown the papers to several parties in the city, and was exulting over the smart trick he had played on Demers. So there was no lack of evidence to prove the existence of the note and what it contained.

Another point the defense brought out was that the printing was let on partisan grounds, and not because of the circulation of the papers. Mr. Rhinehart admitted that he voted "according to his convictions and politics," and Mr. Kirsch admitted that "politics may have cut some figure in the matter." No efforts had been made to ascertain the circulation of the different papers bidding. Mr. Kirsch knew the "reputed" circulation of some of the papers, but Rhinehart didn't ever know that much. He hadn't the remotest idea—couldn't even give a guess—as to what the circulation of the Times was, but yet he sold one of his reasons for voting for the Times was because that had the largest circulation.

THE TRIAL.

The case was called before Justice Gossman at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. County Attorney Holston and R. J. Montgomery appearing for the plaintiff and H. Stenerson and E. S. Stanton for defendant.

The defense asked for a change of venue, and the case was sent to Justice Spendly. Upon the request of the defendant a jury was also drawn, consisting of the following business men of the city: P. M. Hugdal, C. H. Snake, W. D. Wilson, Chas. Lindell, Anton Erickson, Hans Morberg, L. Larson, T. G. Thompson, J. J. Molstad, W. E. Kelsey, Tom Harris, George Vine.

The copy of the Thief River Falls Press containing the alleged libelous article was offered in evidence.

Mr. Rhinehart testified that he had been county commissioner five years, and during one year and a half of that time had also held the position of government estimator of pine lands on the Chippewa Indian reservation; had been absent from his district most of the timebe held the latter position, but had attended all but two or three meetings of the county board; said his federal duties did not require him to help Bertram count all the time.

On direct examination he swore that the article upon which the suit was brought was false, but upon cross-examination, Mr. Stenerson took the article in pieces, and by questioning Mr. Rhinehart on each portion of it, the latter had to admit that he didn't know of any personal knowledge whether they were true or false. The latter part of the article, where it referred to boodle, was a proposition as to something which was to happen in the future, and of course the witness couldn't swear as to the truth or falsity of something which had not yet transpired. He also admitted that "boodle" might mean money, and that there would therefore be nothing wrong about saying that when the printing was done the printers would have their boodle, and the commissioners would also have their pay—or boodle—for their services on the board, and if they hadn't spent it they would probably have it in their pockets.

To the question: "Suppose two men went playing poker, and one took all the money, wouldn't it be proper to say: 'He took the whole boodle;'" the witness answered that "he didn't know, he never played poker." Witness remembered the letting of the printing; there were three bids received; taking into consideration the circulation and standing of the papers, he was sure the bid of the Tribune was the highest, and the Times the lowest, but in the actual figures on the bids, the JOURNAL was the lowest, and the Times the highest; had taken no means to ascertain the circulation of the papers; was sure the Times had the largest circulation; Mr. Duffy, of the East Grand Forks Courier, told him so; couldn't give an estimate as to what it was; couldn't even guess at it; had no note or agreement signed by Phil Kaufer to U. P. Demers, admitted he had had some sort of a paper, but didn't know a word of the contents. The questions and answers were like this:

Q. Was it anything about money?
A. I don't know.

Q. Was it anything about the county printing? A. I don't know.

Q. Have you got that paper now?
A. No sir.

Q. What did you do with it? A. I haven't got it.

Q. Answer my question, what did you do with it? A. (In a defiant tone) I burned it up.

Q. What did you burn it up for?
A. Because it might cause trouble.

Q. Trouble to whom? A. Trouble in the community, such things sometimes do.

(Here is a man testifying that he had a paper in his possession for some time, and finally burned it up lest it might cause trouble, yet he swears under oath that he didn't know a word of its contents. Wouldn't that make Ananuius grow red with envy?)

He had no recollection of DeMers and Lindem going to his room and of DeMers asking him to show Lindem a paper which he told Lindem would prove that Kirsch, Rhinehart and DeMers had recieved $700 for voting as they did; his memory was very weak on this point and he could not remember anything about it; said he had had a talk with Auditor Webster about the publishing of the delinquent tax notice of redemption, but was sure he had not offered the auditor anything if he would publish them in the East Grand Forks Courier.

Court then adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

Rhinehart resumed the stand. Said he had told McKenzie he would vote according to his conscience and politics. Said Kaufer had not asked to have the note returned, but admitted that he had said: "I'll take care of this paper, it might be dangerous in your hands;" the conversation took place in the office of the county superintendent, and Demers, Kaufer, Rhinehart and the assistant superintendent were in the room; had shown the paper to Mr. Montague and Mr. McGuire; said that coming down from the court house with Kirsch, Lindem, Demers and Rhinehart, Demers had said: "I could have taken $700 and the chairmanship of the board to vote a certain way; he didn't say what way; thought it was from the "other fellows."

C. U. Webster produced the affidavit on file in the auditor's office to show that P. S. ware was the publisher of the Thief River Falls Press.

M. E. Kirsch was next called. Said the article in the Press was false from beginning to end; said there was no such meeting held; no steal committed; contract was let in accordance with his best judgment; no consideration was received, no offer made to any of the commissioners; printing had been let, at higher rates, when asked as to his politics he replied: "Well, I have been democratic;" Demers had "acted" with the democrats, but was elected on the alliance ticket; the other members were populists, and had voted for the populist papers, had given the printing to McKenzie because of the large circulation of the combine McKenzie was in; Times had 2,700 circulation, Spectator and Courier 1,300; admitted that "politics may have cut some figure;" said he had received a gold-headed cane as a present last year after the letting of the printing, and the postmaster had informed him that the cane was put in the post office by Mr. Ericsson, the janitor of the court house; the cane was not gold, but a cheap affair. In regard to the citizens' meeting spoken of, witness was not over the same ground as Rhinehart, with about the same result. Heard Demers speak of $700; thought it was a bluff; had told Demers that he should vote with them (Kirsch and Rhinehart) as they had always staid by him; saw the paper Kaufer had given Demers; didn't know what it contained; heard Rhinehart say he would keep it, as it might cause trouble.

W. E. McKenzie testified that he hadn't paid anything to any of the commissioners for the printing; said he had no note or agreement signed by Phil Kaufer to U. P. Demers; admitted he had had some sort of a paper, but didn't know a word of the contents. The questions and answers were like this:

Q. Was it anything about money?

REED'S GREAT SPECH.

A Brilliant Defense of the Doctrine of Protection.

OPPOSED TO THE WILSON BILL

The Republican Leader Says It Is Distasteful to Both Parties—What Protection Has Done For the American People—The Text of a Marvelous Address.

In this debate, which has extended over many weeks, one remarkable result has already been reached—a result of the deepest importance to this country. That result is that the bill before us is odious to both sides of the house. It meets with favor nowhere and commands the respect of neither party. On this side we believe that while it pretends to be for protection it does not afford it, and on the otherside they believe that while it looks toward free trade it does not accomplish it.

Those who will vote against this bill will do so because it opens our markets to the destructive competition of foreigners, and those who vote for it do it with the reservation that they will instantly devote themselves to a relentless crusade against whatever barriers are left.

Whatever speeches have been made in defense of the measure on either side, whether by gentlemen who were responsible only to their own constituencies or by the gentleman from West Virginia, who ought to have been steadied by his sense of responsibility to his whole country, have, one and all, with but rare exceptions, placed themselves upon incompromisingly, except for temporary purposes, on the side of unrestricted free trade.

THOMAS B. REED.

The Last Word Uttered.

It is evident that there is no ground for that hope entertained by so many moderate men that this bill, as it is, could be a resting place where our manufacturing and productive industries, such as may survive, can establish themselves and have a sure foundation for the future, free from party bickering and party strife. Hence, also, there can be no foundation for that cry so insidiously raised that this bill should be passed at once because something is worse than any bill can possibly be. We see that to pass this bill branches today uncertainty would reign just the same.

This result was inevitable. Although this bill proposes to open to this manufacturers a new era of prosperity and triumph, to be made in the interest of sons of them, the moment it is to be defended on this floor the great bulk of it could not be defended on any other ground than the principles of free trade. Hence in this discussion the precise terms of this proposed act count for nothing, and we are left to the discussion of the principles which underlie the whole question. That question may not be decided here and now upon these principles, but the ultimate decision by the people can have no other foundation.

After this statement it would be entirely natural that a feeling of weariness should come over this audience, for if anything seems to have been discussed until human nature can bear it to no more it is the argument between the fact that the subject is still before the people shows that the last word has not yet been said and that the subject has not yet been attenuated or understood.

Two Trying Ordeals.

During that period of growth which lifted us from a position so low that we actually had human slavery within our borders to our present condition of freedom and prosperity we struggled through a dreadful war which destained one-half of the country and so strained the resources of the other half, both in men and in money, that the Express today is visible every year on our tremendous pension roll, although almost obliterated from our public debt. After the war ceased our prosperity was clouded with a six years' struggle with a disordered currency and the reconstruction of labor and industry in the south. No nation in the world's history ever passed through in so short a time two ordeals so trying and so severe.

In spits of both these misfortunes not only have we studded the country east of the Mississippi all over with mills and workshops, factories and furnaces, covered it with railroads, exploited the oil fields of Pennsylvania, Indiana and Ohio, and turned into light, heat and production the tremendous unseened energy of a thousand mines of coal, but beyond the Mississippi we have built four great transcontinental lines across the Rocky mountains and have driven the great American desert off the maps and off the face of the earth.

Nor have we in any way exhausted the future. The country is 10 times more capable today of further development than it was in 1860. Let me state one this little item, sample of a thousand. Only last year at Runnford, in my own state, was brought under human service a machine which will give to the productive energies of this country 40,000 horsepower for every day in the year. Three hundred and fifty thousand human beings 40,000 horsepower for every day in the year. Three hundred and fifty thousand human beings of power to waste every day in New England alone. Whenever our citizens are rich enough to employ these great resources, my hope is that they will be rich enough to consume their products themselves.

The Country's Great Progress.

So utterly undisputed and so distinctly visible to every human being by this audience have been our growth and progress that this hasty outline is all that is needed to remind you of one great fact—that whatever the future industrial system of this country may be, the past system is a splendid monument to that series of successful statesmen who found the country bankrupt and distracted and left it first on the list of nations.

But we must not leave this matter to our own praises. Let others speak, and above all the citizens of other lands. I name in our great rival, at whose foot American statesmanship in this house now sits.

I have used the words in The Fortnightly Review wherein Mr. J. Stevens Jenes, a British free trader, in December, 1865, declares that "America has for many years enjoyed an amazing degree of prosperity, so much so indeed that, to use the eloquent words of Edmund Burke: 'Generalities which in all other cases are apt to heighten and raise the subject here have a tendency to sink it. Fiction lags after truth, invention is unfruitful and imagination cold and barren.'"

When I read these words, I recalled a scene in this house and said how differently men look at the scene. Indeed!

Here is a cool blooded Englishmen who, in talking of the "vast unreasonable hope"—I use his very words—which his countrymen entertain "that the greatest market in the world and probably in the world's history is once again to be found ly[ing] at the feet of British industry and commerce," declares that "America has for many years enjoyed an amazing degree of prosperity, so much so indeed" that he has to use the words of Burke to say that he cannot even describe it. And yet in this very hall a member of the committee of ways and means, himself a countryman of Edmund Burke, and whose wonderful eloquence moved this assembly as it never was moved before, allowed himself, amid laughter and applause on the Democratic side, "to state the simple prosperity to a proper longuel debauch," from which the country could rescue itself only by the force me of the committee's dilution of the original theorogue. Events somehow almost disconcertion to put the facts over against the figure of speech.

Solid Arguments Needed.

Of course we are not to choose the history of the last 30 years and the principles of 100 years because gentlemen especially afflict with sonorous voices have distributed epithets. We are not going to risk our all upon fragments of ancient platform speeches, upon loud orators and elusive language.

The case must be addressed to us some solid arguments or at least the opinions of wise men who have weapons of their wisdom by the actual test of human life. Surely we are not going to run down to the unknown because political economists bid us do so, while they still leave unproved every principle upon which they found their advice. So long as they cannot agree among themselves on any of their premises they cannot be cited on a body to force our conclusions. To trackless future will we venture unless the prospect of increased prosperous is large enough to justify risk and exposure.

Is there any example in the history of the world of any nations situated like ours that has taken theate to which we are invited?

Some gentlemen perhaps are hastening to say that England affords us the needed example; that we have but to turn to her factory and that she will need by way of examples, just as in the statements of her political economists we shall find all that is necessary for advice, for guidance and instruction. Mr. Speaker, I have looked there, and I am amazed to find how little an example of England can teach.

England when she took down free trade was a workshop wherein was manufactured the raw material of the rest of the world. Her only material she had in abundance, her coal and iron and the invention of the steam engine had developed her manufactures to out of proportion to the wages of her workmen that she was ready for a larger market. At that time the only idea of a larger market was one that had more consumers. The consumers that the markets had to be enlarged by those who were already consumers had not entered into the question because they live as did the carpenter of 1725 that he could live in a cave and live on roots for food. The difference in wages means the difference between $2 and $2.50 is so much a necessity today as the $2 were 30 or 40 years ago.

Still the question of wages is all important as bearing upon the question of consumption. All production depends upon consumption. Who are the consumers? In the old days, when the products of meanufactures were luxuries, the lord and his retainers gladly and her maids were the consumers, a few thousand. Now laborers are the chief consumers are the producers. Longago the laborer consumed only what would keep him alive. Today he and his wife and their children are so immeasurably the most valuable consumers that if the factory is to keep up the wealthy or those whom it is the custom to call upon to make speeches at a settlement's habitation or a moment's doubts.

Unfortunately the gentlemen on the other side have not yet realized the full force of idea that the producers are one class and the consumers another, and they built the whole people. One hundred and fifty thousand workers in woolens—you and I—make that demand compared with 70,000,000 consumers; 200, 000 workers in steel, which we have compared with 70,000,000 consumers; 200,000 workers in cotton, what are they compared with 70,000,000 consumers, and so all through the long list, forgetting that all these people must together make up the whole 70,000,000 themselves.

It no longer that America is filled with workers. There are idle people, but they are fewer here than elsewhere, except now, when we are living under the shadow of the Wilson bill. If those workers are all getting good wages, they are themselves the market, and if the wages are increasing the market is also increasing. It is the fact that in this country all the workers have been getting better wages than elsewhere is the very reason why our products are to be sold in the world and why all the nations of the world are trying to shut us out. We do not appreciate the nature of our market ourselves.

Englishman, $1; American, $1.60.

I hova givan you already the glowing testimony of Englishman who have seen us with their own eyes. Another gentleman, Ely, "Greatest market in the world," "Parasches of the Assignment." These are strong words, but let us see if cold mathematics do not put to shame the fervor of adjectives.

We are nominally 70,000,000 people. That is what we are in round numbers. We are the market for manufactures and choice foods we are nominally 200,000,000 people, equal with the next best nation on the globe. Nor is this difficult to prove. Whenever an Englishman earns $1 an American earns $1.60.

I speak within bounds. Both can get the food that keeps body and soul together and the shelter which the body must have and 60 cents. Take 60 cents from $1, and you have 40 cents. Take the same 60 cents from the $1.60, and you have $1 left, 2½ times as much. That surplus can be spent in other ways, and it is the difference in life clothe and all the comforts of life—in a word, in the purchase of all manufactures. That, makes our population as consumers of products, as compared with the English population, 200,000,000. Their population is $7,000,000 as consumers of goods since which a century ago was more than ours. Ours is now 70,000,000 as against 200,000,000.

If this is our comparison with England, what's the comparison with the rest of the world, whose markets our committee are so eager to have in exchange for our own? Mulhall gives certain statistics which will serve as a rough comparison—that for the page 365 of his Dictionary of Statistics he puts the total yearly products of the manufactures of the world are $4,474,000,000, of which the United States produces $1,443, 000,000.

America Produces a Third.

I do not vouch for one any anybody vouch for these figures, but the proportion of one third to two-thirds nobody can fairly dispute. We produce one-third, and the rest of the world, England inclusive, two-thirds.

The population of the world is 1,500,000, 000, of which we have 70,000,000, which leaves 1,430,000,000 for the rest of mankind. We use all our manufactures or the equivalent of them. Hence we are equal to one-half the whole globe outside of ourselves. England included, and compared as a market with the rest of the world our population is equal to 715,000,000.

I repeat, as compared with England herself as a markets, our people are equivalent to 70,000,000, as compared with the rest of the world, England included, we are equal as a market to 715,000,000.

The question of relative wages are to be met, says the gentlemen from New York (Mr. Cockran), by our superior civilization, and because me of "confessing that civilization at the highest level is incapable of meeting the competition of civilization of the lowest level."

Now, it is a great truth that civilization can successfully meet barbarism, but it does not follow that a civilized race can successfully meet another civilized race. Otherwise I heard this and similar statements about our superiority and therefore inevitable success as the inferior! Survival of the superior! That is not the way the great naturalist put it. "Survival of the fittest" was his expression. Survival of the fittest to survive, not the superior, not the loveliest, not the most intellectual, but the one who fitted best into the surroundings.

The Mill and the Smelt.

Compare the strong built of Bashan with a salt water smelt. Who doubts the superiority of the bulk? Yet if you drop them both into the Atlantic ocean, I will take my chances with the smelt. A little temple, insignificant as a bit of dust in the balance, cannot compare with the domestic fitness of the strong, heavy or power. Yet if both were dropped from a balloon into the air, I would rather be the insignificant one of the two. I would rather be a bird than a bull. Survival of the fittest! We can no longer do slig on the railway, the competitor for what job whom I should fear would be for my friend from New York, but soma child recently from Italy, so newly imported that he had not grown to the average stature of his adopted country.

But is not it a dreadful business to tax people? Not necessarily. Taxes raised for a good purpose—as for a schoolhouse, a road, an army, for payment of pensions—are not public debt and indeed for all the purposes of a free government are actually and literally good. Taxes to build a palace for the king's mistress or to place a favorite queen on a deserted throne would be dreadful and even then not likely, owing to a series of fortunate accidents, to be found utterly to deven the last.

But can you not accomplish anything but oppression by taxes? Oh, yes! The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bland) will tell you that taxation has regulated olejmargarine and can regulate stock sales. At least so he thinks.

"On the question of the constitutionality of the bill," says the gentleman, "I have not been here so long as I have without learning that 'unconstitutionality' and 'unconstitutionality'" on the other side of the chamber are mere phrases, and that differently applied they will both well tell you that taxation has regulated oleomargarine and can regulate stock sales. At least so he thinks.

At least so he thinks.

Assumed as nobody in a hundred years has even asked the question of taxes for or against on that question, it seems hardly worth while to answer it. If the Supreme Court, fresh from the convention, in signing the Constitution, had signed an unconstitutional act, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Turner) and the whole Democratic party are where they were on Washington—a thing not hitharto charged upon them.

Who Pays the Tax?

But do not the people pay the tariff taxes, and do they not go into the pockets of monopolists? Do you believe the consumer pays the tax? Then you believe that it is going to be perfectly frank about that and that somebody has got into somebody else's pocket, and sometimes both. The first thing the foreigner does when a tariff tax is laid is to see if he can get into our market without paying anything. If so, then he will have the whole benefit of the tax. He will put over his margin of profit and see if he can, and in many cases he can, and then he pays his goods in. So far as he does not, the tax is borne by the foreigner.

If the foreigner pays all the tax, then while the duties are in force prices are even later there may be protection or there may not be a margin of profit, but there will be has a margin of profit, but there will be in industrial war, there will be no protection for wages whatever. Then the tariff is not only a slight margin which he cannot advance without reducing the price raised. This is the general rule, but there are many exceptions. He may be put to hard struggle, but he cannot be beaten out of hand. He will have a fighting chance.

There are, however, so many instances where the foreigner pays the tax that there is no wonder that the assertion has been made broadcast. The Bermuda cedar-pencil men appeared before the ways committee to beg for relief from the tax which, for the present law and just after the repeal of its reciprocity act, is a multitudinous witness all along our borders that the foreigner pays the tax. I ventures to say that the lumber tax, lowered by the act of 1894, has all of it gone out of our treasury into Canadian pockets.

It would be an interesting chapter in economic history if we could have by figures the abatement of foreign prices which have followed every increase of the tariff, for it would show what enormous profits have been made out of us by these people who no protection existed.

Having thus shown that even where tariff taxes are paid by the foreigner and the price not raised there may be some protection, let us now take the question whether where the price is raised and the consumer pays the whole tax or a part of it, there is any benefit to our country thereby. Does not the public suffer for the benefit of the few? Not for the benefit of the capitalist, for in the long run your own political economy will show you that protected industries will not obtain any greater remuneration than the unprotected. The same is all they ask for and several is mainly demand.

Protection Establishes Industries.

The public again do not suffer for the sake of the employees of the protected industries, for they get no higher wages than the unprotected. The whole question comes to one as much as the other. Who built the mills of Bull River? Who made the machinery? Who threw the first shovelful and the other consumable wealth which have been created in a million demand? The answer must be, the whole United States. "But," says my question, "if you only distribute this money which was taken from us for the extra price among us all again who paid it, we are no good!" If there were all there was to it, I could still answer that a great many benefits but. But beyond a question this system establishes diversified industries. Nobody can doubt that. Diversified industries call out all the working powers of the world. Soma men are fitted for one thing, some for another.

The only way to utilize all the powers of body and mind in a nation is to have some thing whick suits all. By this means the whole body is employed can be kept employed and the whole kept in health down. A nation which keeps its people employed is in the end sure to show the greatest wealth and wealth. Diversified industries educate the people and give them a broader education than books can give and so help them on the road to greater civilization. We have already seen that greater civilization leads to higher wages, to greater production. In a country of high wages and of great industrial diversity the inventors, for they can save more by their inventions, which are therefore more readily adopted.

We were talking awhile ago about higher wages. The question ultimately comes up. How can these higher wages be got? There is a good many answers to that question. Just think a moment what wages are. They are the measure of consumable wealth. In order to have more consumable wealth you must have an incentive for its creation. You will never be made unless a consumer stands ready. More consumable wealth, however, is not always a question of paying market. This I have already shown and to-day we more purchasers, but purchasers with full purses. Nothing pays for that matter in this country we have both.

Are the Germans of Missouri (Mr. Bland) will tell you that taxation has regulated oleomargarine and can regulate stock sales. At least so he thinks.

"On the question of the constitutionality of the bill," says the gentleman, "I have not been here so long as I have without learning that 'unconstitutionality' and 'unconstitutionality'" on the other side of the chamber are mere phrases, and that differently applied they will both well tell you that taxation has regulated oleomargarine and can regulate stock sales. OUT OF THE NIGHT OR THE JOY OF DEATH

A STORY BY FRANK BARRETT

CHAPTER XLIX.

THE MEETING OF FRIENDS AND FOES.

George Gordon went out to buy himself an English pipe and some English tobacco —easile had given him a rage for everything English—and the little solicitor, with indomitable perseverance in the service of law and order, accompanied him with a whole-filling murmur of "depositions" and "warrants." As soon as they were gone Ivan Dontesmember drew a notebook from his pocket, and opening it pointed to a rough diagram and said:

"There is where you used to live; can you tell me who inhabited the house now?"

Looking close at the drawing and the lettered parts described below it, Mr. Gordon's bald knodwriting, I saw that it represented a ground plan of the pottery, the yard of the brick, Jacob's workshop, and our former dwelling house.

"Nobody lives there now," I replied, "the house is empty."

He gave a nod of satisfaction, closed the notebook, put it back in his pocket, and then, with more geniality than he had yet shown, opened a conversation about my escape from Siberia, which lasted until Gordon and Mr. Pelham returned.

Gordon carried a stout stick he had purchased; Mr. Pelham looked as if the end of the world was within measurable distance.

We went together to London, and after lunching there Gordon and I took a cab to Waterloo, leaving Mr Pelham and Ivan Dontesmember behind us. It was a surprise to us when, at the last moment, Dontesmember left the hotel and said:

"Goodby, George Gordon!"

"Why, you are coming with us, old fellow!" exclaimed Gordon. "You must come to see Tarna."

"No, not now. A death's head is not wonted at your feast. Perhaps I shall come to see you on Monday—perhaps not," he added, dropping Gordon's hand and turning on his own. Oh, it was good to see them filling their pipes from the same pouch, strolling across the smooth grass with their arms linked, puffing out clouds of blue smoke, and still better to hear them joining in a hearty laugh.

"It is the first time I have heard him laugh," said Judith. "His patience has sometimes pained me. His endeavor to find a cheerful outlook in the face of misery never how persistently memories of the past haunted him, how tedious the present moment was. Now you have changed all that."

"I?"

"Yes, you were more to him than sight. The loss of you was the real grief, not the loss of his eyes. That has been borne upon almost as a foreseen calamity—'the chance of war,' as he says. He has always maintained that you would come back. The next room is yours. It was furnished expressly for you, and all that belonged to you in Lambeth is in there. Nothing yet from my little friend?" he asked some times after. I have read his letters to him. He love always been pressed here to him. I felt that. It hurt me sometimes to feel that I could never be so much to him as you were. I am sure than my presence irritated him sometimes, and that he was glad when I left alone. He experienced what was thinking of you. Something in my manner compared unfavorably with his recollection of you. I am afford to tell you all this now, dear. At one time it wounded my pride to suspect it, and I would not have confessed the fact to myself, but it gives me joy to tell you all now."

She left me alone. Tarna tapped at the door and humbly begged to speak to her dear mademoiselle. I wished I could escape also; but I thought the poor old woman would nerve be comforted or cease to beat from there. I went and left herself basenones.

"To think of the indignities, the affronts, the insults I offered you, my dear, my most respected mademoiselle! What a brutal wretch I was! And you are so beautiful! To offer you a place as domestic servant in this house—to take you into my own room when I ought to have led you into the best drawing room; to permit myself to eat at the same table with you, and to offer you the little wine and the remains of food that are only good enough for a fool and a dolt such as I am—though certainly they are better than I deserve. And to think that you had behaved unworthily at the very time when you were risking your life to save my dear master, and, what is more, to believe ill of that dear M. Gordon, who could do no wrong to save his life, God bless him—as droll as ever and as kind! But I am richly punished for it, look you, for I broke three things since lunch and let my milk boil over for the first time in my life. Ah, non Dieu, that I should be subject to this at my age!"

Happily the fear of some further calamity disaster put an end to her sobs and self reproaches, but for a long while after I never passed her without hearing her address herself as a cowed, e pig or some other object of contempt.

George Gordon, going to the window after dinner, exclaimed:

"A glorious night, by Jove! How would it be if we went out for half an hour?"

"Very much so, sir," replied Tarna.

The idea was equally acceptable to Judith and me, and when we had put on our wraps we joined Gordon and Tarna in the garden. Chatting and laughing we strolled down the broad walk in a row, but passing through the gate Tarna and Judith took the lead, and in that order we sauntered along the Wells Row road, Judith, quite unintending to take tha hypath to her favorite seat in the wood.

At the end of the road Gordon stopped to relight his pipe.

"It's like old hex," said he, scratching a vesta. "Do you remember that day when we found there were only two matches left?"

I made no reply, for looking down the road I saw Tarna and Judith, who were a dozen yards or so in advance, suddenly stop.

But he paused in the act of striking it, for with head a well upraised voice saying:

"Tarna—Judith! Why, this is a surprise for me, and I suppose my coming is for you! I thought I might steal a few hours to satisfy my curiosity."

It was Kavanagh. His voice had dropped from a tone of cheerful astonishment to uneasy perplexity, and he added:

"Are anything happened?"

"Coniston," muttered Gordon, catching my hand, in his; "we'll show the villain what happened." And he shook that fine fist at him.

Kavanagh was speaking in a terrible tone of we hurried out; but I could not catch his words. Then we came up and stood before Kavanagh, who, now strong, he had caught a golish stir force in the pale starlight.

"I understand now," he said, with forced composure. "You have come back."

"Yes, come back to call you to account," thundered Gordon. "What have you to say for yourself, you confounded villain?"

Nothing, if you take that tone to me," he replied, tapping the palm of his left hand lightly with his cane to hold in his right. "When you can listen to reason, I shall be glad to justify every act which may seem inscrutable to you now."

"You'll have plenty of scope for your ingenuity in that way when you are in the dock. The lawyers will fight you there; have you have to settle matters with me?"

There was no mistaking what he meant as he threw off his irreverence.

"Is this the meaning," said Kavanagh, closing his left hand tightly on his cane and stepping backs page, "by an attempt to offer violence, the result may be fatal?"

"I am not unprepared to protect myself."

As he spoke he gave the head of his cane a twist, whipped out the rapier to which it was a handle, and throwing aside the stick held the sword in an attitude of defense.

With a cry of terror Judith attempted to interpose herself between Gordon and Kavanagh, but Tarna, who had caught the sound of the steel, forcibly restrained her.

"Let them part, I could neither move nor utter a sound. The long, thin sword was scarcely visible in the dim light. I had heard that Kavanagh was an expert swordsman. It was impossible for Gordon to face him with a stick, and it was impossible that he should close with his adversary without exposing himself to the thrust of that almost unseen weapon.

CHAPTER L.

THE END OF KAVANAGH.

Without a moment's hesitation Gordon threw himself upon his antagonist, striking at his sword arm. The blow aimed was followed by a howl of pain from Kavanagh. I thought Gordon had wounded in jury by some happy accident, but the next moment, as he stepped back, I saw the re-pler hanging down from his right under the left arm. Shifting his stick for an instant, he drew the best weapon out and flung it aside. In that brief space Kavanagh turned and took to his heels, but Gordon pursued and overtook him before he had gone a dozen yards, and a struggle ensued, Kavanagh grappling close to give Gordon's stick less play. But he was no match for Gordon as wrestling, and presently he went over Gordon's shoulder, falling in the road with a thud. He would have been content to lie there, but Gordon dragged him onto his feet, and running him along at each's length thrashed him without mercy until the miserable wretch threw himself down in the road again and shammed unconsciousness.

Gordon declared he was unhurt, spoke scornfully of Kavanagh's reglor and wondered how an old hand could rely on a two-penny-halfpenny sword stick for defense. But when we returned to the house he had gulped down a liberal dose of whisky and said he thought he would "just go up stairs and put himself straight a bit." He was in his room some time and come down in another suit of clothes.

"I've helped myself to a suit of yours," I heard him say to Tarna. "That beastly spit pricked me under the arm and made my togs in a bit of a mess. I couldn't make out how it was I felt wet all down that side."

"We can't afford to let you trifle with yourself," said Tarna "If the wound is serious!"

"Wound? Hang it—it's only a scratch, man! I've stuck a lump of wadding out of your dress coat on the place—it's inside under the arm, don't you know—and I shall be as right as rain after supper."

About the same time the gardener, who had been sent to look after Kavanagh, returned and informed us that the "gentleman was getting on pretty nicely—seemed a little upsetties—kind of knocked out, in a manner of speaking, but he had found his hat and could manage to limp along pretty lively, if we understood what he meant."

What happened to Kavanagh after this was witnessed by William Wright, owner of the kiln bands at the pottery at Lambeth.

At 5 o'clock on that Friday the office was closed as usual. Old Mr. Bell was the last to leave. Before going he went through the works and stopped to chat with a foreman named Wright, who was calling up the brown jars. Mr. Bell noticed that the quantity of fuel used and asked Wright whether he didn't think a cheaper coal would answer the same purpose as those they were burning, and so on. Always on the lookout for means of economizing, Mr. Bell, therefore, before he gave Wright inopence for a night of rest, went through the kiln shed right in his friendly way. Wonderfully nice old gentleman. As 6 o'clock the bell rang, and the men came away from the yard where they crept Wright, whose turn it was to keep the fires up till Stevens came at 2 to relieve him.

About 7, Wright, having coaled up, went to the sida door in Perry street to get a breath of fresh air. While he was standing there coming half a pipe a man briefly of little fellow came up to him and passed the time of day. He had a queer, monkey-ish sort of face, with a shock head of hair, beard, and he wore a fur cap.

"Is Mr. Kavanagh in the works?" he asked.

"No," answered Wright. "He went away this afternoon and won't be back till Monday."

"Can you tell me where I might find him?"

"You'll have to go to Betterford—that's beyond Woking—to find him."

"Woking, that's a long way. Are you sure he is there?"

"Certain, 'cause I had to post the letters to him there as they came in by the afternoon."

"This is very awkward. I'm a potter, and I counted on getting a bit of work."

"You're a Russian, ain't you?"

"Yes. How do you know?"

"Because you talk like the parties who come to the other kilns."

"You work lata here?" said the little man after a pause.

"We knock off at 6. I'm here to fire up Friday's and Saturday with us."

He had to explain the process of salt glazing before the foreigner understood him.

"Well," said Wright, after a little hesitation, "as against the rules to let strangers in here as you're going to be a hand in the works I don't mind."

Wright took him round the kiln and showed him the fire holes; the foreigner looking about, taking notice of everything with his round, deep sunk eyes, and he led him up to the throwing floor, where the foreigner was interested in the potter's wheels and the boards of clay jars ranged the body of the kiln to dry, then Wright took him up the steps onto the setting floor, which is level with the dome of the kilns. The huge kiln here has a circular taper into a funnel passing up through the roof. In one side is an opening about the height of a man and 3 or 4 feet wide, and through this one sees, on a level with the floor, the dome covering the upper part of the kiln in which the pottery is exposed to the flames. In the middle of the dome is an opening through which the flame rises to compare body. William Wright took his visitor to the opening in the side of the kiln and pointed out the holes through which the salt is poured to glaze the earthenware, but not content with this the little foreigner knelt inside, right on the dome of the kiln, and looked down into the inside. Wright says he looked like a demon in a pantomime as he stood within a certain arching distance of the flame, grinning down into the fiery pit below.

"It's better than anything we've got in Russia," he declared when he came out.

"There's nothing more to see; now you'll get down again," said Wright.

But when they reached the throwing floor, nothing would satisfy the foreigner but he must go inside the fire-room to see the warehouse steps leading down to the office.

"Here, come on, mate, you've seen enough," said Wright, who by this time began to suspect that he had not been well to infringe the rules.

At this remark the foreigner followed Wright to the ground floor, and there, down the spiral of iron, my wasstrong upon him. He would go around to look at the fire holes again, and Wright following, the little fellow suddenly darted, lost sight of him on the other side of the coals. Wright looked out and then he'd got in, looked for him high and low, it a lantern in his hand right out into the yard behind Mr. Tarns' house. Went then anywhere. Finally he concluded that being a foreigner (and consequently mad) the little man had just smoked out into Perry street and gone off in that unaccountable way. Anxious to avoid standing a drop of beer for the trouble Wright had taken to explain things nicely to him.

Nothing occurred until just about mid night. When Wright had another surprise as he was breathing the cool air of Perry street. Mr. Kavanagh came down Perry street from the front office. He was by face his coat was torn, his hat broken, his hand thrust into his breast of his left overcoat. Never saw him look anything like it before. William Wright hadn't—wouldn't have known him if he hadn't spoken.

"Where is Mr. Bell? Is he gone?" he asked impatiently.

"Yes, sir, he's come out through the works, and he's no wonderful particular."

"Confound old simpl!" growled Kavanagh, passing him. "Bring a light. I must go down through the warehouse."

Wright lit a candle and lighted the way through the throwing room, the warehouse and the passage leading to the shop and office. There Kavanagh tried to open the door with his key, but found that something fouled the wards of the lock and prevented the key turning. He swore that Mr. Bell had by accident dropped a wet old fool, and giving up the attempt said to Wright:

"You can go. Leave the lantern there. I will come back by the warehouse."

Wright went back and fired up his kiln, wondering how the governor, always so exact and punctual, had fallen into that hatred condition, and what on earth he had been doing in the office at that hour. What ever did he want there?

He had just banked up the last fire hole when he thought he heard a cry—coming faintly in the distance. "Wright! Wright!" He stood still to listen, and heard in a second doubt the cry repeated—"Wright! Help!"—in a shrill scale of supplication and terror, and it was the governor's voice.

He answered and ran up stairs.

The door was crossing the throwing room Kavanagh rushed out of the darkness from the warehouse and came on with a bounding leap of breath. He had a stone jar in his hand which he had caught up for defense, and he looked back into the darkness, and round him with wild terror, his face white as a sheet of paper.

"Do you see him?" he gasped.

"Who, sir?" asked Wright.

"A man with a red beard and a bald head."

"No, sir."

"Lay hold of that jar. If you see him, fling it at his head. Quick!"

Wright armed himself with a jar from an assortment of self defense, but not being a man of nerve, he was glad to see that Mr. Bell which he had caught up for defense, and he looked back into the darkness, and round him with wild terror, his face white as a sheet of paper.

"Do you see him?" he gasped.

"Who, sir?" asked Wright.

"A man with a red beard and a bald head."

"No, sir."

"Lay hold of that jar. If you see him, fling it at his head. Quick!"

Wright armed himself with a jar from an assortment of self defense, but not being a man of nerve, he was glad to see that Mr. Bell

PERSONAL VS. PARTY POLITICS.

In a little more than five weeks from date, the citizens will be called upon to elect a set of officers to administer the affairs of the city for another year, and a few words in regard to the spring election will therefore be timely just now.

When a city has reached a certain size in population and commercial importance, when the government of its affairs has become a grave responsibility, it is generally conceded that the time has arrived when some political party—and not an individual—should be made responsible for its government. When a party is made responsible in this way and a set of officers elected on partisan grounds, then every member of that party feels individually responsible for the actions of those officers and is going to require of them a strict performance of their duties.

Aside from this aspect of the matter, there is a dislike among the people to "personal" campaigns, where there is no issue at stake, no line of policy named, no pledges made to the people, and no party held responsible. This sort of guerrilla politics is productive only of bitter feelings. Among our friends and neighbors, creates factions among the people, hurts the business interests of those taking part in the campaign, and has a demoralizing effect generally, as a "personal" campaign generally descends to a mud-slinging conflict.

The question arises now: Has Crookston reached a stage where party instead of personal politics should be the order of the day? The JOURNAL believes it has and would like to see party lines drawn hereafter. To our republican friends we would say, put a ticket in the field, put good men on that ticket, work for it and stand by it to the end. And whether you win or lose, the result will be more satisfactory, that a non-partisan, wishy-washy go-as-you-please, guerrilla campaign that can be carried on under the head of "citizens' ticket" "people's ticket" and the like. Put up a ticket regardless of what any other party may do. And remember that the victorious party cannot long retain its majority in the city if they do not give us a good administration. And the masses of the people will be satisfied with a good administration from any party.

THE WARE CASE.

Lack of time this week prevents us from giving an extended criticism of this case. We have printed as much of the testimony as we could, so that the people can judge for themselves as to the merits of the case.

The political trend of events seem to indicate early conventions by all parties. This is as it should be.

The illustrated edition issued by the Minneapolis Times during the editorial convention does credit to that always enterprising sheet.

We have reason to suppose that President J. J. Hill, of the Great Northern road expects an adverse report from the railroad commission in the rate case.

MANY protests against the confirmation of J. Adam Bede as marshall of Minnesota have reached Washington, and it is possible the senate may refuse to confirm his appointment.

GOV. MCKINLEY, of Ohio, is to be in Minneapolis on March 8th, and will speak to the people from a political standpoint. It is probable that he will be greeted by one of the largest audiences that ever greeted a speaker in this state. Everybody likes to hear the great protectionist.

NOW comes Galusha A. Grow, republican candidate for congress, man-at-large for Pennsylvania, with a larger majority than was ever before given in this state; he has a plurality of over 160,000. Talk about change of sentiment. How is this for a change?

IT would seem that justice is not dead yet. John Y. McKane, the democratic boss of Gravesend, N. Y., has been convicted of fraud at the last election and was on Monday sentenced to six years in the penitentiary at Sing Sing. A new trial was asked for and denied and thus another democrat will be provided with a six year's job with which the civil service rules will cut no figure. McKane was a bright and shining light in the democratic ranks in New York.

THAT the city of Minneapolis is a royal spendthrift has been shown conclusively by the manner in which she provided for the G. A. R. state encampment and the State Editorial Association meeting last week. She virtually surrendered the keys of the city—nothing was too good for the boys and all were unde to feel their welcome, and all who partook of her generous hospitality will be more than ready to go again should the opportunity present itself. "Best time I ever had," is the universal verdict.

AND now the faithful are kicking themselves hard because Grover has appointed Adam Bede U. S. marshall. Bede is merely but a young newspaper man, and not one of the old stagers and therefore has hardly a right to live—much less receive a fat government appointment. Loud and deep are the curses that are said and vigorous efforts will be made to induce Grover to reconsider, or the senate fail to confirm, or anything to prevent this dire calamity. They say Grover may be a good fisherman but as a hunter he is not in it. If he don't know how to drive A. Bede better than that.

Of P. J. McGuire, the Graceville Transcript truly says:

"Four years ago Adolph Behrman was elected state auditor by a fusion between the Democrats and Farmers' Alliance, defeating P. J. McGuire, the Republican candidate. Now Mr. McGuire was one of the ablest men on the ticket and received as many votes as did the other candidates on the ticket who were elected. It is conceded that these are entitled to a second term who had not served notice, and in view of the extraordinary circumstances which led to Mr. McGuire's defeat, we are decidedly in favor of allowing him a chance to vindicate himself by again tendering him the nomination. We have not consulted Mr. McGuire and know nothing of his wishes in the matter, but feel that he is entitled to recognition by the Republican state convention if he cannot be elected."

The Ada Index speaks as follows about the Dalen's project for a new land office district:

"The Red River Dalen wants a new land district formed out of Beltrami, Cass, Itasca and Hubbard counties. A better idea would be to annex certain territory to the Crookston district and move the Bemidji office about a hundred miles further north, so it would be within a reasonable distance of the new one."

Speaking of Ira C. Clark, who was foreman on the T. and M. Aaron Cooke, in Fairfax last summer, the McIntosh Times says:

"Ira C. Clark, engineer, I. C. Clark, returned from Beltrami county Monday, and reports that, in company with Geo. and T. and Maud, he succeeded in cornering four black bears in one hole. They had quite a time with the bears before they finally succeeded in subduing them, but the prize was well worth the winning. They also shot two wolves and a silver gray fox before reaching camp."

Protect All or None.

It is proposed by the advocates of free trade to reduce the revenue of the government by $75,000,000 by lowering the harrier between the cheap labor of Europe and the well paid labor of the United States. Labor has made America and owns it. Any change in our fiscal policy should be made with a view to protecting and stimulating the labor of this country.

The removal of $75,000,000 of customs duties would have an opposite effect. It would close up mines without reducing the wages of labor to the low level of foreign wages, and without the destruction of flourishing industries, which now give plenty and comfort to millions of households. It would make the millions of mines employed in the manufactories competing producers instead of buyer of food and thus bring ruin upon on farmers.

The American policy of protection must either be sustained or abolished. There can be no compromise. A part of the protective labor of the country cannot be selected for destruction and a part left. The policy which has protected our metal industries and given us cheap iron and steel and thus established textile mills and given us cheap clothing has likewise developed our mines and increased our duties. It has also, in the words of Jefferson, "placed manufacture by the side of our farmers and given them the incalculable benefits of home markets."

Transfer the mining of coal to Nova Scotia and of iron ore to Spain and Cuba, and hundreds of thousands of American miners would be compelled to travel into other occupations or starve. Under protection the output of all our products has largely increased, and the price of our products has been greatly cheapened.—Springfield (Mass.) Union.

SOME NUTS TO CRACK.

PROBLEMS IN AD VALOREMS THAT AWAIT SOLUTION.

Questions For Professor Wilson to Exercise His Grey Matter On—Perhaps His Mathematical Mind Can Enlighten an Anxious Public.

You may have the same amount of ad valorem duty this year as last, and you may import the same quantity of goods subject to that duty, and you may have an increase of revenues as follows:

If a ton of iron cost $30 in England last year and the ad valorem duty was 25 per cent, the duty would be $12.50. If iron costs $100 a ton this year in England and the ad valorem duty is 50 per cent the duty would be $25, or 100 per cent more than last year.

You may have the same amount of ad valorem duty this year that you had last, and you may import the same quantity of goods, and yet have an diction of revenue as follows:

If iron cost $100 a ton in England last year and the ad valorem duty was 25 per cent, the duty would be $25, but if iron costs $50 per ton in England this year, with an ad valorem duty of 25 per cent, the duty would be only $12.50, or 50 per cent less than last year.

You may reduce the ad valorem duty this year below that of last year and still reduce the revenue as follows:

If iron cost $100 per ton in England last year, and if the ad valorem duty was 25 per cent and you should import one ton, the duty would be $25. Now, if you should reduce the ad valorem duty to 12½ per cent, or 50 per cent less than last year, and should import one ton of iron at $100 per ton, the duty would be $12.50, or 50 per cent less than last year.

You may reduce the ad valorem duty this year below that of last year, and you may increase the revenue as follows:

If iron cost $30 per ton in England last year, and if the ad valorem duty was 25 per cent and you should import one ton, the duty would be $25. Now, if you should reduce the ad valorem duty to 10 per cent, or 60 per cent less than last year, and you should import two tons of iron at $100 per ton, the duty would be $20, or 100 per cent more than last year.

You may increase the ad valorem duty this year over that of last year and still reduce the revenue as follows:

If iron cost $100 per ton in England last year, and if the ad valorem duty was 25 per cent and you should import one ton, the duty would be $25. If you increase the ad valorem duty to 100 per cent, or 300 per cent greater than last year, and you should importone ton of iron at $100 per ton, the duty would be $100, or 300 per cent greater than last year.

You may reduce the ad valorem duty this year and still have the same revenue as follows:

If iron was $100 per ton in England last year and the ad valorem duty was 25 per cent and you import one ton, the duty would be $25. If iron this year should cost $50 per ton in England and you should import two tons, the duty would be $25.

You may increase the ad valorem duty this year over that of last year and still have the same revenue as follows:

If iron cost $100 per ton in England last year and the ad valorem duty was 25 per cent, the duty would be $25. But if iron should cost $50 per ton in England this year and the ad valorem duty was raised to 50 per cent, or 100 per cent more than last year, and you should import one ton, the duty would be $25.

The foregoing problems are respectfully submitted for Professor Wilson to state upon which particular basis he has gained the information that the receipts of custom duties under his tariff will be $75,797,784.06 less than the duties received in 1893. The solution of this problem will do much to solve the other problem whether American factories must be permanently closed and American labor remain permanently idle. Mathematical accuracy is essential, as the professor evidently appreciates, having worked his problem out in minute detail down to the very cents. The happy solution of this question may also definitely determine whether a X read statesman —s X eyed politician or whether X —|- X = 0.

Their Will Be Done.

"Windy" Wilson, bead their prayer,
Thos and Grover, prompters deft,
Take good advice and have a care,
Let the people's will be done.

"Windy" Wilson, let them work,
That's a thing they do not shirk,
Let labor be where tillers lurk,
Let the people's will be done.

They love McKinley more than thee
For his will knows no breeze;
Ad valorems must not be,
Let the people's will be done.

Bolster barons must be slain;
Thos, their chief, the country's bane,
Never raise the head again,
Till the people's will be done.

Rob the many relate thos,
Call to mind Chicago's vow,
Hear the hungry cheer us now,
Let the people's will be done.

Lead them through the wilderness,
Relieve them from their distress,
Thou hast caused this bitterness,
Let the people's will be done.

Avoid protection's rugged edge,
"Windy" Wilson, thou shouldst hedge,
Head the Windy City rabble,
Let the people's will be done.

Rubber barons must be on guilt,
Trouble Wilson must be spilt,
That his tariff bill is 8,
The people's will it must be done.

need not answer anything about that paper on the ground that it incriminates you, if you so choose. A. I decline to answer anything in relation to that paper. Cross-examination. "There were many people at the Montreal house that morning," I would see Kirsch, Blanchart or McKenzie.

H. E. Ives sworn: Am publisher of the St. Hilaire Spectator. It is a legal paper having 340 circulation; don't know how much more I do not know; not to be exact.

O. A. Thorson sworn: Lives at East Grand Forks; was postmaster there up to November 3th '93. The weekly issue of the East Grand Forks Courier weighed 40 pounds.

Judge Montague was here sworn and figured out that this would make about 440 copies of the Courier issued weekly.

Louis Moeckel sworn: Am working for S. A. Wallace, I worked as pressman on JOURNAL, Times and Courier in this city. I worked about five months in the JOURNAL office; was "devil" in the JOURNAL office; that is all the dirty work; I ran the press; it took 1½ to 1¾ hours to run the edition when everything ran smoothly; don't know how many copies were printed; it was some less than a bundle; I could not say if there was more of the Times than the JOURNAL but I should think a few more. I worked for the JOURNAL two years ago, in May, 1892.

W. B. McKenzie recalled: A bundle of print contains 2 reams, 40 quires.

P. S. Ware sworn: Live at Thief River Falls; am defendant in this case; was foreman in the Crookston Times office; at that time the circulation of the Times was between 900 and 900 copies; wrote the article upon which this suit was brought; was interested in it from the standpoint of a tax-payer and being in the newspaper business which requires posting my readers and the public on local questions; the article was written for the purpose of informing my readers and the public as to the county printing matter; saw another article in Crookston Times saying that a meeting had been called to investigate the county printing matter; knew that the county printing matter was awarded to the highest bidder; had no malice toward Blanchart and Kirsch; have examined the bill of Cooke & Hammond, also that of McKenzie, and find that the bill of Cooke & Hammond is the lowest; according to the financial statement for that year and the bids this year the Times would get $500 less than under the financial statement. The JOURNAL would have received under its bid for the same work $312. Under the Times bid this year the delinquent tax list will cost $448: under the JOURNAL'S bid it would have cost $236; asto cost of printing proceedings I have computed the proceedings of the second meeting of the board for this year, and, if they have 13 meetings this year, which they must have according to law, the Times will get $325; for the same work the JOURNAL would get $113.75, or for the increase in cost to the county of these two bids would be $923.25; on these three items alone; on job work the JOURNAL'S bid is ten per cent lower than the Times. Mr. McKenzie had the county printing once before when I was employed in his office. I remember that once before the Times was let, he told me he was sure he would get it as "he had it fixed;" I asked him how he knew? He said: "You will see?" Well, he did get it and I asked him how he managed it. I always stand in with Mike Kirsch; said he always "did something for Mike, of course I understood what that meant; I said: "How much did you have to put up to Mike? "About one hundred he said;" We had that conversation in front of the office on the street; I do not know who else went to see at Fisher but he said: "You remember that time I went to Fisher? I fixed the county printing there." A rigid cross-examination failed to alter this testimony one iota.

After the attorneys had made their pleas the jury retired, and in five minutes returned a verdict of "Not Guilty."

NOTES.

Mr. Ware successfully punctured McKenzie's circulation bubble. When McKenzie was put upon the stand he testified that he did not know the circulation of the Times, (his own paper). This was a remarkable statement coming from a man who looks carefully after every detail of his business. So a subpoena was issued for the pressman of the Times and a constable instructed to bring him into court immediately without allowing him to converse with anyone. The pressman was sworn and testified that he printed 900 copies of the Weekly Times each week.

Kirsch testified that the reputed circulation of the Times was 2700. Now the question is, where did Mike get his information?

The people of the fifth commissioner district must feel proud of their representative on the board.

The prosecution sought to make Demers the scapegoat of the whole business. Of course a man who is not master of his own actions should never be a member of a county board. But Demers is not any worse than Kirsch and Blanchart, who control him. Had the influence of Kirsch and Blanchart over him been for good he would not be in the power of those two worthies.

Messrs. Stoeserson and Stanton are entitled to much praise for the defense in this case as though it had been a murder trial. Ware had the sympathy of the people.

Attorney Steenerson said in his argument that Ware had not only made a statement, but he had proved it.

In his opening address to the jury Attorney Stanton roasted Messrs. Blanchart, Kirsch and Demers to a finish.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Tuesday, Feb. 13.

The house judiciary committee has favorably reported a resolution for the investigation of Judge Jenkins.

In the senate Judge Gray for his speech in defense of the president's Hawaiian policy. He admitted at its close that the president had abandoned all attempts at restoration of the queen.

Senator Berry of Arkansas called up the house bill to compel the Rock Island road to construct a road to Enid and Round Pond, O. T. It was debated two hours without result.

The house spent the day in debate on the Bland seigniorage bill, the principal speeches being those of Mr. Morrison of Texas, in favor of the measure, and by Messrs. of New York, in opposition. It may require a special order to reach a vote on the bill.

Wednesday, Feb. 14.

The entire time of the senate was consumed in the discussion of the house bill to compel the Rock Island Railroad company to stop its trains at the new towns of Enid and Round Pond, in the Indian Territory. No result was reached.

Bland's seigniorage bill was discussed in the house to the exclusion of other business.

Thursday, Feb. 15.

The Bland bill again occupied the time of the house.

In the senate a vote on the bill to compel the Rock Island road to stop its trains at certain points in Oklahoma was reached. The vote was a tie. Vice President Stevenson voted aye, thus passing the measure.

Representative Pickler has secured a favorable report on the Crow Creek damage claim from the committee on public lands.

Friday, Feb. 16.

The senate spent most of the day in secret session on the Hawaiian commission.

The house was without a quorum on the Bland bill, the opponents of the measure filibustering.

Saturday, Feb. 17.

The senate was not in session.

The house spent another day on the Bland bill without result, the filibustering being continued on a demand for the previous question on fixing a time for a vote.

Monday, Feb. 19.

The senate spent another day in vain endeavor to get a quorum to vote on the Bland seigniorage bill. At the close of the session a Democratic caucus was held.

The senate debated the Hawaiian question and transacted routine business in open session. In executive session the Hawaiian treaty was made an executive matter.

Here Is the Screw Applied!

Tariff Tinker Wilson has insinuated that vague rumors are being "forced" to sign the petitions that are pouring into congress against his bill of destruction. We are afraid that the coercion screw applied from the White House to the chairman of the ways and means committee must have affected that gentleman's ideas of fair play. This is a free country, and people are not generally "forced" to do things against their will.

There are more than 60,000,000 of people who now see things differently to the smaller number of less than 5,000,000 with whom the worthy chairman is in the minority. But there are exceptions to every rule, as the president has fully proved during the last nine months, when he "forced" congress and his executive officials to do his bidding. These are the only instances of "force" that have been used under the present administration, except in the later effort to thrust upon the country a "force" bill.

The Best Medicine.

J. O. WILSON, Contractor and Builder, Sulphur Springs, Texas, thus speaks of Ayer's Pills:

"Ayer's Pills are the best medicine I ever tried; and, in my judgment, no better general remedy could be devised. I have used them in my family and recommended them to my friends and employes for more than twenty years. To my certain knowledge, many cases of the following complaints have been completely and by the use of Ayer's Pills alone: Third day chills, dumb ague, bilious fever, sick headache, rheumatism, fever, dyspepsia, constipation, and bard colds. I know that a moderate use of Ayer's Pills, continued for a few days or weeks, as the nature of the complaint required, would be found an absolute cure for the disorders I have named above."

"I have been selling medicine for eight years, and I can safely say that Ayer's Pills give better satisfaction than any other Pill I ever sold."—J. J. Perry, Southylania C. H., Va.

AYER'S PILLS

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Every Dose Effective

Mr Albert Favorite of Kansas City, Kan., wishes to give our readers the benefit of his experience with colds. He says: "I contracted a cold early last spring that settled on my lungs, and had hardly recovered from it when I caught another that hung on all summer and left me with a hacking cough which I thought I would never get rid of. I had used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy some fourteen years ago with much success, and concluded to try it again. When I had got through with one bottle my cough had left me, and I am not suffered from a cough or cold since. I have recommended it to others, and all who speak, use of my 50 cent bottles for sale by S. A. Walker.

The St. Paul Daily News says: "Senator Buckhardt, of Wabasha, has withdrawn his candidate for state treasurer. A Republican state paper says of him that should he decide to stay his name must not enter the race. He would certainly be a most formidable opponent. If nominated he certainly would be elected and there would be a man at the head of the state treasury department whose honor and integrity not a solitary word could be said by even the most bitter opponent. Every man who knows Henry Buckhardt knows him to be a scrupulously honest, upright man."

People troubled with sick and nervous headaches will find a most efficacious remedy in Ayer's Cathartic Pills. They strengthen the stomach, stimulate the liver, restore healthy action to the digestive organs, and thus afford speedy and permanent relief.

THE COUNTY BOARD.

Proceedings of the Last Meeting. Taxes Abated.

The board met in special session February 7th, all members present.

A petition was presented from residents of Higdem township, asking that the town be divided, and the portion set apart be called Lowell township. The petition was granted, and the first town meetings in the towns so divided will be held on February 24th—in Higdem at the Guern schoolhouse, and in Esther at the Anderson schoolhouse.

Adolph Klinger's assessments of credits in Lowell township were ordered cancelled.

The bill of A. J. Stocsee for $75 for boarding jurors, which was allowed at previous meeting at $38.50 was reconsidered, and paid in full.

It was resolved to appropriate $1,040 to pay W. F. Porter & Co. for the steam heating fixtures in the court house, provided said Porter & Co., shall put in such additional radiators as shall be necessary to heat the house properly.

T. B. Walker's assessment on saw mill property was reduced to $85,000.

E. J. Locken's assessment on goods and merchandise in Crookston, was reduced to $600.

The bills of R. J. Montagne for services as attorney on behalf of the county, in the case of the JOURNAL against the county was allowed at $80.80, Messrs. Linden and Oppegaard voting in the negative on the ground that the expense was unnecessarily incurred.

The county road and bridge committee was instructed to investigate the Red Lake Falls bridge, with power to act.

The county auditing committee submitted the following report of the county treasurer:

Mallory and Marsh Matters

Mr. Thomas Nisbet and jolly Jack Goodwin, visited the Queen city on Monday on business.

Mrs. James Shanks and daughter Norah, are down with the prevailing malady.

Mrs. Nisbet Sr. is still on the sick list, but is slightly improving.

John Hannah, who was very low with typhoid fever is getting better, and it is hoped will soon be out of danger.

Miss Maggie and Belle Fleming, the young daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fleming have been very sick with fever, but are getting on nicely now.

All the rest of the sick people here are getting nicely.

James S. Sullivan, of East Grand Forks came down from there Saturday evening, to attend the meeting of the Polk County Fair association directors, of which Mr. Sullivan is a member. We consider this a valuable choice of the stockholders in electing Mr. S. as one of the board as he is interested in good stock. He took first premium at the last summer's fair with his stylish, French coach horse, which was admired by all who saw him. Mr. S. will work for the interests of the fair in his section of the country who have the stock to show.

In District Court.

No cases tried on Thursday.

On Friday the case of Andrew Stover vs Robt. Causey was brought before the court. This is an action for ejectment of defendant from plaintiff's land, S. E. ¼ sec. 34, township 152, range 142. The case was tried and submitted.

The case of Amelia Dickman vs. Tobias Valeur was next tried and submitted. This is an action in replevin. It appears that plaintiff owned a house which stood on a piece of contested land S. E. ¼ section 18, township 151. The defendant moved the house to his own land and the plaintiff replevined it. She now sues to ascertain who is the rightful owner of the house.

A decision was rendered in the cases of W. E. McKenzie vs Polk County. One was a case to recover profits amounting to $53 from printing given to other parties last year, plaintiff claiming under his contract with the defendant that he should have been given his portion of the printing. This was decided in favor of plaintiff.

The second case was appealed by the county, it being a matter of allowing plaintiff certain bills for printing. This was decided in favor of plaintiff.

WORLDS' FAIR FINANCES.

The Minnesota Commission Receives Reports From Its Officers.

ST. PAUL, Feb. 15.—The board of world's fair commissioners met at the capitol, at which session reports of the officers and the woman's auxilliary were submitted. The report of Superintendent Hunt, which was embodied in a pamphlet form, also contains a review by Secretary Reeve, and a summary of the financial transactions by Treasurer Furlong. The report recites the work performed in securing pledges for the additional $100,000, and the work done at the state building during the year. The several departments are taken up seriatim, and the report concludes a list of the exhibitors and the prizes secured. On fine art 1 persons received awards, and out of the 158 entries of drawings were given prizes. Out of the 161 entries in the dairy department 98 received prizes, while the percentage of prizes captured on horses from Minnesota was 91, and cattle, 97.

Forty-three third prizes were captured by Minnesota in the liberal arts department. The forestry exhibit received special mention for points of excellence.

Treasurer Furlong gave the summary of his report as follows: Total receipts, $100,771.36; total disbursements, $89,947.13; balance, cash on hand, $10,794.94.

The report of the treasurer of the woman's auxiliary shows $6,000 received from the commission, $6,851.81 disbursed and a balance on hand of $468.19.

Hood's Gives Health and Strength to the Aged

Mrs. Benjamin Sellers

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen:—I think Hood's Sarsaparilla has no equal. It has been used in our family a good many years. My mother, Mrs. Benjamin Sellers, came here from New England thirteen years ago, and has not been in good health for a long time. Every Spring she has had an that she had to stay in bed. She suffered from indigestion; in fact could hardly eat anything. She began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it gave her such good relief that she has not been sick in bed since. She is now 82 years old, and still takes Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it does her good. Yours truly, J. H. ZABEL, Bidwell Ave., Wankesha, Wisconsin.

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla CURES

RAISING WILLOW FOR THE MARKET.

A Crop Which Needs Harvesting but Once Every Four Years.

In a beautiful sweep of lowland north of Salvale station on the Northern Central railroad and about nine miles from Baltimore there is a peculiar farm. It is peculiar in that it renders to its owner and tiller but one crop in four years, and that a crop of willow shoots. The farmer, Antone Spath, came from Frankfort, Germany, many years ago, and after erecting himself a comfortable stone house, which still stands in the midst of a picturesque clump of willows, at the end of the little valley, set about planting the first crop of willow shoots. Every year since he has gone on planting row after row until the valley has become covered with them. Spath had learned the art of weaving willow ware in his boyhood days by the shores of the Rein river, and as fast as his little plantation grew he gathered the shoots, stripped them of their green covering, and after drying them wove baskets of every conceivable form and size.

"It seems rather peculiar work in this country," said the willow farmer, speaking of his business, "but in all parts of Europe, especially in the German provinces, it is a very common thing to find willow plantations and willow weavers, for there willow is used in many forms and for a greater number of purposes than I find it used in this country. In Germany and France willow is employed in making at least 20 different kinds of bird cages, while in American metal is used—brass or iron wire—and different woods. Among the best baskets in European countries cradles, woven by German workers, may be found constructed entirely of willow. These there are a hundred and one shapes of marketing baskets, baskets used by milliners and laundresses, baskets and panniers to be carried upon the backs of men and horses for hauling fish and fowl. In preparing the willow for the weaving we plant the slips in long rows parallel with a running stream of water and cut them when they have attained four years of growth. The cutting time is early in the spring before the sap is done running, and after tying them in bundles they are placed in ponds of water to keep them in a green state until ready for stripping. Stripping the willow is accomplished by drawing the shoots through steel bars with two heavy iron stanchions, whose edges peel the light green bark from the white heart, and then, after drying or curing them upon long racks, we have got the willow in a form for the weaver. It was many years after I planted my farm with willow before any one thought of imitating my example, but now there are several other plantations located upon the Washington and Annapolis roads, and though you may find quite as many lazars and is without success, marks of aspiration or spaces between the rows. Its probable date is the latter part of the sixth century. As early as 1026 it is known to have been in the library of the patriarch of Alexandria. It was sent to England as a present to Charles I by Cyrillus Lycaris in 1628 and is now in the British museum.—St. Louis Republic.

PROBATE NOTICE.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk—ss. In Probate Court. Special term, February 14th, 1894.

In the matter of the estate of Carl Hansen, deceased

On receiving and filing the petition of Louisa Hansen, of the town of King of the county of Polk, representing among other things that Carl Hansen late of the County of Polk, in the State of Minnesota, on the 15th day of May, A. D. 1893, at the county of Polk did make his last will and testament of said county and state within the county and state aforesaid, and that the said petitioner is the widow of said deceased and prays for the probate of said will and for the issuance of letters testamentary thereon to her.

It is further ordered, that said petition be heard before said court, on Monday, the 19th day of March, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the Probate office, in the City of Crookston, in said county.

Ordered further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three consecutive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, Polk County, Minn.

Dated at Crookston the 14th day of February, A. D. 1894.

By the court,

C. H. BENSON,

STEAM PIPE BURST.

TERRIBLE DISASTER ON THE GERMAN WARSHIP BRANDENBERG.

Nearly Forty Men Were Instantly Killed. A Ship Went Down on the Central American Coast With Sixty Men—Not One Left to Tell of the Disaster.

KIEL, Feb. 21.—A terrible accident occurred on board the German ironclad Brandenburg near Stollergrund, by which 39 men were killed and 9 injured. The big vessel for some time past has been in Kieler Furth, Germany, undergoing various improvements. To get the ironclad in first class condition for the test to be held during the day, 40 artificers were sent aboard from the imperial dockyard. While 11 of these artificers were in the engine room, the main steam pipe of the starboard engine exploded. Panic temporarily spread among the crew, but, after a moment's hesitation, every effort was put forth to men in the engine room. It was found that of the 11 artificers all but one had been killed. The man who escaped owed his preservation to the fact that at the moment the explosion he was standing on a ladder near the top of the room. His companions were all on the floor of the room. When the steam had cleared away and the panic had subsided, a further search was made among the crew for the dead and injured. It was then discovered that 39 men in all had been killed and nine injured. The list includes the 10 dead artificers. Thirty-seven of the men were killed instantly. Two of the wounded died a short while after receiving their injuries.

WENT TO THE BOTTOM.

Sixty Men Lost by the Sinking of a Tug Off Central America.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 21.—A special to The Commercial Gazette from New Orleans says: The rumor prevailing here that the steamer Millard, belonging to the Nicaragua Navigation company, having on board 60 men, had been lost off the Nicaragua coast a week ago, has been confirmed. Not a man of those on board the vessel survived to tell the story.

FOURTEEN DROWNED.

Steamer Alert Wrecked in a Storm on the Pacific.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 17.—Sydney advices say that the iron steamer Alert, while on her voyage from Port Albert to Melbourne recently, sank in a terrible gale, and the of 15 men aboard, but one managed to reach land to tell the story of the disaster. Panting, the cook, managed to get hold of a cabin door, and clung to it all through the night. When day was breaking he touched sandy bottom, staggered a few steps up the beach and fell unconscious, remembering nothing more until he saw his rescuers around him.

MINNESOTA VETERANS.

Annual Encampment to Session at Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Feb. 14.—The annual encampment of the G. A. R. of the Department of Minnesota opened during the morning session this hall. Before the hour of assembling, which was 10 o'clock, most of the delegates met at headquarters in the Lumber Exchange, whence the line of march was taken up for the hall, the rank and file of the delegates escorting the department commander and staff, led by a drum corps and guard of honor from the Minneapolis posts.

The encampment was called to order promptly on the hour by commander John Day Smith, after prayer was offered by the department chaplain, Rev. Bilthe. Commander Smith then delivered his annual address. The encampment is one of the largest ever held in the state.

Most of the afternoon session was consumed with the reports of officers, commencing with A. A. G. Jacob Mertz. This showed the membership to be 8,140 and 183 posts in good standing. The loss of posts has been 24, while 5 new posts have been organized.

The assistant quartermaster general, E. N. Leavens of Faribault, presented his annual report, the financial exhibit of the department, as follows: Cash received from previous assistant quartermaster general $6,391.36; receipts, interest etc., $145.60; from sales of supplies, $621.27; from per capita tax, $6,264; post charters, $100; aggregate, $6,933.87. Disbursements—For supplies, $219.50; national tax, $261; printing, $470.50; soldiers' home, $100; national encampment expenses, $949; sundries, $203.85; mileage, $263.76; salaries, $1,178.04; balance of encampment expenses, $661.82; balance on hand, $5,111.47.

The annual election of officers occurred at 11 o'clock a. m. General John H. Mullen withdrew as a candidate and Captain Samuel R. Van Zant was nominated for the office of commander-in-chief, and a motion to make his election unanimous prevailed. A. H. Reed of Glencoe was elected senior vice commander.

THE RUSSIAN THISTLE.

Some of the Testimony Before the House Agricultural Committee.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—Representatives of the farming interests of Minnesota, North Dakota and other Northwestern states, have appeared before the house committee on agriculture to offer up prompt and vigorous action against the Russian thistle.

North Dakota Urges Prompt Action.

Governor Shortridge of North Dakota stated that the weed had appeared in his state only a few years ago, and had now spread over a large portion of the state. It grows to a height of three feet, completely choking out grain. Unless was could be promptly and successfully waged against this weed many farmers might be compelled to abandon their lands. State legislation had been directed against it for its destruction by town and county agencies, but this proved insufficient, and a liberal appropriation should be given by congress for a more extensive effort to free the land from the plants.

South Dakota Puts in a Word.

Governor Sheldon of South Dakota stated in a letter that Russian thistles had existed several years on farms in some of the southern counties, and the first appeared in any ground that the weed, if permitted to spread, might make land worthless, because grain crops would be choked out, and harvesting by machinery would be difficult. The government had been informed that large tracts of land in Russia had been abandoned for grain growing purposes because of the presence of thistles.

Minnesota Helps in the Good Work.

Representative Boen of Minnesota spoke vigorously of the damaging effects of the thistle, and earnestly demanded that congress do all that is possible to help free Northwestern farmers from the thistle pest. Mr. Boen has a bill before congress providing for complete extermination of the thistle.

A. H. Mohler of the Great Northern railroad presented a letter stating that unless united action is taken to help farmers in different communities, the damage to the land will be infinitely worse than any of the worst grasshopper plagues these districts have ever experienced. Farmers were discouraged because the weed completely choked the growth of grain. Its spread had been within a few years, and there was danger of further spread to Minnesota and North Dakota lands.

Views of a North Dakota Farmer.

Major Charles W. Butts of Bartsville, N. D., a large farmer and an ex-member of congress, addressed the committee upon the effects of the thistle. It choked the grain binding machines, he said, and made their use impossible. The Russian government had taken charge of its infested lands for two years, helping to support the farmers meanwhile. Congress had permitted the foreigners to enter who brought the weed and congress should furnish plenty of funds for extermination.

CALDWELL'S ROAST.

Union Pacific Receivers Lectured by the Circuit Court Judge.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 16.—Attorneys Thurston and Corwin, who came here to endeavor to secure an order harmonizing the contradictory opinions of Judge Dundy of Omaha and Judge Hallett of Denver, have met with a surprise at the hands of Circuit Judge Caldwell. In an informal talk with Judge Caldwell, to secure a date for a hearing, Mr. Thurston gave a resume of the existing state of affairs, detailing what the court as well as the receivers had done, deeming himself more especially to the annulling by the receivers of the wages schedule and their order placing a new and reduced one in effect March 1, together with the order of Judge Dundy recognizing the propriety of such action and the action of Judge Hallett, if such is contrary to the order. General Thurston said that the failure of Judge Hallett to make any order on the subject was held as the idea that the receivers have the power to adopt new schedules, and it was this apparent class of judicial opinion that was creating discontent among the line and making the situation almost threatening. After some oblivory talk, Judge Caldwell said to General Thurston that the receivers had taken advantage of the men behind their backs.

"Go back to Omaha and revoke that order," the judge said, "then I will take your case. Then you can advertise your schedule and give the men notice, and I think that 60 days might not be unreasonable. I will come to Omaha and hold the conference with your receivers and the representatives of the labor organizations myself or we cannot agree upon a schedule that will be just to the employes and will be such as the receivers can afford to pay."

McKINLEY SPEAKS AT MINNEAPOLIS.

WILL WEAR ERMINE

VACANCY ON THE FEDERAL SUPREME BENCH IS FILLED.

Senator Edward Douglas White, of Louisiana, Nominated and Promptly Confirmed as Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The nomination of Senator Edward D. White of Louisiana to be associate justice of the supreme court was sent to the senate by the president this afternoon, and almost before the dignified solons had time to recover the nomination was confirmed. While months had been spent in consideration of the nominations of Messrs. Hornblower and Peckham, and much time devoted to them by the senate committee on judiciary, the name of Mr. White was not referred to the committee at all, and in less than an hour after the nomination had been received the senate had placed its seal of approval upon the selection, had robbed itself of an esteemed member, and had given the supreme court the one man necessary to make a full bench.

The nomination was received through Private Secretary Pruden, while Senator Daniel was engaged in a speech on the Hawaiian question. He immediately announced his willingness to suspend, and upon being so, Mr. Caffery moved an executive session.

The senate had been in session behind closed doors less than half an hour when it became known that the motion to confirm without reference had carried without opposition. The vote was unanimously and heartily in favor of confirmation.

EDWARD DOUGLAS WHITE.

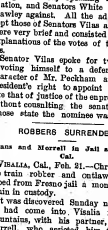
The New Associate Justice Is the Youngest Member of the Court.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—Edward Douglas White will take his seat on the supreme bench as the youngest of the justices and with the exception of Justices Field and Harlan, he will have entered at an earlier period in life than any of the other justices. He will have the exceptionally long term of 21 years to serve before retirement. He was born in the parish of La Fourche, La., and was 48 years of age last November. He was educated at Mount St. Mary's, near Emmetsburg, Md., at the Jesuit college in New Orleans, and finally at Georgetown college, Washington. He entered the Confederate army and after the war was admitted to the bar by the Louisiana supreme court. He practiced his profession during the troubled years that followed the reconstruction period. He took a leading political experience as a state senator. Lapeing into law again he became associate justice of the supreme court of Louisiana in 1878, but again turning to political pursuits, he was elected to the United States senate to succeed Senator Eustis, at present minister to France, taking his seat March 4, 1891. The new justice is a bachelor at present, but there is a well defined rumor afloat that before the year is out he will espouse a well known society woman who has been a brilliant figure in Washington.

PECKHAM REJECTED.

The Senate Refuses to Confirm Cleveland's Second Nomination.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17.—The senate adjourned a few minutes after 6 today after spending the better part of two days considering the nomination of W. H. Peckham of New York to be associate justice of the supreme court. The vote had been just taken on the motion to confirm the nomination, resulting in a refusal to do so by a vote of 32 to 41. Twenty-three senators, all Republicans and 1 Populist voted against it. The proceedings of the executive session prior to the taking of the vote consumed nearly five hours, making. Senators Vilas, Mitchell (Ore.), George and Gray speaking for confirmation, and Senators White (Cal.) and Hawley against. All the addresses except those of Senators Vilas and George were very brief and consisted mainly of explanations of the votes of the speakers.



WHEELER H. PECKHAM

Senator Vilas spoke for two hours, devoting himself to a defense of the character of Mr. Peckham and of the president's right to appoint in a case like that of justice of the supreme court without consulting the senators from whose state the nominee was chosen.

ROBBERS SURRENDER.

Evans and Morrell in Jail at Visalia, Cal.

VISALIA, Cal., Feb. 21.—Chris Evans, the train robber and outlaw, was recaptured from Fresno jail a month ago, and again in custody.

It was discovered Sunday night that he had come into Visalia from the mountains, with his partner, Edward Morrell, who assisted him to escape from Fresno jail, and that the two men were hidden in Evans' house here. Officers surrounded the house at 4 o'clock day morning, and a few hours later peaceably all the inhabitants of the Goodnow with the exception of Evans, the fact that escape was impossible, and after brief negotiation with Sheriff Kay of this county, he and Morrell surrendered.

Evans and Morrell at the time of surrender had two Winchester rifles, two pistols and plenty of ammunition. Marshal Gard says the man arrested with Evans is Ed Martin, known here as Morrell. Both bandits are worn out. After being kept there travelling and they had to find some place to rest and they took that chance here.

New Methods of Warfare.

Our Berlin correspondent sends us a suggestive account of the way in which a German detachment, operating in east Africa, was routed by a swarm of bees. They—the soldiers, not the bees—were reasonable with a native chieftain by means of grenades. The native lacks flat, but a swarm of bees, terrified or exasperated by the blaze of fire, sallied out to avenge the influence entirely to themselves. Nothing can resist a general levy of the insect world, as was shown the other day in a sudden rising of the wasps. For our comfort they usually, like the fleas of the traveler's story, want unanimity. The ants could handle him one another worse for slight differences of color, race or habits if they belonged to human kind.

LABOR AND CAPITAL.

The Duty of the Hour Is to Strengthen the Bond Between Them.

Every effort is now being made, as it has always been made in the past, to create a conflict between labor and capital. This is as foolish as it is unjust. Those who agitate such ideas can generally be found among men whodo not care themselves to work, but who prefer to go around and create dissensions and trouble where none had previously existed. Such men are mischief makers and malefactors.

Labor and capital are and must be one. They are necessary to each other. Without the one of labor capital would be idle. Labor cannot find work unless there are factories, mines or farms where its work is needed. Capital would be uselessly employed in building factories, opening up mines or laying out farms unless it could secure the labor with which to do the needed work.

Any antagonism of labor toward capital that is employed in honest enterprise which affords an opportunity for men to earn an honest living is absolutely wrong. Any antagonism of capital toward the labor it employs, and which it needs, is also absolutely wrong. These two units, labor and capital, are so wrapped together and so involved with one another that they must work together and in harmony in order to acquire mutual success.

It is well to consider for a moment who are the men that employ the capital and own the mills, the mines or the farms. They are men who have come here and worked hard at their callings, and who have by their energy and perseverance pushed ahead of others. They have acquired a position that thousands of other hard workers are today hoping to secure for themselves in the future. If it be wrong that these men have succeeded, then it will be equally wrong for others to follow in their footsteps of success.

We believe that the employers of labor in this country are not hard taskmasters. A good employer does much for the welfare and comfort of his employes. There are thousands of men who can bear witness to acts of kindness they have received from their employers and who have helped them to secure their own homes perhaps or to improve their condition with some extra comfort. In helping the men they know they are acquiring their friendship, and a good employer is always aware that he will secure a greater interest in his work if he extends the hand of kindness to men working today where he worked a few years ago.

It is not the employers of capital who desire to injure labor. It is these men from village hamlets who have been intrusted with the work of tearing down the protection that the McKinley act gave to labor—it is their leaders in congress and at the head of the administration. These are the men who are enemies to both labor and capital, and with a crafty cunning they attempt to make trouble between labor and capital. They are working for foreign interests, but in order to succeed they must first sever the bond that exists here between labor and capital. The duty of the hour is to strengthen that bond.—American Economist.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health. The accompanying cut, shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to perform active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut this long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is commonly called the solar plexus, and is

He sends his regards to Commander Mr. Quartermaster B. F. Zarrucher and all the comrades with whom he is acquainted here.

Frank Brown and F. L. Kermott have purchased Frank Hertz' steam laundry, and the business will hereafter be conducted by Mr. Kermott, who for some time has held a position in Durand's drug store. Mr. Brown will retain his position at the roller mills, and will only be a silent partner in the concern. Frank Kertz expects to leave the city after he gets his affair straightened up.

Sunday was one of the coldest days of the season and Monday was nearly as cold, with a high wind prevailing.

Chris Johnson was in from Maple Bay last week, and becomes a subscriber to the JOURNAL, in order, as he says to get all the county news.

Wheat opens this week lower than ever since last fall—46 cents for No. 1 Hard. Fortunately there is but little left in the hands of the producer.

C. L. Hansen was in from Garden last week chatting with old friends. C. L. is getting tired already of the beauties of a democratic administration.

Ira P. Misner left for his home in Wisconsin on Monday evening's train. Mr. Misner, it will be remembered, was called to the bedside of his son I. W. C., arriving too late to see him alive.

Alice Austin, the seven-year-old daughter of A. K. Austin, died at the home of Mrs. Austin's sister, on the Red River, on the morning of 14th inst. of pneumonia. The funeral obsequies took place in this city on Saturday.

A.E. Koeppe has sold his cigar factory to H. P. Brown and intends to go out to the coast soon. He has grown from childhood in our midst, is a young man of sterling qualities and will leave many friends who will wish him a full measure of success in life.

Guy Halvorson and Albert, (alias "Smiler") went over to Minto Wednesday morning to attend the 3 mile skating race at the rink there. There were to be five entries, all noted North Dakota skaters except "Smiler" who is a Crookston boy pure and simple.

O. H. Lucken was a delegate to the encampment from a Duluth Post last week. O. H. is as fine and handsome as ever and was as happy as a big sunflower whenever he could catch on to a Polk county boy for a minute. He wished to be remembered to his many friends here.

If we have neglected our local work this week, it is because we have been every nerve to the task of furnishing a full and complete report of the important trial that commenced on Saturday last. We have endeavored to present this mass of testimony just as it was given so that the people of Polk county, who could not attend it can get at all the facts of the case as they were brought out, and thus be fully enabled to judge of the merits of the case.

Comrade Grant, of Col. Choate Post, Detroit, is a regular lodge maniac—and rather have a lodge given him any day than a good dinner, yes, even than pork and beans, and thusit is that he has more lodges than anybody—having something less than a million. It is amusing to hear him relate how he badgered the Relief Corps of Boston—and beat 'em out of a badge every trade, securing a hundred during the encampment there. He always attends encampments and always returns loaded with badges.

If you want to see a man blush ask Comrade Fontaine about when his Grand Army badge, but unless you can run faster than he can, don't venture to ask him what plans he has made for raising hogs on his farm. Perhaps Louie wouldn't fight but he would be liable to get hopping mad, and with good reason.

As will be seen by a communication elsewhere in this issue from Supt. J. B. Copeland, the rumor that he had resigned and would return to this city and take his old run as conductor is untrue. It must have been a case of "the wish is father to the thought" for while our people would not like to see Copeland promoted backward, there is not a mother's son of us who would not like to see him back among us to live.

The contracts for dinking what is known as the Lowell ditch have been let and the work will be commenced after the spring seeding is done. The ditch will be 5¼ miles and will cost, aside from bridges $13,000. John Sahlevoight takes the first 100 stations from the river, J. B. Merrill has from there to the N. P. track, A. N. Hixson has from there to station 259, and the McKlunds Bros. the balance of the work. They have three miles of the work to do.

Wm. McKinnon, a prominent lumberman of Chippewa Falls, Wis., was visiting his cousins, the McKinnon Bros., in this city last week. He is interested in a large contract on the St. Louis river this winter and took a run up here to visit his cousins and look up the prospects for investments in the Red Lake Reservation. He will return shortly for investment is presented and take a hand in getting out the lumber. He has had a life-long experience in the lumber business and knows a good thing in that line, when he sees it.

DURING hard times consumers cannot afford to experiment with inferior, cheap brands of baking powder. It is NOW that the great strength and purity of the ROYAL stand out as a friend in need to those who desire to practise Economy in the Kitchen. Each spoonful does its perfect work. Its increasing sale bears witness that it is a necessity to the prudent—it goes further.

N. B. Grocers say that every dollar invested in Royal Baking Powder is worth a dollar the world over, that it does not consume their capital in dead stock, because it is the great favorite, and sells through all times and seasons.

H. J. Peterson assures us that none need fear to drink freely of his pop, as it is made of the purest of artesian water and filtered at that. He says there is no river water in his.

Mr. A. O. Sandon, who has been leading Scandinavian salesman at the New York Store, is now employed at A. Sture's as book-keeper and head salesman and wishes to have his friends and customers to come and see him.

Mrs. Isaac Ridley and two children arrived from her home at Cundy's Harbor, Maine, on Saturday morning, for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Hathaway. Mrs. Ridley is very much out of health, but her friends hope much from the benefits of our healthful climate.

The Ladies' Relief corps gave a camp-fire during the session in Minneapolis last week that far surpassed in interest the G. A. R. camp-fire. The veteran and pioneer, Mrs. Ina Vanclieve, gave an address that was listened to with eager interest by all and especially by the old soldiers who had been in service under her husband—Gen. VanCleve. Mrs. VanCleve is 85 years old but her voice rang out clear and strong as that of many a far younger woman. Mrs. T. B. Walker read a paper on her experiences during the war, going to show how the women who were left to wait at home, suffered for the cause. The paper was full of pathos and vivid descriptions and was listened to with wrapped attention. Other addresses were made by prominent women of the corps whose names escape us at this writing, were well received and all old vets decided it was the best camp-fire they ever attended.

S. R. Van Sant was elected department commander at the encampment last week, by acclamation, Gen. Mullen, whose friends had been pushing him for the place, withdrawing. Capt. Mullen, who is yet suffering from his recent illness and the loss of a leg, stood upon the platform and made such a speech as made the tears come into the eyes of the old vets, who awfully wanted to vote for "old Capt. Jack." Only for his misfortune which would handicap him for active service for some time, Gen. Mullen would no doubt have been the choice and as it was it was hard for his friends to give him up, and only consideration for his own good induced them to consent to it, Capt Van Sant started as soon as the encampment was over on a trip to the coast and will try and get all the western boys to support St. Paul's claims for the National Encampment in '95. The Capt. is a hustler and will no doubt accomplish much.

Those White-Winged Angels.

McIntosh Times:—Bro. Ware, of the Thief River Falls Press, has been arrested on a charge of criminal libel preferred by M. E. Kirsch and A. C. Rhinehart, the two white-winged angels of the county board. Wonders never cease; but the greatest of them all is that Ware could have found words to express a thought, that could possibly be construed to constitute a libel of this saintly pair.

Artesian Water.

In the early days the question of pure drinking water was, it seems, a very important one and when the first artesian well was obtained upon the farm of E. D. Childs & Co., Mr. Childs had a sample of the water analyzed. His dairy cows are now and have been drinking this artesian water, and in order to satisfy his milk customers he submits the following:

ANALYSIS.

804 of Sulphuric Acid	.0095
Calcium Oxide	.112
Potassium and Sodium	.0238
Chlorine	.0208
Magnesium Oxide	.384
Pure Water	99.3665

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk—ss. E. D. Childs being duly deposes and says that the above is a true and correct copy of the analysis of the water from the artesian wells on the E. D. Childs & Co's., farm sec. 1, town 149, range 47. The above described premises being located in the Fifth ward of the City of Crookston, that said analysis was made by Dr. Wm. B. Carman, at the State University at Champaign, Ill., during the month of December, 1880.

HASN'T RESIGNED.

Superintendent Copeland Corrects an Error.

EDITOR JOURNAL: In your columns I notice that I have resigned as Superintendent of the "Shore" lines of the G. N.' I am not looking for notoriety, and doubtless you would soon learn your mistake without a denial from me. I hardly think it right, however, to remain silent, and thus abet any job the boys may have put up on my friend Driscoll. The Times first gave notice of my resignation, but failed to find me a comfortable job. You did much better by me. The mild climate of the Pacific coast has a fascination for me which my twelve years of life among the blizzards cannot break. My leaving Seattle will depend upon circumstances which have not yet arisen. Please do not forget me down in your note book as one who would say anything disparaging to Crookston or Minnesota. I spent too many pleasant years in your city and have too many friends in the state and in North Dakota to wish to destroy a single laurel in the wreath that country has honestly woven for itself. Truly, I think Minnesota the greatest state west of Lake Michigan and following very closely to New York, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts in importance. True, the democratic party locked up your mines, turned the key in the door of your manufactories and set labor adrift, thus rendering the farmers' products a drug on the market, for which the masses cannot work they cannot buy food. But "beyond the clouds the sun is still shining," for we say it in the 6th over New York, Ohio, etc. The product of your mines will keep. Your manufactories will only become dusty. Your rich and fertile plains will gather renewed vigor and respond to the call when the reigning comes. It was believed by the Buddists that when Buddah slept then dire calamities fell upon the people and the land, but when he awoke the reign of plenty began. During Buchanan's administration he must have slept soundly, and in the second reign of Cleveland he must be taking an awful healthy old nap.

Yours truly,
J. B. COPELAND.

Cheap Rates to California.

The Northern Pacific Railroad company has put into effect a series of low round trip rates to California points. Tickets are good until July 15th, 1894 and are good for stop-over under certain conditions.

These rates will enable those desiring to do so, to spend the winter in Southern California or to visit the mid-winter fair to be held at San Francisco. This latter event will undoubtedly be second only to the World's Fair, and will repay a visit as it will exhibit the resources and capabilities of California.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

Earnie Childs; Son of A. M. Childs, Dies at the Hospital in Duluth.

The Body Brought to Crookston for interment—Funeral Last Sunday.

What the Jurors in the Ware Trial Think of the Journal's Report.

Died—At the hospital in Duluth on Thursday evening 25th, 23dll, 1894, at 8:45, after a short illness of typhoid fever, Ernie A. Childs, of this city.

Ernest A. Childs, son of Albert M. and Mary L. Childs, was born in Clifton, Pierce county, Wis., on Oct. 8th, 1867. When he was 13 years old his parents removed to this city, in 1880, where Ernie attended our public schools until he entered the university at Hamline. After he left school he first entered upon a business career with Artis, Childs & Co., after which he engaged with O. J. Barnes in the grocery store, then for a time was bookkeeper for E. D. Childs & Co., then was with Barnes & Slocum until their assignment: He went to Duluth in 1889 to work for the large grocery house of Eppinger & Co. but Wednesday Oct. 23rd 1889 he was married to Miss Sadie Bradley, of Warren, by whom he had two daughters, one only surviving him. He was a member of the Sons of Veteran camp of this city and was one of the most popular young men of this city. He leaves a young wife and daughter, a father, mother and two sisters to mourn his early death. His pastor, the Rev. Lee W. Squier preached a very eloquent sermon at the funeral on Sunday afternoon to one of the largest audience ever assembled in this city for such an occasion. The house was as full as it could be and as many more were outside, unable to get in.

It's a source of inestimable comfort and consolation to his parents and all his intimate relatives and friends, that a loving Heavenly Father so ordered the events of the last few days of the loved one's life, that he was provided with the best of medical and nurse attendance that could be obtained. The boy adored all else do they find comfort and even joy in the unmistakable evidences they have, that the event was ordered and directed by Him who makes no mistakes but doeth all things well.

A week before his departure and while in the full control of his choice of action; and fully expecting to recover his health, he put his hand in his father's, and gladly and heartily consecrated his life to Jesus. And from that time on till a few hours before his death, his purpose to go out from the sick room and live for Christ was very evident to those who were with him most. And when the fatal complication of his disease was developed, and he became aware that he could not live, not a murmur, or a shadow of rebellion was manifested, but perfect unquestioning resignation characterized every moment, as he witnessed and felt the approach of death. Only a few moments before his death, he said "I cannot live long" and then "father pray."

These were his last intelligible words but though unable to speak, he nodded a hearty assent to the question of his father, "are you in perfect peace and fully trusting in Jesus, and perfectly resigned to his will." And then immediately turning upon his side, he gradually ceased to breathe, and fell asleep. His employer and fellow-clerks and in fact all others with whom he had formed acquaintance during his residence in Duluth, speak of him in words of highest respect and tenderness.

The following resolutions of respect were adopted by the Sons of Veterans of Geo. H. Thomas Camp No. 14, of which Ernie was a member:

WHEREAS, It has pleased God in His infinite wisdom to call from our ranks and from a world of suffering to a heaven of happiness, our esteemed friend and brother, Ernie A. Childs; therefore be it

RESOLVED: That while we humbly bow to Him who doeth all things well, and though he will meet with us here no more, his influence will be felt.

RESOLVED: That as a camp we desire to bear testimony to the faithfulness of our departed brother of his devotion to our sacred order and commend to the Good Shepherd the sorrow stricken wife and child, father, mother, sisters and friends who are so suddenly called upon to mourn the loss of one loved and respected by all.

RESOLVED: That we will devote ourselves now to the work of our order in which he took such an active part, hoping that some day we may receive a reward for so doing.

RESOLVED: That as death has visited and broken our ranks for the second time, we shall be admonished that we have only one life to live, one, only one, eternity forevermore.

RESOLVED: That this action be entered on the records of the camp and furnished for publication in our local papers and the Sons of Veterans National Reveille and also that a copy be presented to the family of the deceased.

RESOLVED: That we tender the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this their sad hour of affliction.

It Was All Right.

What the jurors say of THE JOURNAL'S report of the Ware trial.

Geo. Vine: I think it a very fair and impartial report. By all odds the fairest and best report that I have seen of that trial.

C. N. Lindell: I did not see any thing wrong with it. I call it a very complete and candid summary report of all the evidence in the case.

C. H. Snake: There is nothing wrong with the JOURNAL'S report; it was way out of sight, eminently fair and impartial, nor do I see how anybody can take exception to the verdict of the jury; it was the only conclusion they could reach.

T. G. Thompson: It was all right in every particular and gave all of the facts elicited, without regard to who was hit. I don't see how any one could find fault with it.

L. Larson: I think it was as near right as could be taken. Unless a man objects to having the truth told I don't see how he could object to that report.

Anton Erickson: My opinion is that the JOURNAL has a straight, correct and reliable report of the trial.

J. J. Molstad: I think it was as fair and impartial a report as could be made and that is the opinion of all with whom I have heard.

P. M. Riegdal: The JOURNAL report was all right as far as I could see; thorough and impartial. I cannot say as much for the Times report.

T. A. Harris: You got it all in in great shape as I remember it. It was all right and garbled nor one sided in the least.

W. E. Kelsey: Very correct and unprejudiced, showing no malice at all, as fair and impartial as it could be made.

W. D. Wilson: It was all right so far as I can see and is just as I remember the evidence. It was certainly the most full and complete report given by any newspaper.

Hans Morberg: By all odds the best and fairest report written. It certainly beats the Times' garbled one-sided report of the case and was as full and complete as could be made.

The Times' Circulation.

As the Times persistently insists upon misconstruing the evidence in the Ware case, and now insists upon asserting that its presuman, George Crawford, testified that the circulation of the daily Times was 900, we publish just what was said and all that was said as taken by the court reporter, Mr. B. S. Stevenson. Now let's see you climb over that, Mac. Here's just what he did say and all that he said:

George Crawford sworn: Direct examination by Mr. Stevenson.

Q. What is your name?
A. George Crawford.
Q. What is your business?
A. Working in the Times.
Q. The Crookston Times?
A. Yes sir.
Q. What is your business in that establishment?
A. Job printer.
Q. Have you charge of the printing of the Weekly Times?
A. Yes sir, I run the press.
Q. How many papers do you print every week of the Weekly Times?
Q. (By Mr. Montague) Do you know?
A. Yes sir, 960 papers.

OUR NEXT FAIR

Will be Held Here on July 26th, 27th and 28th, 1894.

Fix These Dates in Your Mind, and Watch for the Premium List.

A Board of Fifteen Directors Will This Year Manage the Association.

The Stockholders of the Northern Minnesota Agricultural and Driving Association met in the city hall at 7:30 p. m. the 17th inst. and closed the business of the association for the year ending February 5th, 1894, elected a board of fifteen directors, adopted the secretary's report and set apart July 17th, 18th and 19th as fair and race meeting dates.

The board of directors will meet in the city hall at 7:30 p. m., the 24th inst. to arrange programs, premiums and purses.

Last year the fair was held on the 26th, 27th and 28th of July, and was a success socially and financially. Pursuant to the wish of a majority of the attendant farmers at said fair who advocated earlier dates for 1894, and as East Grand Forks association hold their race meeting and stock show July 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 9th and 10th; this association placed their fair dates for July 17th, 18th and 19th, thus adopting the suggestions of our leading farmers and following closely after the East Grand Forks race meeting.

The board of directors as now elected is as follows: Hugh Thompson, E. M. Lancaster, Frank Bivins, E. M. Walsh, Archie McKinnon, J. E. O'Brien, S. L. Collins, J. R. McKinnon, A. Sture, J. E. Sullivan, D. Morrow, J. B. Merrill, P. Stenerson, J. Warninger and Peter Carey.

Hugh Thompson president; Frank Bivins, first vice president; E. M. Lancaster, second vice president; E. M. Walsh, treasurer and J. V. E. Wyatt secretary.

The executive committee is Hugh Thompson, Frank Bivins, E. M. Lancaster, Archie McKinnon and E. M. Walsh.

The finance committee is J. R. McKinnon, A. Sture and S. L. Collins.

The financial report and general statement of the secretary is as follows:

Buddy's Beauties.

H. B. Budd was up from Edna this week driving a beautiful span of well matched black horses, one of the finest teams of work horses it was ever our privilege to see in Polk county. Knowing our weakness for fine stock H. B. called 'round at our office to give us an opportunity to feast our eyes upon a really first-class team. The animals are sound of wind and limb every particular, weigh 2800 pounds in their stocking feet, and as fine drivers as one could wish to draw a line over. They are young, one being 5 and the other 6 years old. He had not been in town half a day before he had a dozen or so offers for that team, but as he had given a refusal on them to a near neighbor he could not go back on his word. He said, however, that he had a number of horses at home, fully as good which he will sell as he has purchased Ford's store at Edna and intends to "dispersally" somewhat for the coming year. In the lot he has for sale is a choice stallion that he purchased awhile ago of Ole P. Rouse. Any one who desires to obtain a choice working team should see what Budd can do. One object we have in this write up is to point a moral. The JOURNAL has always urged upon its readers the necessity of raising sooty stock and Mr. Budd's experience emphasizes our point. As all are aware the times are not very propitious for selling stock and none but the best will sell, but as soon as it becomes known that Mr. Budd has horses for sale everybody who knows his horses are anxious to buy of him. And this is a universal rule. As a man gets a reputation established he has no trouble selling stock, while a man who takes no pains at all would be bothered to find a market for his stock at such a time as the present.

That Grading Business.

The JOURNAL took occasion to interview Alderman J. E. Morrisey in relation to the grading matter now agitating the dwellers on Sampson's addition, and that gentleman said substantially as follows: "I have no desire to force upon the people anything they do not desire but I can tell you one thing that there are a wonderful lot of two-faced people in this world, or else there has been a wonderful change of sentiment among them, for nearly all who signed that remonstrance had previously signified their entire approval of the plan. Now, I certainly do not desire the work done if the people do not want it, but I should like to know what to depend upon, so that when I ask for a thing from the council I may be sure that the people want it. If Mr. Norris has been well we should have interviewed the people on the addition and brought in a report in accordance with their wishes, whatever that is. If Mr. Norris does not get able to go with me soon I shall get some other engineer to go, and shall make a report in accordance with what we find. But when any man accuses me of any underhand or dishonorable motives in this matter he is way off his base. If the people, or a majority of them don't want the work done they need not have it so far as I am concerned."

Euclid Items.

EUCLID, Feb. 28th, 1894.

George Rich, of Grand Forks, is over visiting his sister, Mrs. C. E. Harvington, for a few days. George is always welcome in Euclid.

H. C. Misner left for the Twin Cities Sunday evening, where he will transact business for several days, returning the latter part of the week.

Jack Eagle, our No. 1 carpenter and contractor, has the contract for building a house on Wm. Davidson's farm. We are informed that Robt. Linton and family will occupy the same when finished. Welcome, Bob.

Mrs. T. E. Biever and John Schautzer, and wife visited Crookston Monday.

Dr. and Mrs. Chapin visited Warren Monday. The Doctor, we are informed, has bought out a drug store in that city.

Albert Losey, the genial clerk in the Crookston P. O., visited with his parents Sunday.

One of the most enjoyable affairs that has taken place in Euclid for a long time, was the sociable at the church last Friday evening, given in honor of the pastor, Rev. Joseph Astwood. The reverend gentleman was kept in absolute ignorance of the affair until all the guests had arrived, when he was invited to go over to the church and attend a meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. His surprise and consternation can be imagined when he was confronted by seventy-five of his friends, and told that he was the honored guest. Supper was served by the ladies, after which a number of toasts were responded to by F. H. Gnabell, L. S. Hancock, G. W. Webb, and others, after which Mr. H. C. Misner, in a very neat speech, presented the Rev. with a purse containing twenty-six dollars, which had been contributed by the friends present. Mr. Astwood has only been among the Euclid people a few months, but as Mr. Misner said in his remarks, "He has not only captured the hearts of the people, but their purses as well."

A party of Euclidites visited Mr. and Mrs. Davidson at the Keystone Tuesday evening. There were about thirty guests present, and as usual, they had a royal good time. Mr. and Mrs. Davidson know how to entertain, and no people in the world know better how to enjoy themselves to the utmost than these Euclid people.

Miss Nellie Stevens, of Warren, was the guest of Mrs. Chapin on Thursday.

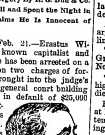
WIMAN ARRESTED.

THE NOTED NEW YORK CAPITALIST BEHIND THE BARS.

Charged With Forgery By H. G. Dun & Co. He Refused Bail and Spent the Night in the Tombs—Claims He Is Innocent of Any Crime.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Erastus Wiman, the well known capitalist and railroad magnate has been arrested on a bench warrant on two charges of forgery. He was brought into the judge's chambers in the general court building at 5 o'clock, and in default of $25,000 bail was committed to the Tombs by Judge Martine. Two indictments had been found against Mr. Wiman by the grand jury. They are for forging and uttering checks. Each indictment contains two counts. The total amount involved in Mr. Wiman's alleged forgeries is $220,000. The complainant against him is R. G. Dun, president of the mercantile agency of 314 Broadway.



ERASTUS WIMAN.

As soon as word was received at Mr. Wiman's home of his arrest, Mr. Harris Wiman, the second son, came to New York from Staten Island and carrying a small satchel with a change of linen for his father. The night keeper of the prison received the satchel and consented to take a note from the young man to Mr. Wiman. In this note young Mr. Wiman asked his father if he wished anything done and if he cared to make any statements.

Went to the Tombs,

In reply to this message Mr. Wiman wrote to the young man that he was both cheerful and well, that he had committed no crimes, but had no doubt blundered and that he was willing to stand the consequences. He added that he had absolutely refused to accept bail although offered him by his friends to get bondsmen for him.

WIMAN GETS BAIL.

Charles H. Deere of Moline Puts Up $25,000 in Money For His Release.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Mr. Albert G. Cole, of the firm of Tracy, Broadman & Platt, who are the lawyers for Mr. Erastus Wiman, called at the district attorney's office. After a consultation with Assistant District Attorney Unger, that gentleman dispatched Deputy Sheriff Dalrymple to the Tombs prison for Mr. Wiman. He was brought to the district attorney's office and bail was accepted.

Mr. Charles H. Deere of Moline, Ills. deposited 23 $1,000 bills in the office of the city chamberlain during the morning. Recorder Smyth signed the bail bond. Mr. Deere is the father-in-law of Mr. Wiman's son William, who is now lying in a precarious condition at his home on Staten Island.

WIMAN ARRAIGNED.

The Accused Man Pleads Not Guilty to the Charge of Forgery.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The public statement of the attorneys of Erastus Wiman, claiming his innocence of the charges to which he was bound over in the $25,000 bail to appear in criminal proceedings against him, foreshadowed his plea of "not guilty," which he advanced in the court of general sessions. When brought to the bar Mr. Wiman appeared a trifle pale, but cool and collected, and so soon as his plea had been made Judge Martine ordered his release continuing his original bail. It has not yet been decided when the case will be brought up for trial. Mr. Wiman refused to be interviewed. It is said that his counsel will take advantage of the treaty of 1870 between the United States and Canada, which permits six of Mr. Wiman's countrymen to be on the jury that is to decide his fate.

Johnson Breaks a Record.

MONTREAL, Feb. 28.—John S. Johnson, the champion skater, broke the world's record during the afternoon. He went 10 miles in 31:11 1-2, as against Norseng's 32:37, the previous world's record made at St. Petersburg. The champion was in form and the ice was fast, everything else being favorable.

Secession Advocated.

LAID BEFORE THE SENATE.

Reports of the Hawaiian Investigating Committee Made Public.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—Senator Morgan, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, has presented to the senate the report of the Hawaiian investigating committee, and signed by himself and the four Republican members. A minority report, signed by the four remaining Democratic members, was also presented. The majority report upholds the action of Minister Stevens in recognizing the provisional government and holds that the time of recognition is not a material factor. The action of Mr. Stevens in declaring a protectorate and raising the United States flag, the report says,

Was Without Authority

and was void for want of power. It was disavowed by Secretary Foster and rebuked by Secretary Gresham, and the order to abandon the protectorate and haul down the flag was in accordance with the duty and honor of the United States. The report likewise favors annexation and upholds the president in his appointment of Mr. Blount and his instructions to Minister Willis.

The Republican members of the committee, who signed the Morgan report, also submitted a supplementary report, declaring the appointment of Mr. Blount unconstitutional and giving it as their opinion that the president had no authority to reopen the question at all. The minority report dissents only from that part of the report justifying ex-Minister Stevens.

MUST HAVE SILVER.

Strong Plea for the White Metal by a Leading Financial Authority.

LONDON, Feb. 27.—The Financial News says: Guatemala today and other silver countries tomorrow. Default with most of them is a question of time. The world's commerce is reeling to a crisis, yet the mischief from the appreciation of gold has only begun. Bimetallism in England is gaining converts. It is understood that Mr. Liddesdale, governor of the Bank of England is a strong advocate of an international agreement for a joint standard. Bimetallism is no longer the creed of a handful of cranks. Nearly every economist of eminence is on that side.

The international conference must be reopened. France, Germany and the United States are among those that should be done. Surely our interests are as great as theirs. If in our pride as the gold mart of the world, we stand aside, the punishment will fall upon our own heads. It depends upon the British cabinet whether the conference be fruitless or not.

MAJOR STRAIT DEAD.

One of Minnesota's Honored Pioneers Passes Away.

ST. PAUL, Feb. 26.—Major H. B Strait of Shakopee died on a Mexican Central train at El Paso, Tex., while taking a trip through Mexico. He had been ill but a day.

Brief Sketch of His Career.

Major Strait was born in 1836, and was, therefore, 59 years of age at the time of his death. In 1854, when he was 19 years of age, the Strait family came to Minnesota and settled at Shakopee, Scott county, where he has ever since resided. His first entry into what might be termed a public career was in raising the military service in 1861. He entered as captain of Company I, and was promoted to major for gallant service on the field of battle. After the close of the war he engaged in the banking business at Shakopee, and during the time of his death was also connected with several banks in other parts of the state. Major Strait was elected to congress in 1872 and served 12 years.

In Favor of Secret Societies.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., Feb. 28.—Brad J. Durfee, superintendent of banks of this state, has reversed his former decision regarding the recent law governing secret societies who provide insurance, and will allow the old law to remain in force until the next session of the general assembly of Illinois. He finds by investigation that it was not the intention of the originators of the bill, nor the house and senate that passed it, to work against secret societies.

Keep Their Governor General.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 26.—The legislature has defeated by a vote of 31 to 5 the proposition to abolish the office of governor general. His duties are purely nominal and the office costs the province $16,000 a year. There is also a popular demand for the reform.

Cures Smallpox, Too.

CITY OF MEXICO, Feb. 26.—General Auralians Rivera, who has discovered the famous "Jicama" root for the cure of typhus and has been distributing it gratuitously to the poor, has made the further discovery that the same root will cure smallpox.

Meatrigueks in Nebraska.

OMAHA, Feb. 28.—The world at The Bee from Arcadia, Nebr., says: An earthquakes shock was felt here about 5:30 a. m., lasting over one minute. Its direction was from north to south, jarring the windows like heavy thunder, and shaking plastering from ceilings.

Indian Appropriations.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Members of the house committee on Indian affairs say that appropriations for the next fiscal year for the Indians will not be materially reduced below the figures of the present year.

Prendergast Sentenced.

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Judge Brentano has overruled the motion for a new trial for Prendergast and sentenced the assassin to be hanged on March 23.

THE FARIBAULT PLAN

PUBLIC AND PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS AT PITTSBURG CONSOLIDATED.

Four of the Nuns of St. James Are Retained as Teachers—A Slight Reduction in Attendance Follows, But Whether of Catholics or Protestants Is Not Definitely Known.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 28.—An innovation in the public school system of Pennsylvania was inaugurated here Monday by the consolidation of the Thirty-fourth ward public school and St. James Roman Catholic parochial school and the installation of four nuns as teachers. The children were examined by the central board of education and accepted as regular teachers. There will be no distinction between scholars and teachers. Protestant children will be taught by the sisters as well as Catholic children. There has been no hitch resulting in the school for six years and no change will be made now. A slight falling off in the attendance was noticeable, but whether it was caused by the withdrawal of any children of Protestant or Catholic families, who may object to the arrangement, is not known.

THE ROSTER CASES.

Charges of Conspiracy Against Wisconsin State Officials.

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 28.—The roster conspiracy case against Governor Peck and other state officials was called before Judge Seitscher in the circuit court. The plaintiffs asked leave to amend the allegations by setting up that the defendents conspired to defraud the state, and a conspiracy to defraud was a part of that conspiracy. The court denied the motion, holding that if it should appear by the testimony that there was a conspiracy to defraud the state it would be only a part of the evidence and not a part of the cause for action. The defendants were spent in arguing the right of each of the six defendants to three pre-emptory challenges of jurymen. The court held that the defendants were not entitled to separate challenge and must be considered as one party.

THE FIGHT IS ON.

Silver Men Will Block Appropriations if Filibustering Continues.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Representative Pithian, one of the new Democratic members from Illinois, has been a constant attendant of Mr. Bland in the silver debate, and says that the silver men will block appropriation bills and bring every piece of legislation to a halt until the opposition to the pending silver bill consents to let a vote be taken. Mr. Pithian said in a speech Monday that the silver men would be justified in such a course, but later he went further and said that he would effectually carry out the plan. He has no scruples to all of the great appropriation bills for carrying on the government and the local measures for public buildings, rivers and harbors and general improvements. It will apply also to pension measures of legislation, such as the bankruptcy bill or banking measures now on the calendar awaiting a hearing.

Mr. Pithian was asked if the committee on rules could not bring in a special rule giving the appropriation bills the right of way. He said the hill would have to be passed by the house, and he intimated that the silver men were strong enough to defeat such a plan. He is confident they can bring all legislation to a standstill until the silver question is voted upon.

GROW GOES TO CONGRESS.

The Election in Pennsylvania Shows a Republican Plurality of 180,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—Galusha A. Grow was elected to a seat in congress from the second Pennsylvania district by a special election Tuesday. The returns from the state were very incomplete, but the Republican gains were made in nearly every county. The indications at present are that his majority will reach 140,000. Calculations of Republican headquarters express a belief that the figures will rise to 150,000. This is believed impossible by Democrats only because the returns from the state indicate a comparatively light vote.

Want a Vote on the Tariff.

DES MOINES, Feb. 28.—In the house Representative Davis introduced a resolution asking postponement of the final vote on the Wilson bill by congress till after the next election to give the people of the United States a chance to vote on the question. The resolution was adopted by a party vote.

Minnesota School Apportionment.

ST. PAUL, Feb. 27.—The spring apportionment of current school funds will be made at the state department on public instruction next monday. It is thought that the amount per capita will be about 90 cents this spring. The number of pupils to share this is estimated at 345,000.

Goes to Wagner.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 27.—Rudolph J. Peschmann, proprietor the Cream City hotel, who robbed and murdered Mrs. Schumn, an aged guest, and then set fire to his hotel, has been sentenced by Judge Walther to state prison at Wanpun for life.

McKane Must Wear Stripes.

BROOKLYN, Feb. 26.—Judge Cullen has denied Alex. McKane's application for a certificate of reasonable doubt.

Judge Cullen's decision vacates the stay of execution granted last week, pending an appeal to the general term, must go to Sing Sing.

Bowling Match Arranged.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—A London cablegram, just received, says that Sullivan and Hardin will row Haulan and Gaudaur in double sculls for $2,500 and the championship of the world. The race will be rowed over the Thames champion course.

THE FARIBAULT PLAN

HOW THE WORLD WILL END.

Our Planet Will Die Not by Accident, but a Natural Death.

According to all probability, notwithstanding all the circumstances which threaten it, our planet will die not of an accident but a natural death. That death will be the consequence of the extinction of the sun. In 20,000,000 years or more—[illegible]—since its condensation at a relatively moderate rate will give it, on one hand, 17,000,000 years of existence, while on the other hand the inevitable fall of meteors into the sun may double this number. Even if you suppose the duration of the sun to be prolonged to 40,000,000 years, it is still no less humiliation that the radiation from the sun could it and that the temperature of all bodies tends to an equilibrium. The day will come when the sun will be extinct. Then the earth and all the other planets of our system will cease to be the abode of life. They will be erased from the great book and will revolve, black cemeteries, around an extinguished sun.

Will these planets continue to exist even then? Yes, probably in the case of Jupiter and perhaps Saturn. No, beyond a doubt, for the small bodies such as the earth, Venus, Mars, Mercury and the moon. Already the moon appears from the latest researches to be a dead planet. Mare is much further advanced than the earth toward the cause destiny. Venus, younger than we, will doubtless survive us. These little worlds lose their elements of vitality much faster than the sun loses its heat. From century to century, from year to year, from day to day, from hour to hour, the surface of the earth is transformed. On one hand, the continents are crumbling away and becoming covered by the seas, which insensibly and by very slow degrees leads to invade and embarrass the entire globe. On the other hand, the amount of water on the surface of the globe is diminishing. A careful and reasonable calculation shows that by the action of erosion alone all the land on our planet will be covered by water in 10,000,000 years.—Camille Flammarion in Astronomie.

PROBATE NOTICE.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk, } ss.
In Probate Court, special term, February 26, 1894.

In the matter of the estate of Carl Hanson, deceased.

On receiving and filing the petition of Louisa Hanson, of the town of Sec. of the County of Polk, representing among other things, that Carl Hanson late of the County of Polk, in the State of Minnesota, on the 9th day of March, A. D. 1892, at the county of Polk aforesaid, and being an inhabitant of the County at the time of his death, having executed his last will and testament with his County, and the said petitioner as the executrix named in said will, and praying that administration of said estate be to Louisa Hanson granted.

It is therefore ordered, that said petition be heard before said Court, on Monday the 16th day of March, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate office, in the city of Crookston, in said County.

Ordered further, that notice thereof be given in the home of said hearing, to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Polk County Journal, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, Minn., in said County.

Dated at Crookston this 26th day of February, A. D. 1894.

By the Court,
C. M. BENSON,
Judge of Probate.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with interest. I cannot describe the much creepy sensation of the presence of some one, near and far. I used to rub and rub those parts until they were sore, to overcome a nuisance the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a sensation of pins and needles and around my feet. Also an indescribable sense of fullness in my stomach. Nervous asked me to consult a physician, but I always objected to their universal conclusion, that it was all in the mind. Some persons upon a person, they try to counteract its insidious progress until the victim is helpless and the sufferer dies. Such was my condition, and I had been doctoring for a year and a half, but with no permanent benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, recommending the same symptoms as mine. I thought it was worth a trial, but a few days had passed before I noticed a change for the better. The dead feeling had left me, and in fact it has not been ever the slightest indication of it since. My nerves feel as strong as ever, and I have gained ten pounds in weight, though I was not fleshy when I began to take Dr. Miles' Nervine. I am using the Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in this case as in mine.—James Kane, La Due, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

WHO WILL BE LEADER

A QUESTION OF VAST INTEREST TO THE PEOPLE OF GREAT BRITAIN.

Lord Rosebery, John Morley and Sir William Vernon Harcourt Seem to Lead the Liberal List In Eligibility to Succeed Grand Old Man Gladstone.

Whether the story told by the expatriated American, Astor, in his London newspaper, The Pall Mall Gazette, to the effect that Mr. Gladstone will shortly resign as premier of the British empire and leader of the Liberal party, be founded on "inside information" or not, his age and increasing infirmities are such as to render his retirement a contingency likely to become a fact almost any day.

What will happen then? Who will take the reins from the venerable hands that have guided his party for so many years? Will the now man be strong enough to keep the party united? How long will he be able to continue the Liberal reign? Will home rule for Ireland go forward to accomplishment, or will the project languish again and be postponed for another term of years? These questions are asked with interest on this side of the Atlantic. On the other side they are propounded with anxiety, for their answering is fraught with the utmost significance to the British empire.

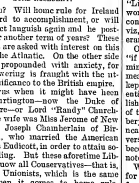
Time was when it might have been Lord Hartington—now the Duke of Devonshire—or Lord "Randy" Churchill, whose wife was Miss Jerome of New York, or Joseph Chamberlain of Birmingham, who married the American girl, Miss Endicott, in order to attain social standing. But these aforetime Liberals are now all Conservatives—that is, they are Unionists, which is the same thing when it comes to the test bill, now the cardinal question with the Liberal party, and therefore not to be considered. Of the Liberals at present most prominent after Gladstone, Lord Rosebery, John Morley and Sir William Vernon Harcourt seem to be the only ones worth considering.

Of the three mentioned as possibilities, Lord Rosebery is perhaps most likely to win the prize. He is Scotch and is in many ways the most interesting man of the lot.

He is young for a successful British politician, having first seen the light in 1847. His family is as old one, and that is one reason why his Liberalism is such a tower of strength to the party. His surname is not, of course, Rosebery, that being the title of his earldom merely. He was born Primrose and was christened Archibald Philip. His title when a boy at the great public school at Eton was Ear! Dalemny, and it was under this that he was known as one of the cleverest, most original pupils then in attendance. Whenever a topic was up for discussion among his fellows he used to listen gravely until all the rest had had their say. Then he would express himself in such unexpected fashion and such quaint phrase as to invariably command the respectful attention of the others.

He was then, as now, very difficult to approach when he had work to do, and his room was inaccessible to all but his closest intimates, but as his seeming exclusiveness was known to proceed not from haughtiness, but from a conviction that to accomplish his work he must be undisturbed, he was not disliked for it, especially as he found time enough to devote toathletic sports to enable him to excel therein. His liking for hard work has been a pronounced characteristic ever since that time and has undoubtedly been an important factor in enabling him to excel in whatever he has undertaken.

From Eton he went to Oxford, where his scholastic attainments were both brilliant and solid. A few years after his graduation he distinguished himself by presiding over a scientific congress in Glasgow; a little later was made lord rector of Aberdeen university and still a little later lord rector of Edinburgh university. He entered politics very young, became a Liberal by reason of his acquaintance with Gladstone, who was his guest during a hot parliamentary campaign in Midlothian, and was chosen by the Liberal leader when only 24 to second the address of reply to the throne. His political advancement from that time was rapid, and in 1886, after filling many minor posts, in all of which he worked hard, he became under secretary of state for foreign affairs.



JOHN MORLEY.

Of course his advancement in governmental affairs received a check when the Liberals went out of power, but he was nevertheless a potent factor in public matters all along, for he was elected as a Liberal, and on the same ticket with John Burns, the workingman's member, in the London council and did marvelously good reform work on the governing board of the vastest municipality in the world. When Gladstone came into power for the last time, to Lord Rosebery was given the foreign portfolio, and he has conducted its affairs in a way that has strengthened the Liberal party and upheld the credit of the government abroad. In fact, England's foreign policy under his guidance has been strong for the first time when the Liberals were in." He has but one serious point in the armor in the panoply of politics, and that is the premiership.

Lord Rosebery's marriage to a daughter of the Rothschild family, which occurred when he was 30, was quite as much talked about as any of his political acts have been. His motives were written down as entirely mercenary; his ambition was assertingly spoken of as having been to "marry the richest heiress in the world," and so on. Be that as it may, their married life is said to have been very nearly an ideal one. She died two or three years ago, leaving four children, and there have been many rumors since of his approaching marriage with this one or that one, the most persistent of all pertaining to the one with whom connected his name with that of a daughter of the Prince of Wales. There seems to be, in fact, no shadow of probability that he would marry into the royal family even if he could. The fact that such an alliance would force him to leave public life would of itself prevent him from making it.

Politics has not taken up all of Lord Rosebery's intellectual attention. His "Life of William Pitt" is a standard work and fulfills one of the unwritten conditions of the British premiership—that is, the premier should have a literary side.

Of John Morley it has been said that "if he had not been so mighty because premier," by which the speaker only meant to say that Mr. Morley has always kept himself too much in hand even to entirely suit the cold, methodical English sentiment. He certainly has none of the dash and brilliancy of Lord Rosebery. He was born in 1838. He was educated at Oxford, but during his university life he gave no special promise of becoming either a writer or a debater of note.

When he went to London and set up for a literary career, he had a hard time for some months, as he found it extremely difficult to dispose of his articles. He finally succeeded in suiting first the editor of The Literary Gazette and later The Saturday Review. After that his rise was steady, but his writings were almost altogether literary and not journalistic till he was induced almost forcibly to go on the staff of The Pall Mall—"pitchforked into journalism," some one has said—in the days when that journal was Liberal in politics.

He entered parliament in 1883 and three years later was made a member of Mr. Gladstone's cabinet as chief secretary for Ireland, his rapid promotion from a journalist to a minister's seeming being quite unexampled in the British government. He has ever since been a factor in the current history of the United Kingdom. He is a Radical in politics, and, though not offensively, an agnostic in religion. William T. Stead, who was associated with him on The Pall Mall, called him a "Puritan who had lost his way." Mr. Morley is a solid rather than an interesting speaker. He does not "let himself out" on the platform. His delivery is monotonous, but his words mean something, and the British public knows that he is never intentionally in earnest. He is a pleasant man to know and an agreeable conversationalist. It is said to be a cherished ambition of his to write a "final history" of the French revolution. His constituents at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, whence he has always been returned to parliament, call him Honest John.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt has a literary side, as have Lord Rosebery and Mr. Morley. His first writing was the production of some very clever electioneering squibs, and he afterward served his apprenticeship to journalism by leaving his trade very well indeed. He is said to know more about English literature than even Mr. Gladstone. He is a man of unimpeachable taste, for his wife was an American girl, the daughter of Mr. Motley, the historian. He is fine looking. He is at present Mr. Gladstone's first lieutenant in the house of commons, and he is a favorite with the royal family, but he is not personally a popular man. Perhaps this is because he is sometimes insulted by the sanctions. He is nevertheless a success in public life, and whatever he says when he chooses to speak is carefully listened to and fully reported. He is possibly not as strong a Home Ruler as Lord Rosebery or Mr. Morley, but there is no reason for believing that the Irish members would bolt his leadership.

THE PRICE OF WOOL.

HOW THE FREE RAW MATERIAL BILL HAS AFFECTED THE FARMER.

A Clear Comparison of London and American Prices—The Change From Harrison to Cleveland Caused a Difference of 9 Cents Per Pound.

The Canonsburg Herald of Washington county, Pa., states that "one of our farmers recently sold his unwashed wool at 14 cents per pound. Unwashed wool was then quoted at 15 cents per pound in the London market. The duty on wool was 11 cents. Add a cent for carriage, and foreign wool would cost 27 cents laid down in New York. Our friend got 14 cents. We would like to know where the protection comes in."

Such wool as brings 15 cents in the London market is twice as valuable as the 14 cent unwashed Pennsylvania wool. The former is skirted Australian and is so clean that in any market it would command a higher price than the cleanest fleece washed wools of Washington county, to say nothing of unwashed. We might as well compare gold and silver, because they are precious metals, as to compare Washington county unwashed with Australian unwashed. They are neither in the same condition. The wool which this Washington county farmer sold in Washington county at 14 cents is worth only 9 cents in London, and with free wool the London price would be the American price in New York, and the farmer would be at least 2 cents per pound less than the price in New York, or 6½ cents, because it would cost over 2 cents per pound to get wool from the farm in Washington county to the eastern market.

In confirmation of the free trade value of Washington county wool we refer to the following table procured by the National Association of Woolen Manufacturers, giving the cost in London of certain lots of Australian unwashed wool competing with Washington county wools. The average price per pound in London for unwashed skirted wool, the average shrinkage of which was 48 per cent, and the average clean scoured cost was 36½ cents:

Thus you will see that first class Australian wool, although unwashed and free from skirts, is so clean that the shrinkage is only 48 per cent as against a shrinkage of 65 per cent for Washington county unwashed wool with the skirts on. Washington county washed fleece, with the skirts on, will shrink 55 per cent. If we had free wool, the London price would be 9 cents per pound, and with the freight from London to New York is only one-fourth cent per pound, which is less than the freight on wool from Washington county farms to the same market. Therefore, with free wool, the Washington county farmer will have to pay for good merino wool free from skirts at 36½ cents.

It is estimated that the loss on the skirts, tag locks, legs and belly wool is from 5 to 7 cents per pound on American wools to make them equal to Australian skirted wools. Assuming that 6½ cents would be the average loss on skirts on Pennsylvania unwashed wool, the Washington farmer with free trade would have to sell scoured wool, including the skirts, at 80 cents in order to make it cost him over 86½ cents with the skirts off. Washington county unwashed wool shrinks 65 per cent, yielding 35 pounds of clean scoured wool at 80 cents; the free trade price for wool would make the unwashed fleece worth 28 cents in the New York market. It cost at least 2 cents per pound to get it to the eastern market which would profit to local middlemen. The outside free trade price on the farm for unwashed fleece would be not over 6 cents per pound, such wool as our friend sold there recently at 14 cents, and this wool that was worth 14 cents under the free wool administration of Grover Cleveland was worth 28 cents on the day that General Harrison left the White House, March, 1889.

Now, there has been no change in the tariff law since then, but the reason that this Pennsylvania farmer got 14 cents this year instead of 20 cents last year was because its free trade value is only 8½ cents, and the fall from 20 cents to 14 cents was discounting the effect of a free wool bill. The nearer we come to the passage of that bill the nearer will be the price on the farm in Washington county to the London price of 8½ cents for such unwashed as was worth 20 cents last March.

On page 360 of The American Economist of Nov. 3 is a table showing the price in London and also in the United States for the same grade of Ohio wool and Australian wool from the time of the passage of the tariff law of 1867 up to 1891. The average difference in the price of wool of the same shrinkage of the same blood and of the same diameter of fiber was over 51 per cent lower in free trade London than in the United States under protection, and but for this American protection the London price would have been the American price, and the American woolgrower would have received less then half of the price he has for the past under 24 years of protection. Or, in other words, if the American farmer had sold his wool in London instead of in America, he would have received less than half of the prices actually obtained here.

JUDSON BATTEMAN & CO.

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.

BRITISH TIN PLATE TRADE.

Rejoicing In Wales at the Proposed Reduction In Our Duty.

In the Swansea district the procedure in connection with the abolition of the increased duties imposed on English produce imported by America is looked forward to with the very greatest interest because it is certain that included in the repeal will be the increased duty on tin plates, which has had such a serious effect on the steels Swansea industry. At present nearly half of the mills in the trade are idle, and directly it is certain about when the repeal will come into force there may be general preparations for a restart of the 200 mills or so now idle.

But much depends on the date fixed for the McKinley duty ceasing and the old low duty taking its place. It will be remembered that the date of the imposition of the McKinley tariff was pretty well known long before it came into force, and the consequence was that there was very active buying by Americans in order to get the plates delivered at the lower duty. The date reached, or at least the last day on which the shipment was possible for delivery before that date, there was an immediate cessation of buying, and a stagnation set in which continues even now.

This state of things might have been to a certain extent avoided if makers had accompanied the output as to prevent the American market being glutted as it was before the act came into force. Either the reverse will be the case now. Till it is known when the repeal will have effect, buyers will only buy such orders as are absolutely required for immediate consumption, and the date once reached there should be an immediate demand on a large scale for plates.

The great hope is that the repeal will be as soon as possible. It is believed that the repeal could become law next month, and the sooner the better. Of all things, it is hoped it will not be put off till June, as suggested, for that month is the busiest time, and it would be a very bad thing for the tin plate trade if the reduction of the tariff to be put off till then, for canners in their own interest would practically stop as they would not plates, for any purchased in excess of their actual requirements to the date named be of use to them.—Liverpool Cor. South Wales News.

The small ring of capitalists who received great MCKinleyism by which the Welsh tin plates from the United States, and who have since discovered that they were sadly out of their reckoning, are naturally "bucking" against the Wilson bill. The material reduction in duty is virtually involves the abolition of tin plate making in America.—Cardiff Western Mail.

Assuming, of course, that the measure is not destroyed beyond recognition in its progress through the two houses of legislatives and the senate, the reduction on tin plate from 2.1-3 cents per pound to 1 cent per pound is a most considerable concession and ought to stimulate exports from South Wales and so make up for the disasters of 1891-2.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Just Pickles Finds a Counterpart.

"It was the silver bill what not the Wilson bill that closed the mills and sent 5,000,000 workmen to begging bread," I said to a crowd of Democratic workmen in Paterson silk mills.

"How much does the old Cleveland buy?" asked Mike Fielding, one of the best weavers.

"Why, he bought $7,000,000."

"Yes, and the Republicans bought $410,000,000, didn't they?"

"They did, Mike."

"Now," said Mike, "why should there be prosperity and why should wages be high while the Republicans were buying $419,000,000, and the mills all stop, wages go down and the divil be to pay when Cleveland bought $7,000,000? It just wasn't the silver bill at all. It was cutting down the tariff that closed the mills. So long as we have a tariff we get high wages will be cut to match. The poor laboring man will have to stand it."

"But, Mike, you know the mills make the times as good as they were when Harrison went out?" I asked.

"Yes, and I know this Wilson tariff tinkering that is lowering our wages and closing the mills. Kill it, I say!"

"But, Mike," I said, "Mr. Cleveland says the Wilson bill will lower your wages, but it will make cheap goods and we can ship them to Europe. We'll gain a foreign market."

"Begin, begorry, it'll make chape wages too. We'll never sell a shirt in Germany till our wages are as low as theirs, and that's not coming in our time," Mike declared. What we want here, be gorry, is to make the $600,000,000 worth of goods which we now ship from Europe every year. If we hoyc can make these $600,000,000 worth of goods at good wages, we'll be swimming in our breeches. We get steady work with good pay, and a good protective tariff is the only thing that will do it. You hear Mike Fielding."

"Mike," I said, "you have set me to thinking," and I have been thinking about it ever since.

Should you want to buy a knife, make sure that you get one that was made in the United States. Knives are as high as good as those made elsewhere. They are cheaper, and they give employment to Americans, with whom you live and associate.

When you are going to buy a new hat, see that it has been made in an American factory by American labor. Honest Americans do not want their hats made in "London, you know."

NOTHING TO PAWN.

THE NEW YORK SHYLOCKS CLAIM TO BE STARVING.

The People Have All the Money, and "Uncle" Has the Goods—Have Never Seen Business So Dull—The Effect of Democratic Tinkering.

Times must indeed be hard when even the pawnbrokers complain of bad business. While all other branches of trade have managed to pull through the holidays with at least a small but profitable balance at the last of the year, the pawnbrokers, probably for the first time in their recollections, find themselves on the losing side of the ledger.

A reporter made a tour of New York city, visiting 100 pawnshops scattered about the east and west sides and Harlem. Out of all the shops visited only two of the owners admitted that business was improving, and that they were doing as well as last year. These two cases may be accounted for by reason of their long standing and popularity with the poor, even their clothes when necessity compels them to raise money to buy food.

The pawnbrokers, when asked for an explanation of the falling off in their business, with one accord said, "The times are hard." Men who have deal, pawned all they had during the money panic last summer and now have nothing left to pawn and no money to redeem their pledges."

One man in Oliver street said: "I have been in the pawnbroking business for 45 years, and I have never seen business so dull. During the summer months we took in all we could handle, but money was so tight then that we advanced only one-half the time usually given. Even this did not stop the insiness. Naturally we expected a big boom in the fall, and that the goods would be redeemed, but we were mistaken. I have never had such a quantity of goods on hand. People have no money and can't pay the interest. I would not complain, but most of them are industrious people out of work, and the chance of getting my money back are very slim."

At a pawnshop on the Bowery the manager said: "If business in our line continues the same for another month, I shall be compelled to go to work. The outside public look upon the pawnbrokers as having money to burn. They think we are on 'velvet' all our lives, but if they could look at our books for the past year they would not think our income was much a good thing. It may look very odd for me to make this statement, but it is a fact nevertheless that when times are good with the people they are good with us. I can explain that this way: When, for instance, the head of the family is working steadily, the wife or daughter needs some little things in the middle of the week. They have not the wherewith and won't keep until Saturday night. They can't wait until then, but rush off to the pawnshop with some trinket, and on Saturday night come in and redeem it. Now things are different. Even if they have the trinket (which, by the way, is very doubtful) they do not dare to pawn it, for the fact that they went and did so was an assure of getting it out again. The result is that, instead of our turning our money over and over, we only have to sit down and grin and bear it."

"Pawnbrokers are starving," said a Grand street man, "for the people don't have all our money and we their goods. We would rather reverse the order of affairs, but I can see no prospect of such a change. During the past year we had more goods left with us after the tickets expire than ever before. With the hard times and competition we got no prices at all when we auctioned our nurerous pledges." To prove this assertion the pawnbroker brought out his books, which showed that at the last auction sale of unredeemed goods in December the pawnbroker lost $200.

"We would prefer to have the people redeem their pledges," he added, "for then we get the interest, and that's what we are in the business for."

A tour of the pawnshops along Second avenue found the proprietors all bemoaning the hard times and complaining of the hard times. Little or no business was being transacted at these shops, poor people having long since parted with their clothing, the principal article in trade on the east side.

Up in Harlem the same condition of affairs prevails. One pawnbroker on One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street said that he had not taken money to loan on clothing, adding that it did not pay for the room it occupied, and that the interest on all of the over being redeemed was very remote. Along Eighth, Ninth and Tenth avenues the pawnbrokers said business was going to the dogs. A pawnbroker on Eighth avenue, near Twentieth street, who does a flourishing business, said: "There'sno chance of improvement in our business until the people get work. At present it looks as if we were in business for our health."

In lower Sixth avenue and Hudson street, which are populated by the poorer class, the wail of the pawnbroker is loud and oal. No reason is given except that the men are out of work and the wives have nothing left to pawn except scraps of clothing, and that is refused as the majority of pawnshops.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Few Profit, Thousands Suffer.

Virginia is learning that, while free coinage may benefit W. C. Whitney and other administration favorites, it means the freezing out of employment thousands of her hardworking miners.—Philadelphia Press.

THE AVERAGE MAN.

His Size, Weight, Strength and Appearance From an Expert's Calculations.

"The average man" is a phrase frequently employed, but the conception of which it is the symbol is apt to be extremely shadowy. It has remained for Dr. Sargent of Cambridge to endow the conception with concrete form. With extraordinary industry he has applied himself to measuring chests and necks and hips by the thousands, and biceps and calves by the tens of thousands. He has calculated the strength, expressed in foot pounds, of innumbered forearms and backs. The results of his labors consist of two scale figures modeled in clay.

The first figure is the average, or "composite," of more than 9,000 Harvard men at the age of 21. This type is 5 feet 8 inches in height. He weighs 138 pounds. He has a lung capacity of 240 inches. His breadth of shoulders is 17 inches. His girth of natural chest is 33.8 inches; of inflated chest 36.3. His stretch of arms is 70.03 inches, which is 2.2 inches greater than his height. Thus one idiot after another is smashed with the hammer of cold fact, for the rigid law of ancient art was that the stretch of arms should be equal to the man's height. The girth of the type's head is 22.3 inches, of his hips 35.1 inches. The strength of his forearm is forty pounds, and of his back 308 pounds. Standing squarely, clean limbed, strong necked, he looks rather like a runner than a rower, but there is nothing sordid, nothing warped, nothing to indicate the decrepitude of a civilization of too many wheels, the stunting and abnormal, one sided development due to factory or office life.

In considering the other figure reluctant gallantry must give place to veracity, and it must be admitted that the man is the finer figure of the two. The face of the average college girl, like that of the other figure, is a "composite" also, and the best that can be said of it is that it is depressingly solemn in expression. The type is 5 feet 5 inches tall. She weighs 118 pounds. Her breadth of shoulder is 17 inches. The girth of her natural chest is 30.3 inches. Her girth of expand that about two inches. Her girth of hips is 35.4 inches. Her girth of head is 21.5 inches. Her stretch of arms is 65 inches. As the college girl is too sensible to constrict her waist to any considerable degree, so she is wise enough to give her feet plenty of freedom.

The type's foot is 9½ inches long. Her waist is 24 inches in circumference. Her legs are not well developed. Her girth of calf is only 13½ inches. In truth the figure has more frugility than that of her counterpart, without a corresponding gain in grace.

It is when he finishes the results of his observations as to temperament, however, that Dr. Sargent's conclusions rise closely to dangerous ground, for he declares that the typical college girl student is distinctly near sighted. This seems like a maliciously devised scheme on the part of the doctor to forestall criticism from the girls.

The shrewd, scientific expert has doubtless conceived the notion of putting their very criticisms in evidence to prove his sweeping assertion. He will scarcely succeed, however, in propitiating the ladies by the deprecatory remark that his lay figure is not that of an 18½ per cent girl, that it represents merely 50 per cent of their good points, and is halfway from the best to the worst.—Philadelphia Record.

Ways of a Captive Wildcat.

Everybody has heard of Nic Arend's wildcat. The cat was given Nic some months ago and ever since has been kept in the fort of the land. The cook, a colored woman at Nic's place, feeds the animal, but she manifested a great fondness for her. When she approaches the cage, he purrs in the most pleased manner, but anybody else comes about him he immediately growls and shows his teeth in defiance. The cat is perfectly satisfied with his home. Two or three times has the animal been accidentally left open, but he never even walked outside to see what the rest of the world looked like.

However, whenever it occurred that the cage door was left shut Nic always missed a chicken. The other day he saw the cat catch one. He simply stood down by the door and waited until the chicken, oblivious of danger, came along, and then he shot out his paw and had the chicken by the head. After he catches and kills the fowl he gives all the feathers a good, and almost as carefully as a cook and uses his mouth in the operation while holding the bird between his paws.—Florida Times-Union.

Rossetti's Grave.

Few, if any, visitors to London the last resting place of Dante Rossetti at Birch inaton, almost a mile from Westgate-on-sea. Some there are, indeed who have discovered the grave in a casual ramble through the churchyard of the little village, but they are few. This scarcity of visitors arises probably rather from ignorance as to where the poet-painter lies buried than from indifference. There must be many an admirer of Rossetti among the thousands who visit the various watering places of the south coast of England who will be glad to learn that within a few miles' distance lies the little village of Birchington, uninteresting in itself, but full of romance as the great teacher.

For a few years before his death Rossetti retired to the seclusion of a bungalow on the neighboring cliffs, where he was visited by a few select friends. Here it was he contracted building, overlooking a vast expanse of the German ocean, and died there on April 9, 1882. His grave lies close to the church porch, and the headstone is covered with beautiful carving, designed by Madox Brown.—London Illustrated News.

Devoted to the Welfare of Polk County

OFFICIAL PAPER, CITY OF CROOKSTON.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Dollar and Fifty Cents, if paid in advance to any Postoffice inside of Polk County. If published out of County 25 cents must be added for postage. If not paid in advance 25 per annum to any address.

THE JOURNAL'S article last week in regard to party politics in city election seems to meet with general approval and it looks as though the suggestions contained therein would be carried out. The sooner personal politics are dropped and party politics adopted, the better it will be for everybody concerned. Personal politics only tend to keep alive factions —the very worst element that can enter into the commercial life of a city. Members of different political parties can work together for the common good, but factions can never be united for any enterprise. It matters little what party controls the city, so long as we get a good administration, and when a party is made responsible, it is going to put forward its best men, and a candidate will have to have other qualifications than the mere fact that he is a "vote-getter."

THE impression some have tried hard to give out, that "Crookston business men generally favored the letting of the county printing to the highest bidder," was knocked silly, and fell with a dull, cold thud, in a verdict of a jury composed wholly of Crookston business men in the Ware libel case last week. It is not a fact that Crookston business men favored that deal, but it is a fact that it was almost universally condemned and the verdict was highly and emphatically approved almost unanimously so, the exception being the little coterie who were personally affected. Even Holston was forced to admit the truth of this statement after he heard that verdict and the expressions of our citizens concerning it.

ONE cannot fail to notice what a difference there is between the attitude of the two Grand Forks papers —the Herald and the News—during the prevalence of the epidemic prevailing there. The Herald puts on a brave face and earnestly seeks some sure means of relief, wisely counselling people not to lose their heads, while the News, in an ecstacy of fright, raves and howls against neighboring cities, (who themselves are suffering in a slight degree from the same evil) adding to the terror of its readers, thus helping to create a panic that might end in a stampede. Such papers as the Herald prove their true worth to a community in such times of sore trial as the people of Grand Forks are now experiencing.

The Grand Forks News continues to gratify its ravening propensities by insanely raving at Crookston. Meantime Crookston is shipping artesian water to Grand Forks to alleviate their distress. Crookston has an unlimited supply of the best artesian water in the world and Grand Forks is beginning to appreciate the fact by ordering liberal supplies. Meantime, we should judge by Bierly's paper, he still continues to drink river water —on the side. You are not obliged to do that, Bierly, Crookston has any quantity of artesian water.

IN every election that has been held since Grover assumed the helm we see some indications of a coming storm that will sweep the democratic party from the face of the earth and yet the same old wrangle for office goes on among the all the same as though they had come to stay. Now and then you see evidences that they begin to see the handwriting on the wall as one will say, "I have been a democrat" as though he didn't know just where it is at.

IF we may judge from present appearances the democratic congress will not accomplish any very important changes in the tariff laws before next fall and after that they will not have the power to do so, for congress will then be in the hands of the friends of true American progress. The tidal wave that has begun to sweep over the land will entirely redeem the country by next fall.

WE understand it now. For six weeks or so the Northfield News, usually pretty meaty, has been as barren of editorials as a lady's mouth is said to be teeth, and it now transpires that its editor, Joel P. Heatwole, has been nominated for mayor. It must be that Joel has been afraid to express an editorial opinion on any subject for fear that he would be accused of office-seeking.

As usual, when the Times makes a fool blunder it is trying to throw the blame all upon the JOURNAL. "If the JOURNAL had not commenced suit nobody would have known the depravity of that deal and the county would not have had all these extra costs to pay." The facts are that if the county had had a board that cared more for the interests of the taxpayers than it did for politics the necessity for these suits would not have existed.

The call of the Times young man is truly fearful. In spite of all evidence brought out, showing that the action of the board was clearly against the best interests of the taxpayers, in spite of the fact that the verdict of the jury condemns the action of the board, the Times yet has the gall to say that the action of the board was all right and in the interest of the taxpayers. The verdict of that jury condemns the action of the board in assessing the people of the county to build up the democratic papers.

TALK about garbled and one-sided reports! If there could have been anything more garbled, one-sided, false and unreliable than the so-called reports in the Daily Times of the Ware trial, we cannot imagine where you would find 'em. But they deceived nobody, and what carefully prepared they did serve it is hard to decipher. For a paper that makes such great pretensions as the Times these reports were decidedly rank.

THE late splendid republican victory in Duluth entitles that city to some recognition on the republican state ticket and it would seem that no one understands that fact better than Duluth. At last accounts she has a candidate for auditor, clerk of the court and treasurer. While she is entitled to something she is not entitled to all.

THAT manufacturers are beginning to believe that the present congress will not pass a tariff revision measure is seen in the fact that many factories are beginning to start up here and there. Could they be fully assured that the present laws would stand it would not be a week till every wheel in the land would be turning and business begin to wake up.

HON. HORACE B. STRAUT, of Shakopee, died suddenly in Mexico at 8 o'clock on Monday morning. Mr. Strait had represented Minnesota for 12 years in the lower house of congress and was extensively known throughout the state. He leaves a wife and daughter at Shakopee and a son who is in business in New York.

LAST week the JOURNAL announced the election of Galusha A. Grow, congressman at large in Pennsylvania by a majority of over 100,000. As large as that proved to be, it was too small by over 22,000 as it is shown on the face of later returns that he had over 182,000 and a few more precincts to hear from.

THE tariff tinkerers are about ready to have their amendments to the Wilson bill in the wrong. The bill will no doubt pass in its changed form and be returned to the House for concurrence. This body may or may not concurs as the spirit happens to move.

AGAIN the Times claims to be "vindicated" in the printing deal. If it is right to award the printing for the purpose of building up democratic papers without regard to the interests of the average taxpayers then the Times is vindicated. Otherwise not.

Erastus Wiman was arrested last week for forgery; was put into the tombs in New York and gave bail in the sum of $25,000. His counsel, ex-secretary Whitney, says that Wiman is not guilty of the charge preferred against him.

"WE'VE heard from the Keystone, the Quakers are out" is the way the old song used to run, and it seems to have lost none of its old-time significance in the figures, 182,000 majority for Galusha Grow!

THE appointment of Adam Bede as marshal of Minnesota has been confirmed by the senate and the democratic bosses are now exclaiming "where are we at?"

GRESHAM and Grove went fishing last week. They did not take their Hicks' almanac along and as a natural result got caught in a big storm.

THE president's private secretary says that Grover is sick—but he can't deny that the country is sick —of Grover.

It is rumored that President Cleveland is about to take a short leave of absence from Washington to be treated for a cancer in the face.

WONDER if the Ada Herald can see any political significance in the late land-slide in Pennsylvania. How's that, Nobby?

IF such men as Ben. Butler and Allen G. Thurman wreck themselves trying to accomplish what the populist money plank calls for it should be a warning to all small fry like Peffer and such small bore politicians.

J. J. Hill, of the Great Northern road, left New York for a trip to Europe.

WHAT'S the matter with Pennsylvania? SUE'S—ALL—RIGHT!

A Question of Nerve.

The following item taken from Frank Leslie's Magazine is as fine a comment on the tariff question as we have seen anywhere: "Why do free traders boast so incessantly of the 'nerve' required to vote for the Wilson bill? Roger Q. Mills said the other day. 'It is not resources we want, but nerve, with some, and more democracy with others.' No one ever heard a protectionist boast of the nerve required to pass the McKinley bill. A parallel case will explain. It required no nerve for Roebling to design and build the Brooklyn suspension bridge. It required intelligence. And with a sufficient intelligence in charge, the whole enterprise involved not a moment of danger, not a reason for loss of life. But Steve Brodie's achievement in leaping from that same Brooklyn bridge after Roebling had built it, required no intelligence, but plenty of 'nerve.' In some circles more people have heard of Brodie than Roebling.

"The fool that dried the Ephesian Shores
Was his mean degree and small of fame
Then even the race that built it."

So, because voting for the McKinley tariff required only the intelligence to comprehend the true workings of a tariff, such a vote required no 'nerve.' But voting to repeal it, at a time when the unemployed for ten months, of even the threat to repeal it, had cost the country tens of millions of dollars, requires 'nerve,' because it involves no intelligence—only rashness and 'more democracy."

THE REVIEW TABLE.

In an article that will appear in the March number of the North American Review, Governor Greenhalge, of Massachusetts, outlines his proposal for holding an informal conference of New England Governors to consider what steps are expedient or necessary for the preservation and advancement to the interests of New England.

WORK OF CONGRESS.

Tuesday, Feb. 20.

The session of the senate was devoid of special interest. Senator Daniel of Virginia concluded his speech on the Hawaiian question, and, while supporting warmly the course that has been followed by the administration, he declared that now there was nothing to do but recognize the new government and wish it godspeed. After Senator Daniel's speech, the bill for additional printing office facilities was taken up and discussed in a desultory manner the remainder of the day.

The debate on the Bland seigniorage bill was not broken in the house during the day. Roll call followed roll call until 4 o'clock, when, it being apparent that Mr. Bland could not muster a quorum on his proposition, he moved an adjournment.

Wednesday, Feb. 21.

Mr. Bland again failed to secure a voting quorum on the bill, and the whole day was without result.

A debate on the tariff that was very acrimonious was precipitated in the senate by some questions regarding the reconsideration of the bill in committee. It lasted over two hours.

Thursday, Feb. 22.

The senate held session in honor of Washington's birthday, and adjourned after eulogies.

The house got into another wrangle over a quorum. Several members objected to the familiar arrest and several times the sergeant-at-arms had to bring out his mace. No quorum was secured.

Friday, Feb. 23.

The senate was not in session.

The house repeated the programme that has been on for a week or more, spending the day in a fruitless effort to get a voting quorum.

Saturday, Feb. 24.

The senate was not in session.

In the house one more was added to the list of wasted days on the Bland bill.

Monday Feb. 26.

The senate held a very short session, adjourning shortly after 1 p. m. to give the Democratic members an opportunity to consider the tariff bill.

The proceedings of the house were full of Sensational Incidents, caused by debate on the Bland bill. Mr. Pence of Colorado accused the Republicans for submitting to Reed's whip, and Mr. Funston of Illinois denounced his Democratic brethren for their filibustering tactics. Reason was finally called to order and by a vote the Bland bill was passed by a large majority.

An opinion from Attorney General Olney to the effect that silver certificates are not lawful currency, but still are money.

Mr. Boutelle introduced a resolution in the house for the recall of Mr. Willis, minister to Hawaii.

A NEW INDUSTRY.

Eagle Iron Company's Furnaces Opened at Spring Valley, Wis.

SPRING VALLEY, Wis., Feb. 23.—The first cast of iron from the Eagle Iron company's furnaces in this city was made Wednesday morning at 10:30, and the fact demonstrated that low grade brown hematite can be converted into pig iron, from which the best quality of malleable and general foundry iron may be manufactured. This is the first successful attempt to use this quality of ore west of Ohio.

The annual output of the Spring Valley plant will be in the neighborhood of 25,000 tons of pig iron, or twice that many tons of ore, requiring 2,500,000 bushels of charcoal, also made here, for which 60,000 cords of wood will be consumed. There is now on hand 35,000 tons of ore, crushed, washed and sorted, ready for treatment. When all branches of the industry are in operation 300 more workmen will find employment.

WEALTH CANNOT BUY THEM.

Mrs. Lynn Linton Enumerates a Few of Life's Unpurchasables.

When Mrs. Lynn Linton forgets to be original and radical, she is capable of saying some fairly pleasant things. The idea that many things of value cannot be bought, and that those things which can be bought are only of secondary importance in the world, is not strikingly new. Two or three people had hit upon it before Mrs. Linton. But what she says about the unpurchasable things is not the less interesting and timely because they have been said ever since the deluge.

There is happiness, she tells us, that gold may not buy. "When the woman you love deceives you, and the portrait gem clasped worn over her heart shows another face than yours—when the husband you were unconventional enough to love in the fearless old fashion lies dead in your arms, and your whole future is darkened and storm riven—when your own has disgraced his name and by his own lack of honor has shattered and cast down on his mother's do your Cleisbothams and Turners, your Adamses and old Vesuvian glass ess the sunset? Does your splendid collection of first editions in their perfect bindings dry the tears which come to men's eyes as well as to women's, when the bitterness is full and by its very fullness overforce walls over? What do your fields and farms, your balance at the banker's, your carriages and horses do for you when your favorite daughter runs off with the groom, and her sister drowns herself in despair? No! Happiness is not to be bought."

Then there are love and honor and youth that the gold of the Indies will not purchase. And in these days when creams and lotions, dieting and exercises claim to put off the evil hour of age it is well to read what this very level headed woman says about youth.

"You may buy fashion cosmetics," she says, "artful enhancements, subtle dyes that look almost as good as the real thing, but you cannot buy youth nor beauty. In spite of all your care, and though you give 10 times for the value of me of a penny, you cannot put back the hands of the clock nor blunt the scythe of time.

"That enamel is cleverly done; that dyed, frizzed hair is a veritable work of art; those painted cheeks simulate the carnations of youth more credibly than in the days of your competitors, but enamel fact remains untouched—youth cannot be purchased and old age cannot be bought off. The poor old wrecked skin gradually grows more and more like parchment. The fading eyes lose their brightness, and not belladonna itself can bring back that dark line around the iris which age and weakened vitality replace by that all eloquent 'arcus senilis.'"

None of it is very new. It is not nearly so striking as her views on the "new woman," but still it is good to recall a few of these unpurchasable things in these days of dancing grandmammas and gentle bachelors of 60 or so.—New York World.

Reading a Maverick.

In a dell in the forest we espied some "mavericks," or unbranded stock. The ranchers are ever alert for a beef critter out half its ears gone and a big HF burned in its flank, and immediately they perceive one they lighten their cinchs, slip the rope from the pommel, put their hats on the back of their heads and "light out." A cow person can't suffer desperate riding over rocks and fallen timber, throws down and "hog tied," which means all four feet together. A little fire is built, and one side of the iron is heated to a white heat, with which a rawhide artist paints HF, in the sizzling flesh, while the cow kicke and bawls.

She is then unbound, and when she gets back on her feet the vaqueros stand about, gorge in hand, after the fist fighter fashion, and provoke her to charge. She charges, while they await the ugly sight springs and a disarming of their rags. They laugh and cry, "Bravo toro!" until she, having overcome her indignation at their impudence, sets forth down the canyon with her tail in the air. —From "In the Sierra Madre With the Panchers," by Frederic Remington, in Harper's Magazine.

The Largest Cities of Antiquity.

The greatest cities of ancient times were Babylon and Rome. Of the former is said to have had an area of 100 to 200 square miles. Its houses were three or four storied high, but palaces and gardens occupied much of the vast area, so that the population was not what these figures would seem to indicate. In fact, it is said by one historian that nine-tenths of this area were taken up by gardens and orchards. The total population of the city under Nebuchadnezzar and his son Evil-Merodach is estimated at upward of 2,000,000. Rome reached its greatest size during the fourth century of our era, and its population was then about 2,000,000.—Youth's Mail.

The Dictionary Habit.

"Yes, it's a good thing for a men to refer to the dictionary, but this practice can often be carried to excess," said a well known magazine writer. "Why, I've seen a man get so much addicted to that habit," he continued, "that he could not write an ordinary letter without turning to the dictionary three or four times in order to ascertain some big words that he could use. This, I think, is a very great waste of time, as he does not express his meaning a bit better than if he had used some shorter and really English words."

The Baby as a Fruit.

The people of Burmah believe that the ruby is a kind of fruit which will ripen if you give it time. They say that most rubies do not ripen simply because they are not allowed to do so. If you want to "ripen" the ruby in your ring, according to the Burmese idea, you must take your ring and lay it in the sun for one month without disturbing it at all, and at the end of that time it will be "ripe" and good to eat.—New York Journal.

"Only the Scars Remain,"

Says HENRY HUDSON, of the Jamec Smith Woolen Machine Co., Philadelphia, Pa., who certifies as follows:

"Among the many testimonials which I see in regard to certain medicines performing wonderful cures, cleansing the blood, etc., none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and developed running sores. Our family physician could do no good, and it was feared that the limb would be affected. At last, my good old

Mother Urged Me

to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. Now twelve years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and I take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

Cures others, will cure you

Mr. Albert Favorite of Kansas City, Kan., wishes to give publicity for the benefit of his experience with colds. He says: "I contracted a cold early last spring that settled on my lungs, and had terrible coughing from it when I caught another that hung on all summer and left me with a hacking cough which I thought I would never get rid of. I had used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy some fourteen years ago with much success, and concluded to try it again. When I had got through the bottle I was not my cough had left me, and have not suffered from a cough or cold since. I have recommended it to others, and all speak well of it." 50 cent bottles for sale by S. A. Wallace.

WORTH MILLIONS TO CANADA.

How Free Raw Materials Will Help Our Neighbors Across the Border.

Eli Stephens, who was formerly in St. John, N. B., when asked how the Canadians felt about the Wilson bill, replied:

"There is great rejoicing all over Canada. 'Now,' said the editor of the St. John Telegraph, 'we will have a Canadian boom. The McKinley bill knocked out the 40 lime factories about St. John, but free lime will soon start them up again. When the new Wilson bill is passed, we will make over $1,000,000 worth of lime around St. John and send it to the States. Our lumber ships will carry it to Boston. We will help our farmers and sailors.'"

"But how will this affect the 100 limekilns down at Rockland, Me?" I asked.

"Why, those KNOX, Lincoln and Waldo county limemakers have already closed down. We can get cure raw material cheaper here, and labor is cheaper in Canada, and we can knock the Yankees out or compel them to come over here and work for Canadian wages. This beats reciprocity, and there won't be any more talk in Canada about annexation after we get the Wilson bill."

"Then you don't want annexation?" I said.

"Not with free sheep, potatoes, cures, lumber, cheese, barley, hops and lumber. Now we will save all our lumber in Canada, dress it and knock out those Yankee sawmills. Even under the McKinley bill, we floated our logs over to your sawmills, with the bark on, as raw material. Now we will send you moldings and planed boards—manufactured lumber."

"Will this make lumber cheaper in the States?" I asked.

"Oh, no; but it will go up in Canada. We will get the benefit."

"Up on the St. Lawrence the other day," said Mr. Perkins, "I found the Canadian farmers quite rejoicing. They said:

"'Our sheep will be worth $1.50 apiece more in Canada as soon as the Wilson bill is passed. Our farms will be just as well off as yours, and better, too, for we still have a tariff against everything you make. We can make a "Botany Bay" of you Yankees, and you can't send a yard of cloth to us.'

"'But won't it make sheep and horses and beef cheaper in the States?' I asked.

"'Why, of course not. When the McKinley bill passed, the price fell in Canada just the amount of the tariff, and now they will go up again as high as they are in the States. You see, the products of 5,000,000 people don't affect the price of the products made by 65,000,000 people. The tail can't wag the dog. If we were bigger than the States, we would control your markets. The Wilson bill will give Canada an awful boom and kill annexation. If this taking off the tariff by the Wilson bill didn't benefit us Canadians, what would we be rejoicing about? Would we rejoice if you were to get the benefit? I think not. This bill is worth millions to Canada.'"—New York Sun.

SOME FIGURES

Given Out by Insurance Commissioner Smith of Minnesota—Big Fire Losses.

St. Paul, Feb. 20.—Insurance Commissioner Smith has completed that part of his report for 1893 which deals with fire insurance companies. As compared with the report of 1892, it shows large losses for the companies, the percentage of losses incurred to premiums received being 67, against 49 for last year. It cost the companies 35 per cent to do business, so that their record for 1893 leaves them 32 per cent worse than nothing. The statements of business for the years shows that the percentage of loss has only twice been higher, once in 1876, when it was 98 and again in 1880 when it was 106. The average ratio of loss has been 62.

The total amount of risks written in 1893 was $197,683,310, against $231,346,687 in 1892. The premiums received amounted to $3,809,331.68, against $3,181,223.85 for 1892. The average premium rate was $1.42, against $1.35 in 1892. The losses incurred were $1,490,913.09 for 1893 and $2,439,842.19 for 1892. These are the figures for the American companies. For foreign companies with branches in the United States there is less difference in the figures for the two years. They run as follows: Risks written in 1893, $63,334,987; 1892, $66,182,857. Premiums received, 1893, $1,078,005.30; 1892, $1,009,995; average premium rate, 1893, $1.81, 1893, $1.80; losses incurred, 1893, $533,106, 1892, $910,396.27; ratio of loss to premiums received, 1893, 67, 1892, 87.

The figures of the mutual companies are less complete. The risks for 1893 were $2,857,585, against, $2,851,214 for 1893; premiums, 1893, $77,609.22, 1892, $82,747.45, losses incurred, 1893, $38,-060.30, 1892, $46,068.86. The year was a bad one for fire companies and with the opening of 1894, 15 companies have withdrawn from this state and only one new company has been admitted. The losses in this state, however, have been lighter than many others.

Duluth and Winnipeg Earnings.

St. Paul, Feb. 28.—The gross earnings of the North Star Construction company, operating the Duluth and Winnipeg Railroad company for 1893, as reported to the railroad and warehouse commission, $326,971.95.

THE FIRST LADY OF IOWA.

The Social and Housewifely Accomplishments of Governor Jackson's Helpmeet.

The first lady of Iowa this winter is Mrs. Frank D. Jackson, the young and charming wife of the governor, and Des

MRS. FRANK JACKSON.

Moines society is in something of a flutter for the reason that for the first time in a number of years there is really a genuine matronial mansion in the capital, with a lady at the head of it, to make the social side of the administration one of its notable features. There is no official governor's mansion in the city, and heretofore the governors have usually lived at hotels. Governor Boies' regime was a quiet one in a social way, for he lived at a hotel, and social matters were looked after by his daughter Jessie, who was almost too young to cope with the responsibility. Governor Frank Jackson, however, has a beautiful home on Fourth street, where he and his amiable wife dispense the warmest hospitality.

Mrs. Jackson is a Canadian by birth and her maiden name was Miss Anna F. Brock. She and her future husband met for the first time at the state university, where both were students. Their acquaintance did not end when they left the university, although Miss Brock went to Council Bluffs to live, and Mr. Jackson began making his mark as a lawyer in Independence. In 1877 they were married, and four bright boys ranging in years from 14 to 3 have come to make their home happy. Mrs. Jackson is a woman of excellent taste, and the Jackson mansion is a model of comfort and beauty. Although she is devoted to her home and husband, she finds plenty of time to entertain with rare grace, tact and cordiality. She is well posted on politics and has always been in thorough sympathy with her husband's ambition to shine in the political world. She now enjoys the distinction of being the wife of the youngest governor ever elected in any state, ex-Governor Russell of Massachusetts excepted.

FAITHFUL TO HENRY CLAY.

Why Judge Norton Remained Unshorn For Fifty-seven Years.

The recent death of a man of picturesque and unique individuality brings to mind the men who guided the destinies of this nation a generation ago and recalls the stirring scenes prior to and consequent to the breaking out of the civil war. Judge Anthony Banning Norton was born in Ohio in 1817 and had as fellow students at Kenyon college Rather-ford B. Hayes, David Davis, Edwin M. Stanton, General McCook and others who became leaders of national fame. From boyhood he had been an ardent Whig, and on one occasion, when but 20 years of age, he was told by a political opponent "that until his beard were grown he would better remain in Jericho." He vowed that he should never be shorn nor his beard shaven until Henry Clay should be president of the United States. Though the vow was the hasty impulse of sensitive youth, it was ever faithfully kept.

JUDGE A. B. NORTON.

During this period of his career Judge Norton enjoyed the personal friendships of such men as Henry Clay, Horace Greeley, Millard Fillmore, Winfield Scott, Reverdy Johnson, W. H. Harrison and Tom Corwin. Prior to the war he edited newspapers at Austin and Fort Worth, Tex. Throughout he life Judge Norton remained a steadfast Union man, and when it became evident that war was inevitable his position in Texas had become so unpleasant that he returned to Ohio and remained there until hostilities were ended. Subsequently, under the provisional government of Texas, he accepted the post of judge of the district embracing Dallas and surrounding counties, which position he filled with honor to himself and satisfaction of all. Judge Norton was a delegate from Texas to every Republican national convention since the war and was vice president of the conventions of 1872 and 1876. He was appointed postmaster of Dallas by President Hayes and held that position until he was made United States marshal of the district of north Texas by the latter.

Hair For Hot Weather.

A French physician stationed in the Senegal has measured the temperature under the various head coverings in vogue among the colonial officers there. The temperature under the helmet of an officer of the marine was 122 degrees; under the subalterns' helmets, which are provided with ventilators, it is 89 degrees, and under the white colonial hat it is never more than 83 degrees, no matter how hot the day may be.

"George" Has a Manly Sound.

The name "George," says The Athenæum, continues to win the partiality of feminine writers of fiction in search of a masculine pen name. In calling herself "George Egerton" Mrs. Clairmonde, the author of "Keynotes," has followed the example set by George Sand, George Eliot and George Fleming.

M'LAURIN OF MISSISSIPPI.

One of Eight Brothers Who Have Made Their Mark.

The successor of Senator Walthall of Mississippi, Hon. A. J. McLaurin, is one of a family of eight brothers, all of whom are greatly interested in the politics of the state and are busy or have been in public office. Two of them were with the new senator in the last constitutional convention. The brothers live in different counties, and each of them has a strong following in the locality of his residence, so that it is possible for them to be of great assistance to one another in any matter of state or national politics upon which they may unite. Their father, though not wealthy, was prominent in the local affairs of Smith county, where he lived, and the sons may be said to owe naturally by their political proclivities.

Senator McLaurin is a lawyer and has lived at Brandon since 1876. He has one of the largest legal practices in the state and is considered one of the best criminal lawyers in Mississippi. He has held several public offices, the first of which was the district attorneyship of the Fifth district, to which he was elected in 1871, when he was only about 23 years of age. He has served with distinction in the state legislature, to which body he was elected in 1875, and he was an elector at large on the Democratic presidential ticket in 1888.

Mr. McLaurin was born in Rankin county, Miss., in 1848 and spent his early years on his father's farm in Smith county, doing "chores" and getting such an education as the county schools of the time afforded. In 1864 he attended the Summerville institute for part of a term, but caught the soldiering fever and enlisted shortly before the closing of the war. He was then but 19 years old, and after the war closed he went back to school and by 1867 found his education complete.

Returning then to his father's farm, he resumed his agricultural occupation in a strenuous endeavor to assist in maintaining so far as possible the losses sustained by the war. While so engaged he devoted what time he could to studying law, and in 1868 he was admitted to the bar at Raleigh, where he began at once to practice. Mr. McLaurin is married and has a family of seven daughters and one son.

THE ONLY WOMAN MAYOR.

Mrs. Annie S. Austin Enjoys That Rare Distinction.

Mrs. Annie S. Austin of Pleasanton, Kan., is probably the only woman mayor in the world today. She was elected chief magistrate of Pleasanton in January. Other women have been chosen to serve other town in a similar capacity, but generally in smaller places than Pleasanton, which has a population of 1,000. Mrs. Austin was nominated by a convention of women in which there were less than a dozen delegates. She represented the moral element, being an ardent adversary of saloons and gambling and an enthusiastic advocate of temperance and woman suffrage. She defeated her adversary, a saloon-keeper, by 30 votes.

The campaign was remarkable for its vehemence and ardor, and Mrs. Austin demonstrated a remarkable ability for electioneering. She met every argument of her opponent on the rostrum and completely outcanvassed him. Her election was especially gratifying to woman suffragists because of its apparent significance as to the outcome of the vote on the equal anfrage proposition in Kansas next autumn, and all the leaders of the movement have extended their congratulations.

Mrs. Austin is a robust and nigretentious woman of 42 years. Her husband is a railroad man, and she is the mother of three children. Her circumstances are extremely modest, even humble, but she is above the average in intelligence. Pleasanton's city council is composed of five men, and at their first meeting after Mrs. Austin's election she was waited upon by deputations with dignity. She discharged all the old policemen and put on a new force, with instructions to close up every saloon and gambling house in the town, and took care to see that her orders were obeyed to the letter.

Mrs. Austin is a Methodist and is prominent in the national councils of the Independent Order of Good Templars.

The Sofas.

The Sofas, whose raids led to the disastrous Anglo-French collision in the Niger region, are curiously mixed people. When their king, Samory, conquers a town, the young and strong are incorporated in his forces, the weakly are sold, so gradually all the negro races of the Soudan are represented in his ranks. The Sofas' heads are partially shaved, leaving two or three very long tufts of hair. They wear a jacket and very short trousers, iron rings on the arms and sundry fetiches—grigris—as ornaments. They are regular bush brigands, active, excitable and bloodthirsty. The chiefs get themselves up in theatrical brigand style, and all wear spurs fastened to their bare feet. They are splendid horsemen and deck out their steeds gayly with bells and fetiches.

An Unlawful Invitation.

An invitation to dinner in Japan commences as follows: "I beg pardon for thus insulting you in begging your company at my house to dinner. The house is small and very dirty. Off habits are rude, and you may not get anything to eat, and yet I hope that you will condescend to be present with me at 6 o'clock."

16 Boils at Once

Hood's Sarsaparilla Purifies the Blood and Restores Health.

Mrs. F. W. Stowell
Wilmot, S. Dak.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"About four years ago my wife was troubled with salt rheum. Although we tried nearly everything in sight, there seemed no relief until we got Hood's Sarsaparilla, and we cheerfully say two bottles her hands were entirely healed and all sores have been troubled. In December, 1892, my neck was covered with boils of a Scrofulous Nature.

There were sixteen of them at once and as soon as they healed others would break out. My neck finally became covered with pimples and scars. I then commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking four bottles the boils disappeared, leaving my neck clear and white as before. I recommended Hood's Sarsaparilla to several, feeling from my experience of the blood." F. W. STOWELL, Wilmot, South Dakota.

PROBATE NOTICE.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk—ss. In Probate Court, Special Term, Feb. 3rd, 1894.

In the matter of the estate of Betsey O. Syverson, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Jens Syverson praying for the appointment of personal estate and real estate of said deceased, and the taxes, assessments and other charges which is necessary for the purposes mentioned in said petition, and

It appearing by said petition that the personal estate of said Betsey O. Syverson, deceased, is insufficient to pay her debts, with the charges of administration, and to pay any taxes, assessments or other charges which are an existing lien upon her estate, or to pay for any improvements which are necessary to be made for preservation of her real estate, or any part thereof, and

It is therefore ordered, that all persons interested in said estate appear before this court on Monday, the 19th day of March A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the probate office in the city of Crookston, in said county, then and there to show cause why a license should not be granted to said petitioner, Jens Syverson to mortgage the said real estate of said deceased, or any part thereof, to obtain the funds for the payment of said debts, charges, taxes, assessments and liens and for the making of such necessary improvements.

And it is further ordered, that this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to the day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, Minn., in said county.

Dated at Crookston, the 23d day of February, A. D. 1894.

By the Court,
M. BENSON,
Judge of Probate.

THE LION PATH.

I dare not—
Look—the road is very dark—
The trees stir softly, and the bushes whisper
The long grass rustles, and the darkness moves
Here—there—beyond—
There's something crept across the road just now!
And you would have me go!
Great God! through that live darkness hideous
With stir of crouching forms that wait to kill!
Ah, hell! See there—and there—and there again—
Eyes! eyes! eyes glassy eyes close to the ground!
Look! Now the clouds are lighter, I can see
The long, slow lashing of the tawny tails!
And the set quiver of strong jaws that wait.
Go there! Not I! Who dares to go who sees
So perfectly the lions in the path!

Comes one who dares.

Afraid at first, yet bound
On such high errands as no fear could stay.
Eyes see he, with the lions in the path.
And then—

He dared a death of agony—
Outnumbered battle with the King of beasts:
Great struggles in the darkness of the night
Dared and went forth to meet—O ye who fear!
Feeling at every road and nothing there—
A wide, bare common road, with homely fields
And farms and men at busy roadside toil.
Some spitting kittens maybe in the grass.
—Charlotte Perkins Stetson in Boston Woman's Journal.

Saved by a Gypsy.

An incident of the Austro-Prussian war of 1866 was told by Baron Alexander Joseph to a party of friends. The story is told as follows in the Neue Tester Journal: On the eve of the retreat before the advance of the Prussian army, said the baron, he had a friend in the neighborhood of a Bohemian town. I was lodged in a peasant's cottage, when about midnight I heard the sentry challenging some newcomer. My adjutant entered and reported that a gypsy wanted to see me. I ordered the soldier (a gypsy) entered, and on my asking what was the matter he told me that the enemy was approaching to surprise me.

"The outposts have not heard anything suspicious," I said, "No, your highness, because the enemy is still a long way off." "But how do you know this?" I asked. "Come to the window, your highness," answered the man. "Do you see those birds flying over the wood toward the south?" "Yes, I see them. What then?" "What then? Why no bird birds sleep as well as men? They certainly would not fly about if they were not disturbed. The enemy is marching through the wood and has frightened all those birds."

"You are right, my lad. You can go." I at once ordered the outposts to be re-called, formed out the camp to be alarmed. An hour later the outposts were fighting with the enemy, and our camp was only saved by the keen observation of a single gypsy.

MEETING OF MEDICOS.

PHYSICIANS OF THE WORLD TO ASSEMBLE IN ROME.

Important and Interesting Questions to Be Discussed—Rome, the Eternal City. Career of Dr. Abraham Jacobi, Chairman of the American Delegation.

The cholera scare in Europe last year prevented the assembling of the eleventh international congress of the medical experts of the world, which was to have met in Rome in September, and it had to be postponed to a more convenient season. It was accordingly set down for the coming spring and will be held in the Eternal City from March 29 to April 25. The spring months are generally the busiest season of the year among American practitioners, and this fact will seriously interfere with the attendance from this side of the water. It is not considered likely that more than 150 delegates will be able to go from here.

At the last international congress of the kind held in Europe, which met in the summer time, there were nearly 700 American physicians and surgeons present among a total membership of more than 6,000.

Dr. Abraham Jacobi of New York is chairman of the American delegation. The national government has already selected representatives from the army and navy to be official delegates to the congress, and they are now awaiting orders to start for Rome. Arrangements have been made to enable medical men to attend the congress and to enjoy at the same time a tour through Europe. There will also be also an international exhibition in Rome devoted to medicine and hygiene.

The congress is held so that the leading physicians may be able to accomplish full information respecting new remedies and new apparatus. Four languages will be employed in discussing subjects —Italian, French, English and German—and the subjects will be divided into 19 classes, comprising all the medical and surgical specialties.

Among the attendants at the congress there will be few personages more interesting than Dr. Jacobi, the leader of the American delegation. He ranks among the most eminent of America's medical men and is an acknowledged authority on several branches of practice, notably on obstetrics and diseases of women and children. He has been honored beyond the usual ambitious dreams of the average medical man, having been elected president of many most important societies of physicians, including the New York State Medical society, over which he presided in 1882, and the New York Academy of Medicine, of which he became president in 1885.

Dr. Jacobi is visiting and consulting physician to a great number of the hospitals and eleemosynary institutions of New York and has been a professor in all the most important medical colleges of that city. As an author he has contributed much to the enrichment of medical literature, and several of his treatises are accepted as the "last words" to be said on the subjects with which they deal. He has had essays printed in the transactions of former international congresses—a fact which proves that his diploma is accepted abroad as well as in America.

The personal history of Dr. Jacobi is decidedly interesting. Few people know that he was involved in the German revolution of 1851, but it is so. He was 21 years of age in that year and had just received his degree of M. D. at the Bonn university. He was suspected and twice arrested in Berlin and Cologne and was finally convicted of treason and confined for two years in the prisons of Minden and Bielefeld. After his release he went to England and in the autumn of 1853 sailed for New York, where he has since become so famous. Dr. Jacobi is a native of Westphalia and was born May 6, 1830.

No account of Dr. Jacobi would be complete without some reference to that other famous Dr. Jacobi, his wife. Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi is hardly less eminent than her husband, and on many matters her opinions are accepted as quite as authoritative as his. She easily outranks all other women physicians and her standing in the profession was indicated by her appointment as a professor in the Post Graduate Medical college in New York. She was professor of materia medica in the Woman's Medical college and dispensary physician in Mount Sinai hospital in the metropolis for a great many years and is the author of a number of valuable medical classes.

Dr. Mary Jacobi is the daughter of the late George P. Putnam, the New York publisher. She studied at the Woman's Medical college in Philadelphia and at the New York College of Pharmacy. From the latter institution she was the first woman to graduate, as she was also at the Ecole de Medicine in Paris, where she took her degree in 1871. She had a hard time matriculating at the Paris colleges and probably would not have succeeded at all but for the friendly intervention of United States Minister Washburn. Mrs. Jacobi is and has been a constant and valued contributor to the current medical literature of the day. An essay of hers took the Boylesion prize at Harvard in 1876.

NO LONGER DEMOCRATS.

A Chicago View of the Glass and Building Trades as Affecting Labor.

Mr. George F. Kimball, the well known jobber of window and plate glass at Chicago, has submitted for publication the following discouraging views regarding the trade:

"It is difficult to speak of the conditions in the glass trade without seeming to be a prophet of hard times. The tariff agitation, resulting as a revision that apparently means disaster to the manufacturing and jobbing branches of the glass trade, has affected sales until it hurts every one engaged in the business from the laborer up and down. Speaking in general terms, I should say the volume of business in glass has been decreased fully 20 per cent as compared with last year, and if it had not been for the World's fair and the business which followed as a result—or its presence—Chicago's glass trade would have been at least 33 per cent less than it was a year ago.

"Studying the situation as carefully as may be, there seems to be no important factor in the trade disturbances outside of the tariff revision proposed by the administration. The glass trade has suffered ever since Mr. Cleveland came into power from the knowledge that the tariff schedule would be lowered and otherwise disturbed. The result has been a decrease in purchases by jobbers, a consequent reduction of manufacture, followed by the discharge of large numbers of workingmen and the shutting down of many large plants. Today only two plate glass factories are running, and less than 35 per cent of the window glass factories are at work.

"The jobber who has may stock at all is glad to dispose of it at cost, and the man who has no stock is waiting to see what Congress is going to do before he purchases.

"Another factor in the business is the absence of the men who intend to build. Ordinarily permits are taken out in the fall for buildings so the foundation may be laid and everything got in condition for completion early in the spring. So the fall permits indicate in a measure what is to be done in the way of building during the ensuing year. The permits issued this fall show that very little construction is contemplated during the winter and coming spring. Taking all the indications, I cannot see where the glass manufacturers and jobbers are to get any business in the immediate future, and I do not look for anything like a resumption of favorable conditions before late in the summer of 1894 or early in the fall.

"This is bound to affect labor in the glass manufacturing and kindred trades. If the duty on glass is reduced 50 per cent, it must, in my opinion, come off the laborers' wages. The material in a pane of glass does not amount to anything as compared with the cost of labor in that pane—for instance, a pane of glass selling for $100 in Chicago has raw material in it worth perhaps $3. Any reduction in the selling price must come from the cost of labor. Take our polishers in this country, and they are paid $2.50. In Belgium women are employed to do the same kind of work and get only 20 cents a day for it. If the duty on Belgium glass is taken off, the American polisher can expect to see his wages cut down just to the extent of the reduction in the tariff. It is practically determined already by the large manufacturers that they will have to cut wages 50 per cent if the tariff proposed by the Wilson bill is put into effect.

"I am a Democrat myself, and most of my men voted for the Democratic candidate at the last election, but in the face of the situation not one of them would do it again if the opportunity offered."

Consistencies of the Wilson Bill.

Potatoes, a northern and western farm product mostly, a tariff is proposed a. 10 cents per bushel, or 20.78 per cent ad valorem. But on Peanuts, exclusively a southern product, the proposition is to be 1 cent per pound, or 72.86 per cent ad valorem.

Hoop iron, when used for cotton ties, to cover bales of southern cotton, is to be free of duty, but Hoop iron, when used to cover bales of hay, the product of the prairies, eastern and western farmer, is to be taxed 30 per cent ad valorem.

Iron ore is placed upon the free list, but Kaolin, a product of South Carolina, is protected by a duty of 25 per ton, or 36.38 per cent ad valorem.

Apples, eggs and cabbages, which are products of the energy of the northern, eastern and western farmers, are put upon the list so as to suffer from competition with the almost pauper labor of Canada, but

Rice, which is exclusively a southern product, has been the object of very tender care and solicitude. Mr. Wilson and his associates had forgotten, when rice was under consideration, the proposition which they laid down of ad valorem duties being the only proper ones, and protected their darling southern product by making specific duties covering every possible form in which the article could be imported. The duty on cleaned rice reduced to an ad valorem basis is 40 per cent, but these gentlemen have informed the northern manufacturers of cotton that they would not submit to higher ad valorem duties than 40 per cent.

Avoid the sign "imported," avoid things "imported," avoid the tailor who owns the business but "imported" suitings; avoid the shops that announce nothing but the "imported" silks, the "imported" glassware, the "imported" china, the "imported" bric-a-brac, the "imported" textiles; avoid the cigar dealer who would sell you only "imported" cigars, which may carry the filth of foreign countries; avoid the grocer who would sell you "imported" dried fruits, which may carry the germs of disease, and avoid the newspaper which teaches the "imported" idea and advocates free trade.

JESSIE OF LUCKNOW.

A FAMOUS CASE OF CLAIRVOYANCE GRAPHICALLY RELATED.

When the Besieged Had Lost All Hope, the Scotchwoman Heard the Slogan Which Announced That the Highlanders Were Coming to the Rescue.

In conversation between a distinguished judge of admiralty and an editor the articles of Mark Twain's on telepathy usually came into talk. Many cases were cited, and the judge alluded to the remarkable story of Jessie Brown. It will be new to many, and it is given here with as it appeared in a letter to the London Times, the latter being written by a lady who was the wife of an officer at Lucknow:

"On every side death stared us in the face. No human skill could avert it any longer. We saw the moment approach when we must bid farewell to earth, yet without feeling that unutterable horror which must have been experienced by the unhappy victims at Cawnpore. We were resolved rather to die than to yield and were fully persuaded that in 24 hours all would be over. The regiment had said so, and all knew the worst. We women strove to encourage each other and to perform the light duties which were assigned to us, such as conveying orders to the various posts, carrying the men with provisions, especially cups of coffee, which we prepared day and night.

"I had gone out to try to make myself useful in company with Jessie Brown, the wife of a corporal in my husband's regiment. Poor Jessie had been in a state of restless excitement all through the siege and had fallen away visibly during the last few days. A constant fever consumed her, and her mind wandered occasionally, especially that day, when the recollections of home seemed powerfully present to her. At last, overcome with fatigue, she lay down on the ground, wrapped in her plaid. I sat beside her, promising to awake her when, as she said, her father should return from the plowing.'

"She fell at length into a profound slumber, motionless and apparently breathless, her head resting in my lap.

"I myself could no longer resist the inclination to sleep, in spite of the continual roar of the cannon. Suddenly I was aroused by a wild, unearthly scream close to my ear. My companion stood upright beside me, her arms raised and her head bent forward in the attitude of listening.

"A look of intense delight broke over her countenance. She grasped my hand, drew me toward her and exclaimed: 'Dinna ye hear it? Dinna ye hear it? Aye, I'm no dreaming! Hi! the slogan o' the highlanders! We're saved! We're saved!' Then flinging herself on her knees she thanked God with passionate fervor. I felt utterly bewildered.

"My English ears heard only the roar of artillery, and I thought my poor Jessie was still raving, but she darted to the batteries, and I heard her cry incessantly to the men: 'Courage, courage! Hark to the slogan—the Macgregor, the grandest of them all! Here, help at last!'

"To describe the effect of these words upon the soldiers would be impossible. For a moment they ceased firing, and every soul listened with intense anxiety. Gradually, however, there arose a murmur of bitter disappointment, and the wailing of women who had flocked to the spot burst out anew as the colonel shook his head. Our dull lowland ears heard only the roar of the musketry.

"A few moments more of this and I, like sequense, of this agonizing hope, and Jessie, who had again sunk on the ground, sprang to her feet and cried in a voice clear and piercing that it was heard along the whole line. 'Will ye no believe it noo? The slogan o' the Highlanders! but the Campbells are coming. D'ye hear? D'ye hear?

"At that moment all seemed, indeed, to hear the voice of God in the distance, when the pibroch of the highlanders brought us tidings of deliverance. For now there was no longer any doubt of the fact. That shrill, penetrating, ceaseless sound, which rose above all other sounds, could come neither from the advance of the enemy nor from the work of the sappers. No, it was indeed the band of the Scottish bagpipes, now shrill and harsh, as threatening vengeance to the foe, then in softer tones seeming to promise succor to their friends in need.

"Never, surely, was there such a scene as that which followed. Not a heart in the residency of Lucknow but bowed itself before God. All by one impulse, one impulse fell upon their knees, and nothing was heard but bursting sobs and murmured voice of prayer. Then all arose, and there rang out from a thousand lips a great shout of joy, which resounded far and wide and leaptnew vigor to that blessed pibroch.

"'To our cheer of 'God Save the Queen' they replied by the well known air, which that moves every Scot to tears, 'Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot?' After that nothing else made anything sound on me. I scarcely remember what followed. Jessie was presented by the general on his entrance to the fort, and all the officers' banquet her health was drunk by all present, while the pipers marched around the table playing once more the familiar air of 'Auld Lang Syne.'" Whittier's poem, "The Pipes at Lucknow," and Robert T. S. Lowell's "The Relief of Lucknow" are both founded on this same incident.—Baltimore American.

Matrimonial Item.

Chumly—How the mischief did you come to marry that old widow? Why didn't you marry the daughter?

Benedict—I thought over the matter carefully. If I had married the daughter, I'd have had the mother on my hands anyhow. Then I'd have had both on my hands, but as it is, now that her mother is provided for, very likely somebody else will marry the daughter, and then I'll only have one of them to provide for.—Texas Siftings.

BANG FOR HIS LIFE.

The Disagreeable Alternative Frederick Augustus Presented to Mistress Abell.

John Abell, a celebrated singer and musician who lived in the reign of Charles II, had a very great notion of himself and would not perform unless he pleased. There is a funny story told of how he was once made to sing against his will.

While traveling abroad for pleasure he came into the town of Wurzen. News was brought to the palace of the famous English singer's arrival, and Frederick Augustus, king of Poland, immediately sent word that he desired Abell to appear before him.

"Tell his majesty," replied John curtly, "that it suits me not."

Back went the court messenger with a wry face. He knew his master's temper too well.

"Well, Master Abel," thundered the king, "that I will have him come! And take you, boy, three stout fellows with you."

The messenger and the three stout fellows between them managed to carry out the royal wish and presently marched triumphantly up to the palace with their unwilling captive.

The king was awaiting them in the great hall, where he had seated himself in a balcony that ran all round the sides. Above him an immense chair hung from the roof by a rope.

"Now, then, into the chair and up with him," cried Frederick Augustus, with a chuckle. "We'll soon see if our song will sing in his cage. Up with him, my merry men all!"

And up in the air swung Abell, who still refused to open his mouth. When he gave a glance downward, however, he changed himself. Into the hall beneath, with a number of wild beasts had been turned loose.

"Sing, sirrah!" the king shouted, "or down you go to play with my brown babies."

One look at those "brown babies," growling and snarling below in a very unbabylike manner, wassufficient to convince the stubborn John. Sing he did, and he often used to declare in after days that he never sang so well in his life as when he was hanging there, a hundred feet high above the fierce beasts.—New York Journal.

Don't Try to Chent a Lawyer.

A young lawyer, just starting in his profession, hung out his sign in a town where there was only one other lawyer. He was very busy.

A close fisted old fellow, thinking to get legal advice for nothing, called upon the young man and contrived in a sort of neighborly way to get some legal questions answered. Then, thanking the young man, he was about to leave, when the young man asked for a $5 fee. The old fellow went into a violent passion and swore he never would pay. The young lawyer told him he would see him.

So the old fellow went down to see the judge and said:

"That young scamp that's just come into town! I dropped in to make a neighborly call on him, and he charges me $5 for legal advice."

"Did you get it, then?" said the judge.

"But have I got to pay it, judge?"

"Of course you have."

"Well, well," said the man, "I suppose I must," and he started off.

"Hold on," said the judge, "aren't you going to pay?"

"Pay you? What for?"

"For legal advice."

"What do you charge?"

"Ten dollars."

The result was that the old fellow had to pay $5 to the young lawyer and $10 to the old one.—Toronto Globe.

The Gallery Gods' Applause.

Lawrence Barrett once told me of a conversation he had with Edwin Booth, who had received an ovation upon which an ovation given him by a crowded house on the opening night of an engagement. "The wretched music to my ears," said the great tragedian, "is the shouting of the boys in the gallery. I know they are not applauding because I have reputation or because they wish to make a display. They simply give vent to their natural enthusiasm. When they shout, I know that I am giving a good performance. As for the parquet, it may clap its hands out of politeness. A dramatic critic who had certain notions as to how clothes should be read will applaud if I read it his way; otherwise he will remain quiet. I can never analyze the applause of the front rows, but the gallery is sincere in its likes or dislikes."—Chicago Record.

Disappointing.

She was a very cultured and fashionable young lady, and she was only seven years old, and she was a resident of New York. A gentleman calling on her parents had an opportunity to have a brief tete-a-tete with her.

"I presume," he said, "that when you grow up you will marry, as all little girls do?"

"No," she replied languidly. "No, I hardly think I shall."

"Indeed! That will be so disappointing."

Possibly it may be to mamma and in the young gentleman, but not to me, I fancy," and she lolled back in her chair quite tired to death, don't you know.—Detroit Free Press.

Unappreciated.

A single word sometimes reveals a man's innate character.

"Who are those girls playing a duet on the piano?" asked one man of another at a evening party.

"Ons of them is the daughter of the hostess," was the answer.

"And who is her accomplice?"—London Tit-Bits.

Excusable.

Customer—Waiter, this hullock's heart is very badly cooked.

Waiter—Well, sir, the fact is, the cook's been crossed in love, and whenever he has anything to do with a 'art he upsets him—that he doesn't know what he's a-doin of.—London Million.

Protection's Electric Current.

The McKinley tariff is probably the most learned and scientific composition of protectionism ever known. It has attached to it the machinery whereby the electric current of reciprocity can be turned on it at any moment it may be thought best.—New York Sun.

That is just the matter with it. As an article of protection it did just what protection is intended to do—it increased the opportunities for labor by increasing production. This increased production decreased the cost of manufactured goods to consumers and at the same time increased the price of raw materials to producers of such goods. "The electric current of reciprocity" has enabled us to negotiate those treaties which The Daisy Post of Birmingham, England, denomces as "those tuneless and preposterous treaties with South American protectionist states which have worked so much mischief for British trade in those parts."

It is because the McKinley tariff has done all of these things that it is to be destroyed. The threat to destroy it and reverse the policy that since 1860 has so developed our manufactures that we have advanced from the position of the third manufacturing country to the undisputed occupancy of the first place in bringing universal want through the sudden cessation of production, showing as once more how thoroughly dependent prosperity is on commercial confidence, and how utterly commercial confidence has been dissipated by the threat of tariff legislation that is based on the interests of alien capital and the extension and prosperity of alien commerce and manufacturing.

Those Pimples

Are tell-tale symptoms that your blood is not right—full of impurities, causing a sluggish and unsightly complexion. A few bottles of S. S. S. will remove all foreign and impure matter, cleanse the blood thoroughly, and give a clear and rosy complexion. It is most effectual, and entirely harmless.

Chas. Heaton, 79 Laurel Street, Phila., says: "I have had for a long time in my blood which made me afraid to shake hands with people would be red, then covered over in a fine pimply rash. After taking three bottles of S. S. S. my face is all clear and smooth, to feel more than pleased. I advise anyone suffering as I did to take S. S. S."

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE IN THE payment of the sum of one hundred and eighty-fifteen hundredths (180-15) dollars and interest, which is claimed to be due at the date hereof on a certain mortgage duly executed by Peter Larson and Ruby Larson, his wife, to Ole Lerdal and bearing date the 23rd day of December, A. D. 1890, and given to secure the payment of the sum of one thousand and eight hundred dollars interest thereon payable annually, which said mortgage with the power of sale therein contained was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Polk and State of Minnesota on the 29th day of December A. D. 1890, at 9 o'clock a. m. in Book 32 of Mortgages on page 32, and it being expressly provided in and by said mortgage that if default be made in the payment of the interest or any part thereof on said mortgage indebtedness by the said mortgagors, their heirs or assigns, all moneys with the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging or appertaining, should become due and payable at the option of the mortgagee, and it being further provided by said mortgage that in case default should be made in the payment of the interest or any part thereof on said mortgage indebtedness by the said mortgagors, it shall be lawful for the said mortgagee to declare the whole amount of said principal sum and interest at once due, and

Whereas there is now due and payable on said mortgage and secured thereby the sum of one thousand nine hundred and eighty-five dollars and the further sum of fifty dollars attorney fees as provided in and by the terms of said mortgage, in case of any proceeding having to be instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgages, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz: The Northeast quarter of section three, township one hundred and forty-four (144) north of range forty-six (46) west of the Fifth Principal Meridian with the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, which sale will be made by the sheriff of said county, at the front door of the District Court House in the City of Crookston, Polk County, Minnesota, on the 30th day of March A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock of the forenoon at said day at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises and fifty dollars attorneys fee as stipulated in and by said mortgages, and no proceedings in a due foreclosure allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of sale as provided by law.

ANTWERP'S BIG FAIR.

HOW THE UNITED STATES WILL BE REPRESENTED THERE.

The Belgian Exposition Will Cover Two Hundred Acres, but Nearly Half the Buildings Could Be Put in Manufactures Hall at Chicago—American Exhibits.

The great financial and artistic success of the World's fair in Chicago seems to have inoculated the nations of the earth with the international exposition craze. Close upon the heels of the unparalleled Chicago success came the California Midwinter International exposition, the Polish International exposition in Lemberg, and, third, but not least, the Antwerp International exposition of 1894, under the patronage of Leopold II, king of the Belgians.

Although the Antwerp exposition will be a small affair compared with the mammoth magnificence of our own White City, it will be a notable illustration of the world's progress and will attract widespread attention. The grounds will be 200 acres in extent, and the buildings will cover about 70 acres. An idea of the difference in size between the two expositions will be made apparent when it is remembered that the World's fair covered 666 acres, or over three times the space that the Antwerp exhibition will occupy. A moment's calculation, too, will show that nearly half of the Antwerp buildings could be built inside the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building alone—a building that covered nearly 31 acres and was the largest structure under one roof in the history of the world.

Notwithstanding these facts, Antwerp will have an exhibition well worth seeing, and all patriotic Americans will be pleased to know that the United States will be represented by one of the very finest buildings on the grounds. This structure will be of the modern renaissance style, and as it has been awarded one of the best locations and is an architectural triumph it will be almost as beautiful and conspicuous as the Galerie de l'Industrie, or main building of the exposition. The American building will be 240 feet long and 150 feet broad and will be constructed of iron, steel and glass after the manner of the great buildings at the White City. Among other things, the building will be in the nature of a clubhouse for Yankees in a strange land, but the main features will be an imposing display of American manufactures, to the end that our m-rkets abroad may be enlarged.

Among the examples of Yankee progress that will be exploited are an American shoe factory in operation, a model city fire department, an ambulance service and an exhibit of the wonders American genius has evolved with electricity. A monster Yankee soda fountain will also open the Belgians' eyes and tickle their palates with a delicious cold orange phosphates. American products will be found in every building of importance, and some idea of the magnitude of our exhibit may be gained from the fact that nearly 150,000 feet of space on the grounds will be used in showing the world what Uncle Sam has done for it.

It is believed that fully 1,000 prominent American firms will be represented at the exposition. Our exhibit will be conducted by a corporation styled the American Propaganda, a permanent organization designed to represent the manufacturers of the United States at future international exhibitions wherever and whenever held. This concern has been appointed American agent of the exposition, and it will control all space occupied by manufacturers of the United States. The commission appointed to look after the interests of the United States is presided over by the Thomas R. Bryan who was commissioner general of the World's fair and numbers among its members President Thomas W. Palmer of the Columbian exposition and many other well known Americans who gained valuable experience as officials at the Chicago fair.

The Antwerp exposition will be opened with imposing ceremonies by King Leopold II on May 5 and will last until Nov. 12. During its continuance the Antwerp Royal Society of Fine Arts will hold a special exhibition of painting, sculpture, engraving and architecture, to which the artists of all countries have been invited to contribute. The Belgian government has also asked all foreign powers of importance to send exhibits to the exposition, and judging from the hearty responses received the enterprise will be a financial and artistic success.

The amusement loving public will not be forgotten by the management, for while there will be no Midway plaisance the grounds will be provided with numerous theaters, music pavilions and other places of entertainment. There will be no Ferris wheel, but the Belgians have planned a castle in the air which, if it ever leaves the world of fancy for the world of fact, will rival the Pittsburg inventor's creation in daring and magnitude. The castle will be suspended from a monster captive balloon that will rise 1,500 feet in the air. Balloon elevators will convey sightseers from the ground to the castle, from which a magnificent view may be obtained. In case of a storm the castle may be lowered to the ground in half an hour.

Antwerp is a picturesque city of about 260,000 inhabitants. It is strongly fortified and is surrounded by 13 miles of massive ramparts. In the fifteenth century it was the center of European commerce and is now a very important port. Its harbor—one of the finest in the world —will easily give safe anchorage to 1,000 vessels of any size.

THOMAS GODBEARSIDED.

A Man Who Bears That Peculiar Name Tells How It Originated.

The register of the Girard Homes recently recorded the arrival in the city of Thomas Godbearsided of Barrow-in-Furness, England. Being approached upon the subject of the oddity of his surname, Mr. Godbearsided said:

"Yes, I suppose the name does sound very odd to Americans, although such names are not altogether unusual in England and especially in Lancashire, which was a stronghold of the Roundheads or Puritans in Cromwell's time. My home is in Barrow-in-Furness, which is in Lancashire. My ancestors prior to Cromwell's time were all royalists. The family name was Elliot. A younger son renounced the religious faith and political opinions of his forefathers and became a Puritan. As was usual in such cases he abjured his carnal name of Charles Elliot and took the inspired one of Ezekiel Godbegraised.

"There is quite a romance connected with this ancestor of mine. As fell in love with the only daughter of a Colonel Fielding in the Cavaliers' army, and not being able to obtain her father's consent to their marriage Ezekiel abducted her and for two years kept her hidden in a dreary house that stood near the little town of Formby, where a son was born. After a battle a little to the south of the River Mersey between the Cavaliers and Roundheads her brothers discovered her hiding-place and carried her off to Old Furness abbey. In the hurry the child was left behind, but as a result of the mother's pleading one of the brothers returned to Formby to get it.

"In the meantime Ezekiel had discovered his loss and removed the child. Then the followed the brother back to Furness abbey, but arrived too late. The brother and sister had set sail from Fleetrow beach for the isle of Man. A storm came up, and Ezekiel arrived just in time to see the boat founder. He returned to his child more bitter against the royalists than ever and brought the child up with the same sentiments.

"At the close of the war Ezekiel adopted the trade of a weaver and settled in Barrow-in-Furness. Thus the name was perpetuated, the stern commands of the father forbidding the son to throw off the fanatical nickname when the heat of Puritanical zeal had given away."—Philadelphia Times.

The Different Londons.

The size of London is somewhat indefinite, but may be said to cover about a square mile. The postal district covers an area of 300 square miles. The police district extends still further, covering an area of 687 square miles. On the other hand, the parliamentary London is much narrower. It consists of 10 horseshoes, of which the city of London, although the smallest—having 50,563 inhabitants in 1861—is represented by four members on account of its commercial and financial importance, while each of the other nine, although larger, is represented only by two. Westminster, 256,-413; Chelsea, 358,011; Marylebone, 477,-555; Hackney, 302,437; Finsbury, 493,-916; Tower Hamlets, 451,194; Greenwich, 370,112; Southwalk, 207,365; Greenwich, 107,822.

Put together, these 10 boroughs represent only a population of about 3,000,000, and the remainder of the inhabitants of London may belong to nonincorporated electoral districts. Generally, however, the area of the city is determined by the area under the operation of the metropolitan local government act, which is also adopted by the registrar general of the census. According to the definition, London covers an area of 122 square miles, forming parts of the counties of Middlesex, Surrey and Kent.—Baltimore American.

Costly Meals.

The costliest meal ever served, as far as history shows, was a supper given by Aelin Verus, one of the most lavish of the latter day Roman aristocrats. The supper was only intended for a dozen persons, yet its cost was 5,000 sesterlia, which would amount to $48,000 in English money, or nearly a quarter of a million dollars.

The celebrated feast given by Vitellius, a Roman emperor of those degenerate days, to his brother Lucius cost a fraction over $200,000. Lampridius says that this banquet consisted of 2,000 different dishes of fish and 7,000 different fowls, besides other courses in proportion. Vitellius, fortunately for the world, did not reign very long; otherwise the game preserves of Libya, Spain and Britain would have been exhausted.

It may not be out of place to mention here that the records are a curious point of history that a single dish on the table of Heliogabalus Emilius was worth $200,000.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Lights Went Out.

His royal highness the Prince of Wales was present at a noble lord's once fogeous with all fashionable London, and after dinner the best musicians, both vocal and instrumental, were preparing to display their talent, when suddenly out went the light, and performers and audience were left in total darkness. As the light was electric and was supplied from a private engine which had chosen this inopportune moment to go completely wrong, there was nothing for the giver of the feast to do but to collect all the available bedroom candlesticks and empty bottles and stick candles all over the place. The effect was most comical and seemed to cause amusement to everybody but the host.—San Francisco Argonaut.

He Had His Reward.

It was in a large department store that a gilded youth drifted up to the candy counter.

"Do you know," he said to the pretty young woman in charge, "if I were the proprietor of this establishment I should dismiss you?"

"Why?" she asked indignantly.

"In order to give the candy a chance," he answered.

And she gave him 1½ pounds of 75 cent candy for 60 cents.—Detroit Free Press.

PROBATE NOTICE.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, County of Polk—ss. In Probate Court. Special term, January 16th, 1894.

In the matter of the estate of Halvor Johnson deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Andrew Johnson of the county of Polk representing among other things that Halvor Johnson late of the county of Polk in the state of Minnesota on the 26th day of January A. D. 1894 at the county of Polk died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this county at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county and that the said petitioner is a brother of said deceased and praying that administration of said estate be to Gunder Erickson granted.

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before said court, on Monday the 19th day of February A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. at the regular session of the City of Crookston in said county.

Ordered further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs at said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the POLK COUNTY JOURNAL, a weekly newspaper printed and published at Crookston, in said county.

Dated at Crookston, Minnesota, the 26th day of January, A. D. 1894.

By the Court, C. M. BENSON,
Judge of Probate.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE.

(First Publication February 1st, 1894.)

WHEREAS, DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE in the conditions of a certain mortgage deed executed and delivered by Henry Hoegh and Thomas Loen, husband and wife, of the county and State of Minnesota, mortgagors, to the heirs of the State of Minnesota mortgagee, dated on the 6th day of October, A. D. 1887, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and State of Minnesota on the 31st day of October, A. D. 1887, at 1:30 o'clock, p. m., in Book M, of mortgages, page 61 to 62.

Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby, was duly assigned by said The Minnesota Loan and Trust Company mortgagee, to Townley Bruey by written assignment, dated the Third day of January, A. D. 1888, and recorded in the office of said register of deeds of Polk County Minnesota, on the 7th day of January A. D. 1888, at 11:30 o'clock, a. m., in Book 36, of mortgages, on pages 482 and 483 thereof, and whereas by the terms of said mortgage deed the whole amount of the principal sum secured by said mortgage, and all interest thereon should become due and payable, said principal sum to become due and payable upon each coupon interest note as shall have been paid, by said mortgagor or his successors in interest, at the times when they become due and payable, and also should default be made in the payment of any taxes and insurance with interest from the time of said payment and necessity of same by said mortgagee, or any part thereof.

And whereas, said mortgagor failed to pay the interest which became due on said note on the first day of November, A. D., 1893, and has since failed to pay the same, and whereby said principal sum of said note became due and payable.

And whereas, the said mortgagee has elected on said premises for the year 1893, having become due and payable, and the taxes have been paid, the said assignee of the mortgage, pursuant to said mortgage and by virtue of such case made and provided, on the 27th day of January, A. D., 1894, duly filed with the register of deeds, according to the sum of Thirty-eight and 31-100 dollars.

And whereas, the said mortgagee has to keep said mortgaged premises insured as covenanted the said mortgagee insured the same as provided in the mortgage paying therefor the sum of seventeen and 85-100 dollars.

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and is actually due on said mortgage debt at the date of this notice, exclusive of said sum of Thirty-eight and 31-100 dollars for taxes and Seventeen and 85-100 dollars for insurance, and the said mortgagee's fee, the sum of Twenty one hundred seventy-seven and 46-100 dollars, and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law to recover the debt remaining secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale and pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz: The northwest quarter (N. E. ¼), section five (5), in township one hundred and forty-one (141), north of range forty-six (46) West, and lot twelve (12), of section thirty-two (32), in township one hundred and forty-one (141), north of range forty-six (46) West, containing one hundred sixty-one and 25-100 acres according to the United States Government survey, in the County of Polk and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging; which sale will be made by the sheriff of Polk County, at the front door of the Court house, in the city of Crookston, in said County of Polk and State of Minnesota, on the 17th day of March, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to satisfy the amount which shall then be due on said note and mortgage (or principal and interest, together with said amount so paid for taxes and insurance with interest thereon and costs and charges of said sale and including said seventy-five dollars attorney's fee as aforesaid.

Dated January 6th, 1894.

MORTGAGE SALE.

(First publication Feb. 15th, 1894.)

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE IN THE payment of the sum of three hundred and fifty dollars, ($350), which is claimed to be due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Knut Steen and Julia, his wife, mortgagors, to Security Trust Company, mortgagee, bearing date the 16th day of December, A. D., 1890, and with power of sale therein contained, which mortgage is the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, on the 23d day of December, A. D. 1890, at 9:30 o'clock a. m., in book 50 of mortgages, on page 117, and no action or proceeding having been instituted, at law or otherwise, to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Notice, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz: The east half of the northwest quarter, and the east half of the southwest quarter of Section twenty-eight, in Township, one hundred and fifty-two, and in Range forty-six, west of the fifth principal Meridian, with the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, which sale will be made by the sheriff of Polk County, at the front door of the Court House, in the city of Crookston, in said county and state, on the 24th day of March, A. D., 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Ole J. Vaule has gone for a trip to Norway.

Are you sure you squared that personal property tax?

Jack Reed's brother-in-law arrived from Seattle this week.

P. S. Ware was summoned to Minneapolis on Sunday by the illness of his father.

Alvah Newland was able to ride down to the Commercial on Monday and on Tuesday he walked down.

Eli M. Stanton's big Newfoundland pup got a dose of poison on Monday from the effects of which it died. He got a dose awhile ago but got over that.

E. C. Murney came down from Euclid on Tuesday with a sleighload of dressed beef for sale. He does not believe in raising all wheat and nothing else.

Conductor Cooper and Engineer Klinger, who were laid off for alleged misapprehension of orders have been reinstated and ordered to report for duty.

The Polk county teachers association will hold a session in the city on March 17th. An interesting program has been prepared and a profitable session is assured.

Quite a bit of hay is seeking a market in the city these days. The sleighing is getting extremely thin, and a little of that snow that Hicks has promised would be a good thing just now.

The train on the Great Northern from the west on Monday night was way late, arriving here at 1:25. They, however, made up two hours and 5 minutes between Minot and Crookston.

John Ghoosen came down from Euclid on Tuesday with a load of bogs which netted him 6¾ cents per lb dressed weight. Such farmers are not broke this spring if wheat is at as a low ebb.

W. B. Dawley arrived last Saturday and will remain in charge of the po-t-office until the new Postmaster, F. E. LeFage, gets installed—providing that event occurs within a reasonable time, which, with the usual celerity of a democratic administration is an unknown quantity.

Joseph LaFramboise was in from Gentilly on Monday. Says this kind of weather admonishes him that the spring's work on the farm is near at hand. He thinks that he shall not dip into wheat no extensively the coming season, but shall try something else awhile. He has an idea that hogs will be all right for several years yet as a money crop.

The St. Louis weather prophet, Irl W. Hicks, predicts a cold and stormy March, with any quantity of snow. About the 3d or 4th we may look for stormy weather and that will be the general feature of the month.

W. D. Wilson has been re-painting and re-papering the Post Department store and intends to have things in that establishment neat and attractive at all events. He invites his friends to call and look him over.

Wheat opened the week at 48 for 1 hard in this market. It lents all of the calculations of the best judges of last fall who freely predicted that wheat would be bringing a good figure by this time. And it is all; or nearly all out of first hands now.

The business men of Thief River Falls gave a banquet to Editor Ware, of the Press, on Saturday evening at the Hotel Oguimuh, in that thriving village Many were the compliments paid Ware on his able "vindication" of the commissioners.

Rev. R. H. Battey went up north last week to give a temperance lecture and returning Friday evening left on Saturday morning for Mentor for Sabbath services, returning home on Tuesday evening. He seems to have "headquarters in the saddle," like we used to say during the war.

Chester Ouelle, the young son of O. N. Ouelle, of Grafton, was visiting T. H. Bjoln and S. C. Johnson on Monday. He came over with Mr. Ouelle's partner who went up to Thief River Falls on Monday, while the lad visited in this city. The lad is not quite as tall as his father, but almost.

The Ware trial developed the fact that politics play too much of a figure in the administration of our county affairs—a fact that the Journal has asserted time and again, and one thing is sure to follow and that is very much greater care in matters coming before the board in the future. There will be no more monkey-work of that sort in the future, you may depend.

Frank Zarracher: What's the matter with me? I am something of a musquitaman myself, and I tell you boy, it makes me thrill to see old Pennsylvania roll into the republican ranks 182,000 for old Gahahan Grove! I tell you "we are coming Father Abraham, 300,000 more." If such things don't make the spirit of '76 get up and walk o..its eyebrow I don't know what would.

Wm. Davidson was in from the Keystone farm on Tuesday after a carpenter to put up another barn on the big farm. Mr. D. says "there's no use talking we will be forced to diversify, for the all wheat idea is positively suicidal policy. We usually sow about 2200 acres of wheat on the Keystone farm, but this year we will only sow 1400 acres. We shall sow 400 acres of flax and 300 acres of spring rye. I am now fattening two car-loads of steers on some off-grade wheat and shall know just what the wheat will net us. We shall raise a lot of roots this year and fatten more steers next fall. I am confident that we can make farm ng pay as well as it can be made to pay in any other section of the United States and better than in many. I certainly can see no use in giving up entirely and not trying to do anything at all. I believe one secret of low prices for wheat is in the fact that there is altogether too much wheat raised for the requirements of the country."

A few wagons were seen upon our streets on Monday.

W. E. Kelsey was up to Fosston on Thursday of last week.

R. P. Roberts is helping Gervais & Gervais during the great fire sale.

Miss Mary Becken arrived last week from Wabash for an extended visit.

T. A. Dunlavs was up from Fisher on Wednesday to interview his many friends in the city.

John Locken was reported worse last week. He has not been entirely well for about two years.

A Warren paper says that L. D. Marshel is confined to his home in Minneapolis with the fever.

Rev. Lee W. Squier went down to Fergus Falls on Monday evening to deliver his course of lectures.

Hugh Thompson was exercising his fancy driving team on the streets on Monday. It is a slick little pair and no mistake.

R. E. White of Fisher has a pair three-year-old mare colts, weighing 2800 pounds, which he is offering for sale at a bargain.

Among the Fisher people in the city Monday were, Rasmus Johnson, Wm. Geddes, Theodore Torrison, Fred Jarvis and his mother.

H. W. Gates of the Thief River Falls Press came down on Monday to lend a helping hand at the Journal office during our rush.

Cards have been received announcing the marriage of Miss Edith McGrew to J. H. Whitesell, which event occurred at Chicago on Feb. 15th.

Melville Milne came up from Duluth on Sunday to visit the funeral of Ernie Childs and is spending a few days with his old-time friends.

Mrs. Bradley and family, of Warren, were down to attend the funeral of Ernie Childs on Sunday. Mrs. Bradley is the mother of Mrs. Childs.

Everybody who saw H. B. Budd driving the lines over that nobby team of matched blacks on Monday said: "Ain't that a dandy team?" And they were just right, too.

Mr. Seaman, who bought into the Walter brewery last summer has sold his interest thereto. The Journal is informed that A. F. Rauch and Carl Reldeest are the purchasers.

Take your grain to the McManus & Farley Roller mill. We grind for cash or toll the grain, and will take dry soft wood in exchange for grinding or feed. We grind every day except Sunday. [4623]

N. M. Malmberg, of Fisher dropped in to clint awhile on Tuesday and renew for the coming year. Mr. M. is one of the kind who never allows his subscription to lapse very much.

Gervais & Gervais opened their store to the public on Saturday and although they had a large corps of efficient clerks they were all as busy as bees all day waiting upon customers.

A number of young people surprised Miss Bertha Eickhoff on Tuesday evening, the occasion being a birth-day anniversary of that young lady, and a very enjoyable evening was passed.

Such a hustling to get in out of the wet was never before seen as for the last few days at the treasurer's office. Almost everybody has been putting off the evil day to the last moment—most of them because they had to and the natural result was a grand rush on the home stretch.

R. Cassmey came in from Euclid on Tuesday and did not forget to call and drop a nickel or two in the slot to keep the Journal running. Says the write up of the Ware trial was a revelation to him and he wonders how long the taxpayers will submit to be taxed for the sake of building up political papers.

Commade Dave Carr was in the city this week en route home from the pineries where he has been scaling for the past winter. Reports the work completed for the season and a large cut successfully landed. Comrade Carr will now rest up and recruit at his home in Minneapolis, so as to be ready for business here at the mill when the sawing season opens.

John A. Bryson and John H. McDonald were in from the Marais Monday to pay their taxes and gave the Journal a pleasant call. Messrs. Bryson and McDonald assure us that their magnificent black Percheron stallion (Banon,) purchased from Mr. M. W. Dunham a year ago, is at present looking fine and weighing about 1900. This horse will be 4 years old this spring and has all the good qualities to become a famous sire and a good boon to the farmers of Polk county, who should take advantage of such horses as the time is here when nothing but the best will pay. The stations of this famous horse will be advertised later at present he stands at the home of J. A. Bryson on the Marais, 6 miles north of Fisher.

Mrs. Dan McKinnon is reported on the sick list. The prevailing disorder.

W. C. Kelso was down from Hallock this week chatting with old time friends.

O. H. Hjoln moved on Tuesday to the house on the corner of Ash and Fletcher streets—where the Sieberts lived.

Dr. Thomas don't propose to get left on any new device in the profession. Last week the Journal mentioned that Dr. Robertson had la grippe and now Doc Thomas has it.

Krohn and Reane open out their beer restaurant this morning one door north of their former location. They have their new place nicely papered up and painted and invite their friends to call.

The county treasurer informs us that the payment of personal taxes is fully up to the record of former years, there being on Tuesday evening fully three-fourths of the taxes collected, and another full day to go yet.

Peter Cornelius drove in on Tuesday to get the doctor for his son Carl, who has been quite ill since about Christmas, when he was taken with what appeared to be chicken pox. The boy does not seem to be gaining and the case is a good bit of a puzzle.

The funeral obsequies of Ernie Childs, held on Sunday at the M. E. church were attended by a crowd that taxed that edifice to its utmost capacity and many could not get seats. The sons of veterans acted as a guard of honor and a large number of vehicles followed the remains to the cemetery.

Analysis of the Red Lake river ice at Grand Forks, developes the fact that its use is as dangerous as is addition, died on Sunday afternoon, the use of the river itself, and its use there has been condemned. Grand Forks will go to Detroit for its ice supply. With all its ice and water supply to lay at its neighbor the cost of living in Grand Forks will be somewhat enhanced.

The Fosston train had a perilous time trying to make its trip on Tuesday. When about a mile and a half Carman the engine left the track, and after vainly trying to get it back on, an engine went out from the city and pulled the coaches back into the city. The train reached that place on its return trip about 6 o'clock on Wednesday morning.

H. C. Misner came down from Euclid on Sunday evening on his way to St. Paul where he goes to undergo a course of treatment for nervous prostration from which for sometime he has been a sufferer. He could give our reporter no definite idea as to how long he would be obliged to be gone, but thought it possible that he might return by Saturday next.

Rev. L. W. Squier's sermon on Sabbath evening was listened to with marked attention by a large audience. His topic, "Heaven, what is it, where is it and how to gain it" was one in that audience and we did not feel that it was good to be there and listen to those earnest words. The matter was an earnest, forcible delivery that carried the weight of conviction to the heart of the hearer and always creates within him the desire to bear more.

Notwithstanding the prevalence of fever in this city for the past winter, the mortality has not been as great as would naturally be expected under the circumstances. As soon as it became known that the river was the cause of it the use of river water generally ceased, and people began to use artesian water, more generally, since when but few cases have developed, and those no doubt caused by the use of river water before the danger was discovered. As we have before stated, there is no necessity for using river water, as plenty of artesian wells abound to furnish an abundance of good, pure water, and if there is any locality that is without that article, it can easily be procured. Crookston is especially favored in being able to provide the very best of water at small cost.

Before he went to St. Paul, Comrade Louis Fourtine was intending to build a large stock barn on his farm in Badger and fill it with short-horn cattle. Berkshire hogs and various and sundry other stock, and he was talking about putting in a wind-mill for power. He was telling the writer of a location he had for a barn, on a side-hill, the basement to be of solid stone one side of the first story to be on a level with the ground, so that he could drive into the second story with loads of hay. He was contemplating building the completest barn for stock in this county—a barn so warm in winter that water will not freeze therein, and make stock raising a specialty on his farm. A'comrade Louis wants to be up with J. J. Hill, in St. Paul, in relation to hogs, however, seemed to take the starch out of him on the hog question at least and it is somewhat problematical whether the short-horns escaped the week or not. We haven't heard anything about that barn since.

Rev. J. G. Smith is reported to be gaining slowly.

Attorney Edward George returned to civilization this week.

Chief Douglas came down from Thief River Falls on Wednesday.

The sidewalk in front of the St. Louis hotel should be cleaned off.

W. J. Peterson was in Ada last week on one of his periodical trips.

Rev. R. H. Battey went north on Thursday t labor in othe temperance cause.

Dr. Thomas is putting down an artesian well, at his residence on Main street.

Sunday opened the week bright and pleasant followed by a beautiful day on Monday.

E. C. Carruth came over from Grand Forks to attend the funeral of Ernie Childs, on Sunday.

O. L. Larson came down from Fosston on Saturday evening, en route for a visit to the Twin Cities.

It is reported that Mrs A. M. Stewart and her sister Miss Nettie Brown are ill with the typhoid fever.

Elling Knudson, a son of Elling Knudson who lives on Sampson's addition, died on Sunday afternoon, aged 17 years.

Mrs. P. S. Ware came down on Wednesday evening on her way to St. Paul to join her husband who is there caring for his sick father.

One of Elsen Lanemeister's hack teams took a lively go-as-you-please on Friday morning during the temporary absence of the driver.

Sam Dalnerd was brought before Esquire Gossman last week charged with assault. The warrant was defective and Sam was discharged.

And now the question is "who offered the $700 that was alluded to in the Ware trial?" Verily an investigation would seem to be in order.

Comrade W. L. Coe left for the coast with his family on Tuesday evening. If he is suited out there he intends to make his future home there.

Alderman W. H. Norvle is reported out of danger and getting along all right. About two weeks ago he had a relapse from which he soon rallied, and has been improving nicely ever since.

Register Amundson says he has been very busy of late looking up the financial standing of people. Some curious people seem desirous of knowing how wealthy the dwellers of Polk County are anyhow.

R. E. White was up from Fisher last Friday for the first time since his serious illness and he looks fairly well'considering the long' seige of sickness he passed through. Mr. W. came up to pay his taxes and in answer to the question "are taxes high with you this year, Dick?" replied with his usual good humor, "well, I should say yes."

A telegram was received in this city on Friday morning announcing the death of Ernie Childs, only son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Childs, which sad event occurred in Duluth, of typhoid fever.

Peter Cornelis came down from Argyle on Thursday evening on his way to St. Paul, and owing to the fact that the through train from the west was 8 or 10 hours late had to lay over in this city all night. Pete always enjoys a chance of that kind.

M. R. Brown: I had to change that ad I put in the Journal after an hour or two because it brought more horses to sell than I could accommodate. I find the Journal an excellent advertising medium.

Annie Rostad, a young lady 22 years of age, died at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. Paulsberg, at Meator, last week.

Mrs. Elizabeth O'Brecht, of the town of Fanny, was brought before Judge Beuson on Tuesday and committed to the insane asylum at Fergus Falls.

T. J. Finney, one of those "horrid Democrats" of whom you have read so much in the columns of late, was in the city on Thursday of last week and gave the Journal a pleasant call. We found Mr. F. to be a very gentlemanly and agreeable person, with no wool on his teeth, no dirk in his pocket nor any evidences of "drunk and disorderly" about him. Mr. F. intends that it will be decidedly unpleasant for somebody before they get through with them.

It is said that David B. Hill is figuring with Gov. Hogg, of Texas, trying to put up a presidential ticket for '96 that would read "Hill and Hogg." Wonder if Comrade Fontaine would support that kind of a ticket? He has had some experience already with Hill and hog.

Judge Benson issued a warrant for $80 to re-imburse the authorities of Otter Tail county for expenses incurred in the re-commitment of 10 patients, made necessary under the late famous ruling of the Supreme Court which knocked out the law of '93. Wenre told there are some kicks against allowing the bill, but the fact is that the county saves some $520 by this method over what it would have had to pay had the judge stayed at home and allowed matters to take their regular course. In that case the patients would have been sent to this county as paupers, would have had to be again brought before the judge and re-committed from here, entailing a cost of over four times what it has cost by the judge's method. He deserves commendation instead of censure.

Albert Anderson, of Fosston, was brought before Judge Beuson on Wednesday and committed to the insane asylum at Fergus Falls. While he was being taken to the county jail to await the evening train, he got away and ran out along Broadway north. Chief Gossman and Tom Young took after him with Tom's drvy rig, overtaking him near the stock yards on the Great Northern road. As they passed him in the road, Tom asked him to jump in and ride, which invitation he seemed glad to accept. As soon as he got in he was secured and brought back to the jail.

A party of men were brought before Judge Christianson, by a squad of Indian police on Wednesday, charged with cutting timber on government land. They will have their trial later.

"I've tried all sorts of blood-purifiers," said an old lady to a "cutter," "and you can't persuade me that there's other Sarsaparilla is as good as Ayer's." There's where she had him. She knew that Ayer's was the best—and so did he, but it paid him better to sell a cheaper brand.

Cheap Rates to California.

The Northern Pacific Railroad company has put into effect a series of low rates to California points. Tickets are good until July 15th, 1894 and are good for stop-over under certain conditions.

These rates will enable those desiring to do so, to spend the winter in Southern California or to visit the mid-winter fair to be held at San Francisco. This latter event will undoubtedly be second only to the World's Fair, and will repay a visit as it will exhibit the resources and capabilities of California.

THE REPUBLICANS

Meet and Agree to Place a Square-Toed Republican Ticket

In the Field at the Coming City Election.--Great Enthusiasm.

Every Republican Has His War Paint On and is Ready for the Fray.

About thirty-five republicans met in the office of E. M. Walsh on Thursday evening of last week and after debating the question pro and con for a short time agreed to place in the field for the coming election a simon pure republican ticket from top to bottom. The sentiment regarding the movement was almost unanimously in favor of the idea only one or two dissenting, and they were quickly won over as soon as they saw the enthusiasm prevailing. A temporary organization was effected by electing Hugh Thompson chairman, and E. M. Walsh secretary. After every republican present had expressed his opinion a motion was made that the chair appoint a platform committee also a city central committee. The chair asked for time in the selection of these committees, and a motion prevailed that when we adjourn it be to meet at 7:30 on Monday evening, March 5th, at the same place to give the chair an opportunity to select the committees. After a short time spent in discussion the meeting adjourned.

Promptly on the minute on Monday evening republicans began to gather until within 15 minutes the office capacity was tested to its utmost and dozens went away because they could not find standing room even. When the meeting was called to order the chair announced as

PLATFORM COMMITTEE.

M. R. Brown,
R. J. Montague,
A. D. Stephens,
J. W. Wheeler,
August George.

REPUBLICAN CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

At large—Hugh Robertson, Felix Fournet.

1st Ward—Fred Anderson,
2nd Ward—John Munroe,
3rd Ward—S. A. Collins,
4th Ward—C. O. Christianson,
5th Ward—E. D. Childs,

These committee were both ratified by the meeting and on motion those present representing the different wards selected the following named gentlemen to represent the wards as

WARD COMMITTEES.

1st Ward—Geo. O. Buhn,
Harry Falk,
Jos. Gervais,

2nd Ward—Jas. E. Greenhalgh,
T. G. Thompson,
J. E. Harris.

3rd Ward—Geo. H. Palmer.
R. J. Montague,
W. E. Kelsey.

4th Ward—Andrew Elken,
W. A. Hammond,
T. A. Harris,

5th Ward—E. D. Childs,
W. F. Hitchcock,
D. B. Tousley.

On motion the hour of holding caucuses in the various wards was fixed at 8 o'clock sharp. R. J. Montague introduced a resolution defining an order of business to be followed by the caucuses. On motion the city central committee was instructed to take such steps as would be necessary to arrange for a convention that should comprise 35 members or as near that number as practicable. The evening to hold caucuses in the different wards was fixed for Thursday March 22nd, and the convention to be held on Saturday March 24th, at 10 a. m. At about 9:30 the meeting adjourned sine die.

WHAT THEY SAY

About Party Politics in City Elections.

E. M. Walsh: "Am in favor of it and will do my best to support the move."

R. J. Montague: "It seems to me the time is ripe for such a move. No one can doubt the enthusiasm of republicans in this matter."

C. N. Lindell: "It removes personal politics—the meanest kind, from the city election and is, I think, the best policy."

Louis Gonyen: "What do I think of a straight party ticket? Why, my boy, it is the only wise thing to do. Its all right and just and we ought to have done before. I think it can be elected if properly put up.

Judge Christianson: "I said when first asked my opinion some week or so ago, 'the party is a set of chumps if they don't put a republican ticket in the field, and I see no reason to change my mind now. It was decidedly the thing to do and I shall think so, win or lose."

Hugh Thompson: "Was rather in doubt at first but when I noted the enthusiasm at our first meeting I saw at once that the time for a party ticket had come. The party could not afford to neglect such a call."

M. R. Brown: "Needless to ask me. You know that I have always been in favor of party lines in city affairs, because I think our city interests can best be subserved in that way. Whether we win or not I believe in sticking to principle as long as that principle is right."

Tom Young: "You bet, it is the proper caper and will win, too."

T. A. Harris: "Am in for it first, last and all the time, sink or swim, survive or perish. The character of these meetings can show me that the business men of the republican party have the interests of this move at heart and for that reason I can see much good in it for the city. Never saw the republicans more in earnest than this spring."

B. F. Zarrnecher: "What do I think? Why ask a Pennsylvania dutch ranfion that question this year! I always did advocate party politics all 'round and certainly have no occasion to back water this year. I believe it will win too."

Hans Larsen: "Am in hearty favor of it believing it to be for the best interests of the city."

J. E. Greenhalgh: "The proper thing to do."

John Monroe: "What I have been hoping for this long time."

W. E. Kelsey: "Just the very thing. And as far as I can see the people all demand it."

Lawrence Larson: "Cert it is; one donbts the wisdom of the course he has only to interview the rank and file of the republican party to be convinced. They seem to demand it and that is the time to act."

S. L. Collins: "It may not win at first but I think it is the best course for the interests of the city, therefore I am in hearty favor of it."

Deputy Sheriff Losey says: "I don't care a rye straw for politics in the city matters, but the ticket that presents a square-toed business front will get my vote, regardless of all other considerations."

C. E. Misner: "I heartily approve of the movement put on foot by the republicans in city affairs and shall support a good ticket placed in the field for business reasons. I think there is room for reforms."

Sosuy weall of us: "Its all right."

Good Selections.

The office of assessor is one of great importance, requiring peculiar qualification. For this office two names have been mentioned in connection with the republican nomination either one of which would be an excellent selection. We refer to August George and Al Paine. We have talked with neither and do not know if either would accept, but we feel assured that either would be a wise choice. Mr. George by the true a comparatively newcomer, but we venture the assertion that no better selection could be made, as he is perfectly familiar with real estate values and has a good idea of personal property values as well. Should the selection fall on either and he be elected we would have a rattling good assessor.

For city clerk, on the republican ticket if W. A. Lanctot, C. N. Lindell, O. O. Christianson or Hugh Robertson should be selected the interests of the city would be well cared for should the republican ticket win.

And last, but not least, if Mayor Stephens, or A. A. Miller, or J. W. Wheeler, or John Crumb, or Hugh Thompson, or M. R. Brown or C. E. Sawyer, or R. J. Montague, or a dozen and one others whom we might mention should be selected to head the republican ticket and be elected, the city's interests would not suffer. In such a galaxy of material as we have, it is hard to say who would be the very best, but we are content to leave that to the combined wisdom of the convention, which will be comprised of good business men.

Almost a Fire.

A little ripple of excitement in the neighborhood of Slocum's store was caused on Monday evening by the explosion of a lamp. Slocum tried to put the blaze asleep by wrapping a "gum coat" about it, and for a mile or so about, the neighbors got the impression that somebody had started a rubber factory, and a few in the immediate vicinity went on a voyage of discovery, and following their nose soon found "Erve" with wonderful nerve choking the life out of the incipient fire all the same like as was a whole fire company. "Don't ring the bell but fight like everything," said "Erve" he saw the volunteers flocking in and for a few minutes it was great fun to see the boys chasing streaks of fire about under cracker-boxes, barrels and what-nil, until, in less time than it takes to write it there wasn't a sign of a living blaze on the premises—outside of a lamp. Fortunately no damage was done but only for the presence of mind of Slocum, and the prompt and efficient aid of the boys who came to his aid we might have had quite a firetem to record in this issue.

The Timber Cases.

The parties brought in from the Reservation last week were brought before Judge Christianson on Friday and admitted that they had taken timber from government land. Louis Albers and Syver Pederson were required to put up $72; Ole Grundeson, $18; Oalund Olson, $18 and Dolph Tebiarge, $42. The government has been trying to break up this bad habit among the settlers and from this on it will stop or there will be music in the air. These cases will be followed by more soon—parties who have been arrested. It is to be hoped that will end it for awhile.

The New Gold Fields.

Crookston has caught the gold fever at last and on Thursday evening a party of Crookstonites started for the Rainy Lake gold fields. In the party were Al and Fred Sargent, Ed Gates and Al. Cavpbell, and the boys intend to locate a gold mine each before they again appear in a civilized world. From all reports we should judge that there was gold in those diggin's in paying quantities and the JOURNAL hopes the boys will strike it rich.

That Burglar Proof Lock.

It was reported to the JOURNAL that Fred Rauch has been studying up a device for locking his front door that is perfectly burglar proof. He was led to the idea by the habit some young men had of coming into the store in the evening after hours and bothering him when he wanted to post up his books. So one evening when he had his device all in working order he tried it on his front door and returned to his desk to work on his books, laughing in his sleeves when later on, one after another of his friends tried the door but without success—they could not get in. Everything worked all right until about 11 or 12, when he wanted to go home, the darn thing would not work—he could not unlock it! Sometime in the early morning—just before daylight it is said that one of the patrolmen passing the building heard a great racket and thinking that burglars were at work in Rauch's store summoned help, broke open the door and found—Fred, vainly trying to work the construction of his new burglar proof lock. It is said that Fred did not get home that night until late next morning, and that he don't use that particular kind of a lock any more. However that may be Fred is not saying anything at all about the business.

THE "ROBBER BARONS" REJOICE.

The New York Herald and World:
Two robber barons, we,
Committed an iniquity;
We first put labor up a tree,
And then gave bread and clothing free.

The New York Times and Evening Post:
We theorize and falsify,
We fix up figures on the sly;
All trade for England is our cry,
And will be till we bust or die.

All together:

The Wilson bill has passed, the time is coming fast,
When foreign goods, admitted free, in all our markets we shall see.

Times vs. Holston.

Without a doubt, County Attorney Holston makes bad breaks enough, but the Times' attack on him in the Dufresne matter utterly fallsin its object, because that was one case that really does Holston credit, for so far from putting the county to a great expense in this matter Holston saved the county an expense of some $75 or $100. The facts are that the boy, who was a Swede, went from the shop, after the alleged assault, to a fellow-countryman in that vicinity who would have nothing to do in the matter but sent him to another, who advised him to go to the county attorney and swear complaint, which the boy did, alleging that Dufresne had "choked, kicked and otherwise maltreated" him. Holston told him that if his statement was true he could go to a justice and swear out a warrant, which he did, and when Dufresne was brought before the justice he demanded a jury trial. Before the case came up for trial Holston had had time to look up its merits, and becoming convinced that the boy had no cause of action he persuaded him to drop it, which the boy did by not appearing. In order to find out how much expense the county had incurred we interviewed the justice who said that there would be no costs to the county in this case unless Deputy Sheriff Losey insists on collecting the FORTY cents due him for serving one notice. What a howl reformer McKenzie makes over the loss of this poor little FORTY cents to the oppressed tax-payer while he defends the county commissioners' action in the printing matter, that, with costs of suit and all will cost the tax-payers over $1000. How cunningly he tries to make out that the boy was an employe of Holston's when the facts are that Holston merely befriended the boy by keeping him a this hotel when the boy was sick and friendless—for which heaver received a cent! How very anxious he is that nobody else should have a hand out of the "poor taxpayers" so that they may be able to pay his own fat fees! He even defends the action of the board that costs them over $1000 to pay himself but that Holston should "wrongfully and illegally" plunder the county treasury of FORTY CENTS, turns his little stomach wrong side out.

The W. R. C.

The Woman's Relief corps held open house Thursday evening of last week—or gave a sort of "at home" reception to the members of the Post and camp. The chief feature of the evening was the reading of the reports of their delegates to the Relief corps convention at Minneapolis. Those papers prepared and read by said delegates, Mrs. I. H. Jennings, Mrs. T. E. Adams and Mrs. Streeter were replete with interest to the different organizations, showing that the delegates were fully alive to their duties. A very pleasant evening was passed and the guests departed feeling that they had been very nicely entertained.

Smashed Some Windows.

Ole Tysse, a blacksmith from Fertile arrived in the city Friday evening on the N. P. train from Grand Forks, and proceeded to do a good bit of visiting with his friends that evening. About 5 o'clock on Saturday morning, John Kyle heard somebody up in the Anderson-Olson block, lustily shouting "police, police," and proceeding thither he went up stairs, where he heard a great racket proceeding from an unoccupied room in the front of the building and saw a big hole in the door. On poking his head through, he saw a man there with a board raised in the act of striking and took his head away in time to miss the blow. He then broke open the door and after a tussle he arrested the man and took him to the cooler. Later he was taken before Judge Goss man and assessed $5 and costs amounting to $30. It is said that he is usually very quiet and peaceable and he says he does not remember anything that occurred that morning. It seems he had been trying to break into Dr Holte's office and the doctor stuck his head out of the front window and called the police. Judge Benson's door had also received a call, judging from appearances. The boys are now saying that Lynne, who sleeps in one of the rooms, got up and seizing a tommy-hatchet skipped down the back stairs and climbed a tree. However, be that as it may business was lively in that block for awhile, several doors and windows looking very much the worse for wear.

BLOCKED BY SUGAR.

DEMOCRATIC SENATORS UNABLE TO AGREE ON A TAX.

Everything Else Is Said to Have Been Settled—Big Fight Predicted in the Senate When the Bill Is Finally Reported.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The Wilson tariff bill has been the subject of an earnest consultation among the senators during the day.

It has reached a certain stage of completeness, and yet may be thrown out of gear by a single article. That article is sugar, and it was generally understood that if a definite agreement could be reached on this article it would then be possible to agree upon everything else and that the bill could be reported without delay. It is understood that by mutual concessions and frequent consultations the demands made by those Democratic senators who opposed the bill in the form in which it was first presented have been met and tentatively agreed upon; but what these agreements are of the treasury department and the heads of the government in the matter of revenue. Secretary Carlisle has been with the members of the committee most of the day and met with them again in the evening to discuss and compare changes, but, while these concessions have been made and the members of the finance committee and the objecting senators have found middle ground, there yet remains the matter of sugar and the difficulties surrounding an agreement upon this are the greatest that the tariff makers have to contend with. The Louisiana senators have one plan which does not meet with favor by the refiners. The plan of the refiners is objectionable to the Louisiana senators. A suggestion has been made that an ad valorem tax be laid and the refiners say this would Afford Them No Protection.

Some senators, looking toward concession, have said that if an ad valorem rate is not just to refiners, a differential be made in their favor. This is stubbornly resisted by those who claim that an ad valorem rate would afford them a just protection as the higher price of the refined sugar would necessitate a greater tax when imported than the raw sugars. It appears also that the proposition for an increased tax on whisky is mixed up with the proposed duty on sugar. If the latter is agreed to, the necessity for an increased whisky tax disappears. For this reason those who have been insisting upon increase in the whisky tax are not favorable to a sugar tax. One of the senators who was openly opposed to the Wilson bill, as it was amended by the senate sub-committee, and who was active in the caucus, said that the outcome was

A Matter of Considerable Doubt.

"Had the bill made equal reductions," he said, "and had no attempt been made to give some special interests an advantage, we could not complain. But, when it was proposed to protect the Louisiana sugar men, we could not sit still and see interests in our states suffer. This led to the caucus, and it was there shown how unjust it would be to make the bill protective in one locality alone. It may be that the concessions which have been made will be agreed to and that the treasury department will find them satisfactory and yet one little thing may result in undoing all that has been done, and the Wilson bill be reported very much in the form it came over."

"Then there would be a fight in the senate?"

"Yes, the biggest that has occurred for years. But the whole matter is on such delicate ground that a rejection by the senate of one of the points in dispute

Might Risk It All Over,

besides the house may also kick over what the senate does not. We hope, however, that we are going to reach an adjustment which will settle the matter. It is understood that the committee has also been giving attention to the tobacco schedule in the internal revenue bill during the day and that the internal revenue commissioner was before them to make suggestions concerning rates and the method of collecting—as well as other tax in this part of the bill. The committee is having trouble to satisfy the manufacturers with the rate of this tax, as they are urging if there is to be an increase it shall be placed at 12 cents, because their machinery, which is expensive, is made to produce packages corresponding with either a 0 or 12-cent tax. It is stated that the committee had increased this tax to 10 cents.

OEADWOOD SCORCHED.

Fire in the South Dakota Town Does $100,000 Damage.

DEADWOOD, S. D., March 7.—Fire broke out about 6 o'clock a. m. in Fasbold saloon, and destroyed all that portion of the city lying between the center of Main street and Chinatown. There was no wind blowing at the time or the whole city would have been destroyed. As it is the best portion of the city is destroyed. The loss is roughly estimated at over $100,000. The fire is now under control. The firemen seemed to have no control of it from the fact that it originated in structures built of rough pine, and the headway made was appalling. Twenty-five thousand will cover all the insurance.

Blacks Leave for Africa.

ATLANTA, March 7.—A party of 30 negroes left here last night for Africa. Three thousand negroes were at the depot to see the emigrants off and there was great commotion among those left behind. The emigration fever is epidemic among the blacks here and many more are anxious to go.

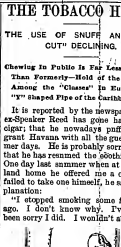
THE TOBACCO HABIT.

THE USE OF SNUFF AND "FINE CUT" DECLINING.

Chewing Is Public In Far Less Common Than Formerly—Hold of the Cigarette Among the "Classes" in Europe—The "V" Shaped Pipe of the Caribbeans.

It is reported by the newspapers that ex-Speaker Reed has given up his talk to his cigar; that he nowadays puffs the fragrant Havana with all the gusto of former days. He is probably sorry already that he has renamed the soothing habit. One day last summer when at his Portland home he offered me a cigar, but failed to take one himself, he said in explanation:



CAPTAIN BASSETT "TAKING A PINCH."

"I stopped smoking some five years ago. I don't know why. I've always been sorry I did. I wouldn't advise you to stop. You'd regret it. I've made up my mind that whatever a man does that tobacco shall be sorry for it."

The habit of smoking tobacco is now well nigh universal among civilized people. But the use of the American weed, pulverized as snuff and shredded as fine cut or caked in plugs or twisted as pigtail for chewing purposes, has greatly declined. The falling off of the snuffing habit began many years ago, though it still lingers in some quarters, to the solace of the aged. Chewing began to go out in the seventies, but it still maintains a much stronger hold than smoking. But chewing in public or by public men is nowadays a rarity. Not many of the younger readers of this newspaper can remember the time when the pen picture of an American public man limned by the author of Martin Chuzzlewit bore even the slightest semblence of truth:

"Their new friend said no more just then, being busily employed in cutting a quid, or ping, from his cake of tobacco and whistling softly to himself the while. When he had shaped it to his liking, he took out his old ping and deposited it on the back of the seat between Mark and Martin, while he thrust the new one into the hollow of his cheek, where it looked like a large walnut or a tolerable pippin. Finding it quite satisfactory, he stuck the point of his knife into the old ping and holding it out for their inspection remarked, with the air of a man who had not lived in vain, that it was 'rather considerable.' Then he tossed it away."

It was General Cluck's habit performed in this fashion before Martin Chuzzlewit and his cheerful friend and servant, Mark Tapley, and caught the picture may perhaps be justly written down a caricature, yet it was, as older readers know, "founded on fact," as was also the description of Mr. Chollop, who appeared to Mark and Martin farther along in the book. Martin saw Chollop rid himself once of the juice of the delicious morsel he was masticating and drew back.

"'I can calc'late my distance, sir,' returned Mr. Chollop, 'to an inch. I require, sir, two feet clear in a circle of direction and can engage myself toe keep within it. I have gone 10 foot in a circular direction, but that was for a wager. I realized the stakes, yes, sir.'

"He was silent for a time, during which he was actively engaged in the formation of a magic circle round the chest on which he sat."

It has been stated by the doctors that, however much more disagreeable to the nonchewer than smoking, the chewing of tobacco may be, it is less harmful. We have all heard and read of persons who smoked themselves to death, but did you ever read or hear of a man who chewed himself into an untimely grave? Be that as it may, there are times when even the quid has its uses. Used to know a reporter who never chewed save when on a wet to report horse races. He was so much of a slave to medicine that he felt the need of it whenever he had to do work in a hurry. He could not smoke at the races, for the smoke got into his eyes and made it hard to see the horses, so he compromised for the time being on a bit of cut plug between his teeth, with perfectly satisfactory results.

THE STUDY OF A WORD.

The Resources and Variety of Information It Is Liberty to Furnish.

The great dictionaries are a library in themselves and furnish an exhaustless source of information. A study of a single word like cross in the Century Dictionary shows the resources and variety of information that a familiar word may furnish. There are 35½ columns devoted to this word and its combinations. There are 24 pictorial illustrations. All in all there are 207 different words made out of cross which have to be defined. In the great Oxford Dictionary there are 11 pages given to this word, or twice as much as in the Century. In the Century the study is highly fascinating. There are 14 radically different sets of definitions to the word itself.

The fundamental idea is, of course, the cross, the crux for crucifying, but it has come to have a variety of meaning as a monument, a crucifix, the atonement, the Christian religion itself, any suffering for Christ's sake, anything that thwarts or vexes, a mingling of breeds in animal breeding, a term used in changing plants, a point in a pipe, the accidental contact of two electric wires, a sportsman phrase for a contest disbarred by the cleat.

Then cross becomes an adjective, with several meanings, as falling, athwart, passing from one to the other, transverse, etc., to the other, being opposed, being peevish or fretful, ill tempered, thoroughly contrary in a high-toned vocabulary. Then it becomes an adverb, meaning transversely or adversely. Then it becomes a verb, with all kinds of significance, from the running of a line to cross a line, being crossed by crossing, to cross one's self in devotion, passing from side to side of a man, to go over a body of water, to obstruct, to cause to interfere, to cross plants, to hoist from the deck to its place on the mast any of the lighter yards.

Then there is the preposition, in riding cross-country or walking cross-lots. All with the simple word itself, which goes cavorting from the most sacred thought in the world to the breeder's and the sportsman's language of the coop and ranch.

After this the mysteries begin. There are crosse—ancestral, ecclesiastical, heraldry, bretesse, catoosed, commisse, crenele, estele, fitche, fleury, gringole, lambeaux, moline, nowy, ovyle, quarrefoil, saltier, sarele, recarreled. Then there are the multitudinous compounds of cross from cross-armed, cross-bar, cross-biter, cross-bar and cross-bun, through cross-cut, cross-eyed, cross-sower and cross-spale to cross-wort.

Then there are a cross-grained set of crosses, such as crossarchaical, cross-archus, crossette, crossospinal, crossop terygia, crossopterygian, crossopterygidae, crossopteryl, crossopteryx, cross-optery gium, crossopus, crossorhined and crossorhinidae.

It is incomprehensible that a word so simple should have gone rollicking all over the earth, into the bowels of the earth, into the caves of the sea, among the fowls of the air, the horse upon the back, to cast bullets, to the ships upon the sea, to the fishes in their gills, to the sharks in their ferocity, to the architect and plumber, to the farmer in his harrowing, to the railroad in its building, to the engine in its working, to the seaman in her wrangling, to the gunner in the fort, to the miner at his loom, to the lawyers in their pleading, to a shrew in her wrangling, to the spider in his webbing, to the spinner at his loom, to the sharks in their ferocity, to the architect and plumber, to the farmer in his harrowing, to the railroad in its building, to the engine in its working, to the seaman in her wrangling, to the gunner in the fort, to the miner at his loom, to the lawyers in their pleading, to a shrew in her wrangling, to the spider in his webbing, to the spinner at his loom, to the sharks in their ferocity, to the architect and plumber, to the farmer in his harrowing, to the railroad in its building, to the engine in its working, to the seaman in her wrangling, to the gunner in the fort, to the miner at his loom, to the lawyers in their pleading, to a shrew in her wrangling, to the spider in his webbing, to the spinner at his loom, to the sharks in their ferocity, to the architect and plumber, to the farmer in his harrowing, to the railroad in its building, to the engine in its working, to the seaman in her wrangling, to the gunner in the fort, to the miner at his loom, to the lawyers in their pleading, to a shrew in her wrangling, to the spider in his webbing, to the spinner at his loom, to the sharks in their ferocity, to the architect and plumber, to the farmer in his harrowing, to the railroad in its building, to the engine in its working, to the seaman in her wrangling, to the gunner in the fort, to the woman in her grazing and in her dressing, to the athletes in their wrestling and to thewwinder at his arts.—A. E. Winship in Journal of Education.

The Oldest Dressmaker's Bill.

Most likely the oldest dressmaker's bill in the world has been discovered on a Chaldean tablet, dating 3800 B. C. It has an outcry of "92 pure vestments for the priests." Among the items are "19 white robes of the temple, eight robes of the house of the lady, 10 collars of the house of his lady, 10 pair of gold collars, two white robes and four sacred robes." "Two window-curtains," probably scarfs for binding about the waist.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Human Electrical Forces

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, or the nerve fluid may be termed, in an especially attractive department of science, as it carries so marked an influence as the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the nerve fluid or "electricity" so necessary to health. When the brain or nerves become impaired from any cause, irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs become deficient in the nourishment supply necessary to their healthy action.

Dyspepsia, nervousness, fail to recognize the importance of this fact, and to realize to himself or herself the cause of the trouble. The noted specialists, Franklin Miles, M. D., L. L. D., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the practical results obtained in restoring lost nerve force, by his wonderful discoveries in Nervine, the unrivaled brain and nerve tonic, are simply remarkable that all nervous and female complaints originate from disorders of the nervous system. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Dr. Miles' Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervousness, headache, dizziness, hysteria, and debility. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is used on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or can direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price. $1 per bottle, or 6 bottles for $5, express prepaid.

PROTECT OUR LABOR.

KEEP PAUPERS OUT OF THE COUNTRY FOR THE PRESENT.

The Policy of Prostration Has Reduced Wages and Lessened the Opportunities For Work—The Anti-election Cry Forgotten—Charity Is an Insult.

The destructive free trade policy of prostration to which the country has been subjected since March, 1893, involving in its course an unprecedented volume of ruin and wreckage, the closing of factories and the idleness of labor, suggests the imperative necessity for the adoption of some course that will adequately protect American labor from absolute want and from further competition in the labor market which the free trade party has so disastrously caused to be oversupplied.

It has been the policy of the American government for upward of a quarter of a century to invite labor and settlers from abroad. This policy has built up this country to an unprecedented degree. The large number of new arrivals created a greater demand for our home products and manufactures, stimulating both. Our lands were opened up and settled upon. The country grew greater and richer just so long as protection was afforded to the products of our lands and looms.

But the very moment that the shadow of free trade overcast our system of protection the condition of the country and of the people began to change. The terrible effect of the fear of the free trade policy of prostration was shown in a few short months by a million idle laborers scattered throughout every state in the union. Even now those men who have been fortunate enough to again secure work have done so, in most instances, at a reduction of wages. Their earning power has been lessened, but through no fault of their own.

Immediately before the presidential election of 1892 the question of protection to labor was worked for all it was worth by the New York Herald, that free trade organ dwindling the voters into one of its many catchpenny cries. But nothing has been done to assist labor. The old election cry was forgotten more than a year ago, and the free trade party, which The Herald represented and advocated, immediately upon its assumption of administrative authority began to degrade and ruin labor by imposing its policy of prostration to American labor and industries. So great has been the injury wrought upon labor by this policy of prostration that The Herald has been compelled to lend in the alleviation of the distress wrought by its party by the charitable distribution of free clothing.

What does this free clothing mean? It means a direct insult to honest labor. Men are not begging for clothes. They are begging for work. The Herald and its ilk dragged American labor down to beggary in the interests of foreign labor. But they have done nothing and advocated nothing for American labor since November, 1892. Their ante-election utterances have vanished like vapor. Labor can no more believe what they say or promise and does not believe them. Why does not The Herald now prepare and publish an act to prohibit immigration in the interest of that American labor which it loves so well at election time, but which it merely uses at other times as an advertising catchpenny to add coppers to its coffers?

Labor needs now more than ever it has done the strongest form of protection. The ruinous policy of prostration has ruined and prostrated American labor. The immigration of foreign paupers should be absolutely prohibited. We do not mean to restrict immigrants who come here apply supplied with means to settle down on farms in the west or elsewhere, and who will make good citizens, but we do mean the absolute, entire, thorough and complete restriction and prohibition of all paupers who come to compete with the idle surplus of American labor that we do possess—such paupers especially as we now see the large ocean steamship lines are arranging to bring here from Russia and elsewhere at reduced rates of passage money.

Let American labor be rigidly protected, we say, and let this protection be promptly given, as it is so urgently needed. This is the first political duty of the hour. It is a duty that comes long before the enforcement of the policy of prostration.

The Optical Goods Industry.

The traditional bull in a china shop and the mischievous monkey with windows to hear a crash are mild mannered in comparison with the iconoclastic and unscientific schemin of the Wilson bill that threatens ruin to the large and flourishing optical goods industry in this country. The bill proposes a reduction from 60 and 45 per cent to 35 per cent and gives those highly finished products no more protection than is allowed to such coarser products as car wheels. It places the same duty on the sheet steel from which the goods are made, as upon the same material after its value has been increased several hundred per cent by labor, and it has become the finished product of a business involving enormous capital. We learn that some 600 employees of the American Optical company at Southbridge, Mass., have led in a protest against it, and that their protest has been followed all over the country. —Home Market Bulletin.

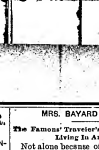
One Thing or the Other.

The total value of our imports of lumber, which it is now proposed to put upon the free list, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, was $18,686,772. The average protection then afforded to the lumber industry was 11.17 per cent ad valorem. We may expect these imports of lumber to exceed $110,000,000 in future unless the American lumbermen's wages are cut down 11 per cent.

If every American would decide to purchase only felt goods that are made in this country, then the factories at Dolgeville and elsewhere might continue to run and the wage earners find employment.

MRS. BAYARD TAYLOR.

The Famous Traveler's Widow Is Again Living in America.



MRS. BAYARD TAYLOR.

Not alone because of her name is the personality of Mrs. Bayard Taylor an interesting one to her friends in New York, among whom she has once again taken up her residence after many years of absence abroad. She is a woman of signal literary ability, as was abundantly shown by the able manner in which she discharged the duties devolving upon her as the literary executor of her husband, not to mention her own contributions to periodical literature and her volume of "Letters to Young Housekeepers," which have been received with remarkable favor.

Besides preparing and editing the two volumes of the "Life and Letters of Bayard Taylor," Mrs. Taylor edited two editions of her husband's poetry after his death and two posthumous volumes of prose, "Studies In German Literature" and "Literary Essays and Notes." Just now she is at work on a new edition of Mr. Taylor's "History of Germany," first issued in 1879, to which will be added a supplementary chapter by herself, bringing the work down to date.

Mrs. Taylor is the daughter of the late Professor Hansen, a well known astronomer of Gotha, Germany, and it was to that beautiful and progressive city that she returned a few years after Mr. Taylor's death in order that she might comfort the declining years of her widowed mother. It was never her intention to make her permanent residence there, though her talented daughter, who was Miss Lillian Taylor, is married to a German nobleman.

Mrs. Taylor must have become pretty thoroughly Americanized to be able to resist the inducements to pass her life in her native land, which her family connections and the great honor in which her late husband is held there must make peculiarly tempting in her case. Mr. Taylor's memory is revered in Germany as one of the best translators of Goethe, and Mrs. Taylor herself has been made an honorary member of the Goethe society of Weimar, to which the German emperor and many other royalties consider it an honor to belong.

THE IOWA STATE BAND.

Adding at the Midwinter Fair to the Laurels Won In Chicago.

The Iowa State band, which made such a notable success at the Columbian exposition, is now winning fresh laurels at the Midwinter fair in San Francisco, where it is engaged to play, as it was in Chicago, during the entire continuance of the fair. It gives two concerts every day, and yet its programmes have a freshness that is unusual and above a monotony that is remarkable. Its repertory includes over 2,000 selections and is being constantly added to, so that it is not difficult for its leader to fix up cards that avoid the monotonous repetition of certain pieces.

The latest popular air and the severest classical compositions are rendered with equal facility by the band's musicians, and people of the most dissimilar tastes are sure to hear something at each concert that gives them particular pleasure. This is the secret of the band's great success. It aims to please by variety in playing the sort of music that they like and playing it well. It is not conducted by any sort of idea that it has a mission to elevate the standard of popular musical taste, and yet it probably accomplishes as much in that direction as some of the more pretentious organizations that are supposed to be divinely endowed with a musical apostolate.

To Frederick W. Phinney, who has been the leader of the band for seven years, its great reputation is in large measure due. He is a worker from way back and keeps his musicians constantly rehearsing, so that when they come before the public they are moderately certain to give a perfect performance. Theodore Thomas furnished a list of selections to test the band's powers at Chicago, and the programme was the first performed by a brass band in Music hall, the acoustics of which were very delicate. As soon as the performance was over the band was engaged, and it was retained till the end of the exposition.

It would probably not be wide of the mark to credit Mr. Phinney with being a "born musician." He comes of a musical family, and his musical training actually began in babyhood. His father was the organist and leader of a well known band in Massachusetts 40 years ago and was afterward leader of the famous Ira Allen band, of which his sons were members. Several of those sons are playing under their brother's leadership now, and the band includes an unusual number of soloists of national reputation.

THE VIEWS OF AN IMPORTER.

A Dealer In Foreign Goods Talks About the Wilson Tariff.

Being in New York after the Wilson tariff bill had passed the house, I dropped in at the large importing place of Graball, Keepit & Co. I found that the senior partner of the firm was in Europe, but Mr. Keepit invited me into his private office and gave me a good foreign made cigar. This being unusually liberal on his part, I ventured to inquire if "business was good."

"Well, no. We cannot say that it is just yet. Indeed it has not been for several years past, but we look for a great improvement in the near future," was Mr. Keepit's reply.

"I am glad to hear that," I said. "It is indeed encouraging to hear somebody talk of good times when we read of so much distress in the country through this Wilson tariff."

"All nonsense," said Mr. Keepit. "It is the McKinley bill that has killed business. We have not imported since 1890, in three years, as many foreign goods as we used to handle every year before that ruinous high tariff came into effect."

"So you expect the Wilson bill to revive your trade, then?"

"Why, certainly; of course it must. How else could it be, with the duties all lowered? We expect to import foreign goods more largely than ever we did. Everything is in our favor now. Why, our Mr. Graball is in Europe already. He went over two weeks ago, so as to lose no time in placing his orders, and I cabled him last night that the Wilson bill had passed the house. He will be delighted. In fact, we all are. Take another cigar—put one in your pocket," and Mr. Keepit in his enthusiasm forced several into my pocket.

"But how about the American manufactures? Won't it hurt them if you import large quantities of foreign goods?" I asked.

"Why, of course—I suppose so. It must," said Mr. Keepit. "They cannot undersell us, you know. Wages are too high here. It is absurd to think that American goods can be sold as cheap as the European goods. We want the trade, and we buy where we can get the best market. We are not interested in American factories. We are importers."

"Then the American factories must close unless our people work for European wages," I said.

"Certainly," said Mr. Keepit. "We will flood the markets with cheap foreign goods till the American factories are closed, and then we can advance the prices a little at a time. Why, this is what we have been working for. For what other reason do you think the business men of New York paraded before Grover Cleveland 15 months ago?

"Oh," I said, "that great parade was because you wanted free trade, was it?"

"Of course, of course," said Mr. Keepit, rubbing his hands together gleefully, "and now we've got free trade, and we'll keep it, sure as my name's what it is. It is worth millions to us to deal in foreign goods. Millions in our pockets, do you hear?"

I heard—I could not help it, for he shouted it into my ears as he closed with delight about his office, thinking of the millions that Graball, Keepit & Co. would make out of cheap foreign goods.

But where do the American manufacturer and the American laborer come in?

B. F. JOHNSON.

Over Ten Billion Dollars Lost.

The effects of the free trade pestilential policy or prostration continue to be sadly experienced. We have been suffering from mouth to mouth the loss in the volume of trade throughout the country. Since March 1, 1893, net exchanges through bank clearances to Bradstreet's as compared with the corresponding months a year previously, for a period of 10 months they were as follows:

We here find that since April 1, 1893, the beginning of the month after the administration of the national affairs of the United States passed into the hands of a party devoted to free trade, the total volume of business throughout the country, as represented by bank clearings, was $10,150,000,000 less than during the corresponding months a year previously. The practical insolvency of the national treasury, its inability to meet its payments, an increase of $50,000,000 in the national debt and a loss of more than $10,000,000,000 in the volume of trade, and some 60 cities only form a record in just accordance with a free trade policy of prostration.—American Economist.

Down Goes the Farmer.

Illinois has over 20,000,000 acres of farm lands, worth $41.41 per acre on an average. It is difficult just yet to estimate how much less they will be worth when the Canadian farmers begin to pour their milk, cabbages, eggs, potatoes, straw, apples, bacon, hams, pork, mutton, beef and lard into the Chicago market, free of all duty, to depress the prices of the products of the American farms.

"Hind Sight."

One year ago
We struck the blow
For Grover and free trading.
With loud acclaim,
With streets aflame,
With marching and parading.
"Grover, Grover!" was our cry,
"Four years more of Grover,
With the free trade flag on high!"
Then we'll be in clover."

We little thought
The fight we fought
And won—definitive clover!
Would bring, instead,
But pauper's bread
To men who acted for Grover.
"Grover, Grover!" was our cry,
"Four years more of Grover,"
With the free trade flag on high!
The sycophants in the clover.

A Discussion on Free Coal.

The rabid editor of a free trade paper in Dover, N. H., lately told a working-man that free coal would be a great benefit to him. The discussion which followed was in the main as follows:

Laborer—You have admitted that the present depression is largely due to the uncertainty and delay in tariff legislation.

Editor—Certainly. Every one admits that.

Laborer—How much do you think I would be benefited by free coal?

Editor—Coal from the British provinces can be delivered here at a good profit at $4 per ton, and you now pay $6.50 per ton, and you could save $2.50 per ton with coal on the free list.

Laborer—I understood you that the tariff raised the price of an article just the amount of the duty. How, then, will the repeal of a 75 cent duty on a ton of coal reduce the price $2.50 per ton?

Editor—Oh, that will be the result of competition, and the Pennsylvania miners cannot compete with the miners of Nova Scotia.

Laborer—What will become of the Pennsylvania miners?

Editor—I guess the mines will be closed until the miners will work cheap enough so that they can also sell coal at $4 a ton.

Laborer—Then the new tariff is intended to reduce wages?

Editor—Oh, no indeed, that is not the object, though no doubt the wages will be incidentally reduced at first in many directions.

Laborer—I was half a ton of coal a month, and you say that free coal means I could save $2.50 on a ton or $1.25 per month on my coal bill. Now, my wages have been reduced 38, per cent and you have admitted that the agitation of the tariff question caused the depression which reduced them. You have also admitted that incidentally the proposed tariff itself would reduce wages. Before reduction my wages amounted to $3 per day. Now please explain how I am benefited by saving $1.25 a month on my coal bill while I lose $21.84 a month on my wages. I can hardly see where the saving comes in.

Editor—It is evident that you and I are not think alike on the tariff question. Good night, sir.

This conversation took place in the presence of several workmen and illustrates fairly well the effects of the proposed Wilson tariff on labor.

Farmers and Free Trade.

English agriculturists are not satisfied with their experience of free trade. A correspondent in the Mark Lane Express of Jan. 8, Mr. James Hunt, 12 Hampton Terrace, Bristol, wrote:

"If we are to compare nation with nation, we can give proofs that American protectionist artizan is the wealthiest and saving more money than English free traders are."

The writer concludes his communication with the following significant parallel:

A FALSE PROPHET.

Some of Colsdon's assertions that experience Peel and Gladstone:	Proofs of false prophecy:
Land would not be thrown out of cultivation by the repeal of the corn laws.	Nearly 2,500,000 acres have been driven out.
Land owners have been ruined by free trade in corn.	Rents and agricultural values have not fallen from 30 to 50 per cent.
In a country growing its population and advancing in prosperity land always increases in value and the amount pay higher rents than when it was.	If all the land in cultivation in this country was worth $50 an acre and was fallen 40 per cent, that is a loss of $20 an acre.
The land of England would produce 200,000 quarters more wheat per annum.	In 1892 we grew 17,000,000 quarters, in 1893 7,000,000 quarters.
We should always have a natural protection of 10s. per quarter on wheat in the shape of carriage from abroad.	Freights for wheat are now below 2s. a quarter, and it has been carried free, as ballast.
We might as well doubt that the sun would rise to-morrow as that in a few years every civilized nation on earth would have followed our free trade example.	Not a single nation on earth has followed our example.

Free Trade Is Death.

The late Henry W. Grady very tersely described the effects of free trade. I attended a funeral in Pickens county, Ga., of a poor man. They buried him in the bosom of a mica quarry. They cut through solid marble to make his grave, yet the little tombstone they put above him was from Vermont. They buried him in the heart of a pine forest, and yet the pine coffin was imported from Cincinnati. They buried him within lunch of an iron mine, and yet the nails in his coffin and the iron in the funeral hand saw his grave were imported from Pittsburg. They buried him by the side of the best sheep grazing country on the earth, and yet the wool in the coffin bands and the coffin bands themselves were brought from the north. The tomb did not furnish a thing for that funeral but the corpse and the hole in the ground.

There they put him away, and the clods rattled down on his coffin, and they buried him in a New York cord, and a Boston pair of shoes, and a pair of breeches from Chicago, and a shirt from Cincinnati, leaving him nothing to carry into the next world with him to remind him of the country in which he lived, for which he fought for four years, but the chill of blood in his veins and the marrow in his bones.

Cutlers Get It In the Neck.

The total imports of cutlery during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, were valued at $1,150,000, and this, too, when the American manufacturers of cutlery received from 63 to 66 per cent ad valorem protection, or an average of 80 per cent. The Wilson bill proposes to reduce this protection to 45 per cent, thus openly increasing by 35 per cent the business of the foreign manufacturers. This means a loss of $6 per cent to wage earners engaged in making cutlery, unless they can induce all good Americans to buy nothing but the American goods through a patriotic interest for American industries.

THE republicans—always in the lead in every good work, have decided to put a republican ticket in the field at the coming city election. Whether they will elect their ticket depends wholly upon what kind of timber they shall select for their candidates, but as they thoroughly understand that the city demands a business ticket, we feel that we may trust them to act wisely in this matter. Let a good, live business ticket be placed in the field and then let all who have the interests of the city at heart take hold enthusiastically and work for it and it will win—as it will deserve to. On the other hand if one cave is not exercised it would not be surprising to see a ticket put up that would be defeated—as it would deserve to be if proper care was not exercised. The opposition will be on the alert to take advantage of any mistakes republicans may make, so it behooves all republicans to be alive in this matter.

MUCH has been written and said as to the political intentions of Mayor Eustis, of Minneapolis. It is openly charged, that he originated the banquet to the editors in order to carry favor with the country press to further his gubernatorial aspirations—but we don't take any stock in that—mayor Eustis did not say anything to us about it personally nor did he once allude to it in his after supper speech. Again it is claimed that he has a great desire to succeed "Uncle Loren" in congress. We don't believe that because no one knows better then Mayor Eustis does that Governor Nelson can have a renomination if he wants it, and that the course of Loren Fletcher in congress has been such as to entitle him to a renomination if he should desire it. It is more probable that the mayor desires to succeed himself as mayor of Minneapolis and after that he will allow the people to call him up higher if they so choose to do.

THE JOURNAL has been of the opinion that J. J. Hill would be the first to reach Duluth with a direct line, and events now seem to verify that opinion. Not long since it was noted that Mr. Hill was in Washington D. C., and it was said that his object there was to defeat the passage of the bill granting right of way through the White Earth Reservation. Be that as it may, he suddenly left for home and began preparation for a trip to England, and soon after he left, a bill was introduced in congress to grant right of way for the Great Northern road through the reservation, and now comes the report from England that he has secured money to build to Duluth. This, if true, would seem to force the Duluth & Winnipeg road to take action at once and the probability is strong that the Red River Valley will get two direct roads to Duluth next summer.

THE Tribune man, County Attorney Holston, seems to be having great fun now-a-days over some points in the Ware libel case. But somehow he is strangely silent upon one very important point—that little item of $700 that the evidence indicated that somebody had offered a county commissioner for his vote, in connection with the chairmanship. Will the county attorney kindly tell his readers ALL HE KNOWS about THAT point?

GEN. WASHBURN is home from Washington this week attending to private business matters. Tou newspaper reporter, who asked him if he was going to be a candidate for re-election to the U. S. Senate, Mr. W. said that would depend on whether his services were considered valuable enough to entitle him to the honor. He said the people must decide that question.

IN a dispatch from Duluth last week the statement was made that J. J. Hill has perfected arrangements in England for money with which to continue the Great Northern road from Fosston to Duluth. Mr. Hill has a bill before congress to grant right of way for his road through White Earth Reservation, which looks significant.

THE spring election in Maine show great republican gains. In every village and city election heard from so far the republicans elect their ticket by great majorities.

THE movement set on foot on Thursday evening of last week, is more in the nature of a reform movement than of partisanship. Our best informed citizens have for sometime had the idea that the best way to govern our city was on a basis of party lines, as the other method, having been very thoroughly tried, has proved to be inadequate, so the movement was agitated and set on foot in order that the best interests of the city might be subserved. The result will be that every party that places a ticket in the field will be obliged to put up only its best men and place them upon a definite platform, so that they will be committed to a definite policy and the result must necessarily be—whichever party wins, for the best interests of the city. The suggestions of the JOURNAL a few issues since have been adopted on a general rule and seem to be gaining in popularity the more they are pondered over, until to-day you can hardly see a person who opposes them. The object the JOURNAL sought was reform in city politics and may the best BUSINESS TICKET win.

IT would seem, by surface indications that both parties will exercise the greatest care in the selection of a ticket to place in the field, with a view to placing a ticket in the field that will win. As the JOURNAL said in start the city's interests will thus be best subserved

THE JOURNAL is in receipt of a fac-simile of the card sent by the Prison Mirror editor to the editorial convention at Minneapolis last month. We are indebted for this unique specimen to F. E. Brenum, of the Sauk Center Avalanche.

Favors Free Silver.

In a long article, showing its reasons for favoring the free and unlimited coinage of silver the Moorhead News says:

"The voters of the Seventh Congressional district of Minnesota, and in the districts in the state, for that matter, will vote against their interests, will vote to perpetuate their own poverty, if they deposit their votes for a candidate for congress who is not pledged to the free and unlimited coinage of silver."

The JOURNAL agrees with the News if the News means free coinage upon a basis that would maintain its parity with gold but we do not agree to free coinage that would work against American interests in favor of foreign countries.

THE REVIEW TABLE.

The late Mr. George W. Childs was better known as an individual giver than perhaps any other man in the United States. It is no exaggeration to say that Mr. Childs, for the last half of his life, put more, labor and pains into the work of giving than he did into making money. To many people he seemed to scatter his gifts broadcast and bestow them indiscriminately, but his giving was without that method. In the Review of Reviews for March Mr. Childs' method of giving is appreciatively yet discriminatingly described by Talcott Williams of the Philadelphia Press. This article is illustrated with portraits of Mr. Childs at different ages, and engravings of some of his most notable gifts.

A Philadelphia Incident.

The easy and comfortable attitudes assumed by most men riding in street cars have frequently been a source of irritation to women, and one feminine passenger had the courage to publicly condemn the practice. A Sixteenth street car was scudding up town with many masculine passengers and one woman, who sat in an upper corner and whose physiognomy stamped her as a schoolma'am.

Another woman entered the car at Poplar street, and finding no vacant seat was proceeding to grasp a strap when the voice of the schoolma'am piped out, "If them men would put their legs together, there would be plenty of room!" A dead silence was followed by a stealthy shifting of other limbs until sufficient red cushion was visible to accommodate the standing passenger.—Philadelphia Record.

Their Titles.

Shakespeare has been a mine of wealth to authors in choosing titles to their books. Tersely descriptive are "The Quality of Mercy," "A Woman's Reason," "A Modern Instance," "the Undiscovered Country," which W. D. Howells found in the great dramatist. Mrs. Oliphant remembered her Shakespeare when she named one of her novels "The Primrose Path," Mr. Hardy must have been reading "As You Like It" when he called his book "Under the Greenwood Tree." Other writers have taken "Airy, Fairy Lilian," "A Daughter of the Gods" and "The Heir of the Ages" as titles from Tennyson.—Journal of Education.

A MOST MYSTERIOUS VISION.

An Uncanny Dream In Which Major Andre's Fate Was Duplicated.

The following instance may serve to strikingly justify Colquhoun's theory that there is an original spiritual energy expressed in dreams which has nothing to do with the state of the body and is beyond the power of the soul when it has been reabsorbed by the materiel organism on awaking.

Prior to his embarkation for America at the outbreak of the Revolutionary war Major Andre went to visit a friend, Miss Rebecca Steward, who lived at Derbyshire. During his stay it was arranged that they should ride over to view the wonders of the famous Peak. It was also Miss Steward's desire to introduce the major to some friends in the neighborhood, including a Mr. Newton and the curate of the parish, Mr. Cunningham. She had given both these gentlemen notice of her intention, and while awaiting her arrival Mr. Cunningham took occasion to tell Mr. Newton the circumstances of a dream he had had the night before, which affected him so that he could not shake off the recollection of it.

He said that he was standing in the midst of a forest that was entirely strange to him. After gazing listlessly around him for a few moments he perceived a horseman approaching at great speed. As the latter came opposite the spot where the dreamer stood three men who seemed to have been lying in ambush sprang from their place of concealment, and seizing the bridle of the horse ordered the rider to dismount. They then carefully searched his person and led him away. The face, figure and bearing of the horseman made so deep an impression upon Mr. Cunningham's mind that he awoke, but falling asleep again presently dreamed that he was one of a throng of spectators near a great city; that he saw the same person he had seen seized in the wood brought on between files of soldiers, who marched him to a gallows and there hanged him. When Major Andre and Miss Steward arrived, Mr. Cunningham was horror struck to discover in the person of Miss Steward's friend the very man whose seizure and execution he had witnessed in his dream.

Here was an accurate anticipation of events that actually happened within 12 months from the date of the dream. The capture of Andre, the search of his person for documents that convicted him for acting the part of a spy and his public execution constitute one of the most dramatic episodes of the war with the mother country. How is it imaginable that so definite a vision of coming events could arise from the influence of any physical condition on the mind of the sleeper? What possible state of the body could confer upon the soul the power to describe future occurrences with such exact fidelity to details?—New York Times.

His Reasons.

"People sometimes ask me why I spell my name with two n's," said Representative Herrmann. "When I was a student in Maryland years ago, I got the idea into my head that I would follow the fashion and eliminate the extra letter. I started in by writing to my father, a respected and prominent physician in Baltimore, and signing it in the improved way, 'Your affectionate son Binger Herman.' My father quickly detected the change, and back came a letter whose earnest reproaches I have never forgotten.

"He pointed out that the name stood for one of the greatest heroes of antiquity, Armenius, the Hermann of Tacitus, who stood like a bulwark against Roman lust of conquest, and to whose leadership the ancient Germans owed the preservation of their liberties and their language and their freedom. He said that name was given me by those who alone had the authority to confer it, and with their consent the name should never be altered, even in respect to a letter. The rebuke I received so impressed me that I concluded if the name was good enough for my father it would be good enough for me."—Washington Post.

His Trip to Japan.

The rector of one of the up town churches announced in Sunday school that all the boys who were faithful attendants at the classes for a specified time should be taken on a stereopticon trip to Japan.

Time passed, and the period was finished. But before the promised entertainment could be announced there was a ring at the rectory door one day, and a good woman appeared inquiring for the preacher. He was out, and she was told she must come again.

She was willing, adding that she wanted to see him about her boy's going to Japan. He had won the trip, she said, but she didn't know what clothes he would need or what preparations she might have to make.

It is to be feared, though it is not so stated, that the rector was out the next time she called too.—New York Times.

A Whist Curiosity.

Those who are fond of a "hand at whist" will be interested in the following peculiar circumstance: One evening four friends were playing a rubber at a mutual friend's house not far from Barnetsgate. O. D. and R. B. were partners, and E. B. and C. H. were ditto. On two occasions E. B. and C. H. were every trick, and on one occasion O. D. and R. B. held every black card, and E. B. and C. H. every red one. Ones were trumps.—Devon and Exeter Daily Gazette.

Bay State Etiquette.

Wingate—It must be a queer kind of etiquette they teach at that boarding school Miss Flyrre has just graduated from.

Walker—Why so?

Wingate—Oh, nothing. Only I kissed her in the hallway in the darkness the other night, and she said "Thanks."—Somerville Journal.

Va., "I had a bronchial trouble of such a persistent and stubborn character, that the doctor pronounced it incurable with ordinary medicines, and advised me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I did so, and one bottle cured me. For the last fifteen years, I have used this preparation with good effect whenever I take and I know of numbers of people who keep it in the house all the time, not considering it safe to be without it."

"I have been using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for 20 years, with the most satisfactory results, and can cheerfully recommend it as being especially adapted to all pulmonary complaints. I have, for many years, made pulmonary and other medicines a special study, and I have come to the conclusion that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral occupies a position pre-eminent over other medicines of the class."—Chas. WORK OF CONGRESS.

Tuesday, Feb. 27.

Mr. Peace complained to the house for his bitter language of Monday. Mr. Bland was again unable to muster a quorum on his motion to close debate on the seigniorage bill, so he allowed the debate to run on without limit.

The senate held another brief session during the day, in which nothing of importance was accomplished, and at 1:20 o'clock adjourned, after an executive session of half an hour, in order that the caucus on the tariff bill might be continued.

Wednesday, Feb. 28.

The senate held a two hours session during the day, the whole of which was given up to a speech by Senator Frye in opposition to President Cleveland's Hawaiian policy. After a short executive session the senate adjourned.

Mr. Bland secured a quorum on his seigniorage bill on a demand for the previous question. When the vote was taken on the adoption of the special order, however, the quorum had disappeared, leaving the matter just where it was.

Thursday, March 1.

The long struggle in the house over the Bland bill for the coinage of silver seigniorage and the silver bullion in the treasury was ended only by the passage of the bill by a vote of 167 to 130, a majority in favor of the bill of 37. The special order to bring the bill to a vote was adopted by a bare quorum immediately after the house convened. This broke the opposition of the filibusters, and they were powerless to do anything further to place an obstacle in the way of the bill. All the amendments offered to the measure by its opponents were defeated.

The senate session was unimportant and an adjournment until Monday was taken.

Friday, March 2.

This senate was not in session.

In the house after the morning hour the pension appropriation bill was discussed in committee of the whole.

Saturday, March 3.

The senate was not in session.

Debate on the pension bill continued in the house.

Monday, March 5.

The debate on the pension appropriation bill continued all day in the house, and at times considerable spirit was displayed. The principal sponkers were Messrs. Dolliver, Hepburn, Kolee, Cannon and Tawney of Minnesota.

The senate held a short session and but little business of importance was transacted. A brief debate on silver was precipitated by the intension expressed by the vice president to refer the Bland seigniorage bill (which had just been received from the house) to the finance committee.

Northern Pacific Employes Argue Against the Strikes Injunction.

MILWAUKEE, March 4.—Judge Jenkins is listening to arguments on the application of Chief Arthur of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, Chief Sargent of the Brotherhood of Firemen, and other labor leaders for a modification of the order issued by Judge Jenkins, restraining the employes of the Northern Pacific road from entering upon a strike. T. W. Herper of Terre Haute, Ind., opened in behalf of the petitioners and was followed by Attorney Charles Queries, also for the petitioners. At midnight, for the first time, a railroad company, was speaking when court adjourned for the day.

THE REINCARNATION THEORY.

A Beautiful Explanation That Was Painful to Its Final Application.

Landlord Allan is always looking for a good thing and always recognizes it when he sees it. This he found in a Washington paper, and the local application makes it the more interesting:

If there is a good story born in Washington, it is a two to one shot that its cradle will lie in the back parlor of John Chamberlin's. Dr. Edward Beckle came over from Philadelphia one night and set them entertaining a choice group of friends with tales of his far east. In the edge of the group sat a man from Pennsylvania, who had come over from Pottsville on some government contracting business. He was all ears and eyes. His name was Stranss. Finally the restraint became too intense, and he broke loose.

"Doctor," said he, "what a dot new relichun I heere off about Chine? My wife has got it fery bad, and I don't understand it."

"Tell me the name," said Bedloe.

"Is it Mohammedanism, Buddhism, Shintoism, Voodooism, Confucianism or what?"

"Oh, it is no issue, but dere seems it like a tramp's migrashan of dee soul, ain't it?"

"Oh, you doubtless mean transmigration of the soul."

"Vah, dot's it. You doll me ebout dot."

"Certainly. Transmigration of the soul is a very pretty doctrine of metempsychosis which, one fiends of the Theosophical society late horrovved from the far east"——

"Dere, here, tecter! Tell me vot dot means, so I can understaad what you vas talking ebout."

"All right, I will tell you in plain lasgnage. Take yourself, for instance. You live to the allotted age of three-score years and ten, and then you pass avvey. Your soul goes into the body of a bird—a canary, we'll say—and from your gilded cage you fill a lady's boudoir with the melody, living a life of luxury and fed from the dainty fingers of beauty"——

"Oh, dot is peautiful, peautiful! I like dot!"

"And then you die again, and your soul goes into a lovely flower in a garden, and you fill all the air with fragrance and delight the eye with your exquisite color and delicacy of petals"——

"Ah, dot is fine! I like dot relichun."

"As I was saying when you interrupted me, you live the life of a flower, until one day a donkey gets into the garden, and attracted by your lovoliness he eats you, and your soul passes into the donkey"——

"Vah, yah."

"Where some former acquaintance comes along, strokes your long ears and says: 'Why, Stranss, is it you? How little you have changed!'"—Pottsville (Pa.) Republican.

Know When They Are Hungry.

Pigeons must have the credit of possessing some intelligence. A curious and interesting sight may be seen any day, each day, Sundays excepted, at one of the windows of the office of Henry W. Williams, in the Rialto building, opposite the postoffice. For the past few years some of the pigeons have been there regularly fed at 11 o'clock. A basket of cracked grain is purchased at a time for purposes, and birds gather on the west side of the postoffice and watch for the window to open. They know the hour well when they arrive. If there should chance to be any delay in opening the window, they will fly down to the open windows of some of the same office and tap on the glass to remind the clerks who may be sitting within that they are there. When a second basket of grain is purchased, the minute the window opens they land on and about the sill and push and crowd and stand on each other's backs and sometimes fight, so eager are they to pick up the grain which is spread all about the outside. They soon become quite tame and readily eat out of the hand.—Boston Transcript.

Fumice Stone.

Pumice stone is a porous feldspastic scoria from volcanoes. The porps are linear and so fine as often to be barely visible except by means of a magnifying glass. Its specific gravity is 2.3 to 2.4 —water being the unit—but by reason of the vast number of pores is often of anoyant enough to float on water. It consists chiefly of silica, with sometimes 12 per cent of alumina, 4 per cent of soda and 4 per cent of potash. It is of grayish shades of color, pussing into yellow and brown. The chief source from which it is obteined for commercial purposes is Campo Blanco, one of the Lipari islands, where it forms a hill nearly 1,000 feet high. In the arts pumice is largely employed, mostly in a pulverized state, as a polishing material for ivory, wood, glass, marbles, etc. It is also used in lamp for grinding and smoothing metallic surfaces, leather, etc., and in the preparation of parchments, etc. Quantities of the pulverized pumice are used in making fancy soaps.—Brooklyn Eagle.

West Virginia.

West Virginia, with less then 800,000 inhabitants, has but three cities and is essentially a rural and half settled region. In spite of her enormous wealth in timber and mineral, also, many of her counties number only a handful of people. No West Virginia county has 50,000 inhabitants, and only 10 have more then 30,000, while 19 have less than 10,000 and two less than 5,000. In many of the mountainous counties the conditions of life are simple to the last degree, and the people are far removed from the great currents of national life in spirit as well as in distance and time.—New York Sun.

THE GAULS IN AFRICA

ENLARGING THEIR POSSESSIONS IN THE DARK CONTINENT.

France Has Finally Appropriated Ishoopistan Timbuctoo, and Has the Interior Floats Over One-fourth of Africa—Importance of the New Acquisition.

In the mad scramble for African territory which the European powers have been making during the past decade France has managed to seize a larger share than any of the others. Of the 11,012,000 square miles of the earth's surface which the dark continent is estimated to comprise, France actually or nominelly controls more than one-fourth, or over 3,000,000 square miles. Her domain extends from Algeria and Tunis dqwn to the coast of Guinea, embracing the larger part of what is still designated on our maps as the desert of Sahara, all the country watered by the Senegal and most of that watered by the upper Niger. A line from the Niger to Lake Chad seperates part of French Africa from the territory of the British Niger company. Farther south she has appropriated a great block of land between the Cameroons and the Congo. On the other side she has taken Madagascar under her wing, while outside the entrance to the Red sea she has a big patch around the entrance to the port of Obock.

Included in the French territory are the great bend of the Niger and the famous city of Timbuctoo, of which until quite recently France never attempted to take possession, though she has been looking with longing eye in that direction for a number of years. The recent activity of the English in Africa awakened the Gauls to a realization of the danger there was in. They saw that they would not be able to resist any sudden move on Great Britain's part so long as they were practically outside of the city and determined to reclaim that which had long since been conceded to them. Responsibility for taking possession of the city was disclaimed by the government, and the act was said to be wholly unauthorized. Nevertheless it was noticeable that the ministry declared in the chamber of deputies that there could be no question of evacuating Timbuctoo. The French flag had been raised, and it would be an insult to French valor to lower it voluntarily.

Timbuctoo lies on the borders of the Sahara, about nine miles from the river Niger. It has a population of about 20,000, which is greatly increased during the season of trade, from January to January. The houses are closely packed together and are mostly built of clay and stone. Some of them are two stories high and show considerable taste in their decoration. The port of Timbuctoo is at Kabara, on the Niger, which has a vast artificial basin, but is accessible for only four or five months in the year, the stream at other times being too shallow for navigation.

The most valuable traffic is by caravans, for which Timbuctoo is the central station of northern Africa. Gold dust is the great article of trade. The merchants of Timbuctoo are usually agents of those at Mogadore, Morocco, Fez and other places in northern Africa. The inhabitants are a mixed population of negroes, Tuaricks, Bamberras, Mandingoes, Arabs and Fulahs.

The city dates from the twelfth century, but it was long known in Europe only by reports of native travelers until it was first reached by Major Laing in 1826 and furtively visited by Caille in 1828. Barth, the great scientific traveler, spent seven months there in 1853 and collected a lot of valuable data. He was the last white man to reach the city till Dr. Lenz went there in 1880 disguised as a Mohammedan pilgrim.

The town is not doubtful. Numerous pools of stagnant water between the city and the Niger breed fevers. There are plenty of squares and carrefours, but they overdrive is four or five sickly little trees. They only public buildings are the mosques, and no European has ever entered them except Caille. Schools are connected with the mosques, and here also are collections of manuscripts, some of them doubtless of much historical importance, though Barth translated and published the most valuable of them. Most of the inhabitants can read and write and know a large part of the Koran by heart. Some of the men are renowned for their learning. Lenz says that if he could have spared time to stay longer he have purchased some very interesting manuscripts.

Timbuctoo today is only the shadow of its former self. The time was when the town did a large trade with the Mediterranean states. Sultan El Kel of Agadez placed wooden posts clear across the desert to mark the best route for caravans between his dominions and Timbuctoo. The Tuaregs have ruined this caravan route and almost depopulated the town.

It is still, however, the natural center of commerce and the practical key to all the upper Niger. With Timbuctoo in their hands, the French will control a thousand inland navigation on the great west African river and may make the place a center of large influence for the extension of their authority and trade. There are at present no means of estimating the future growth and prosperity of inhospitable Timbuctoo with the assistance of the railroads that are surely coming.

HE WORKS HARD.

That Is Why Justice White Has Succeeded So Well.

If the gossips of Washington society know whereof they speak, Justice White, the new member of the United States supreme court, will soon marry a wealthy widow—Mrs. Linden Kent, whose husband was a prominent lawyer in this national capital, died a year or so ago, leaving her a considerable fortune in addition to the larger one which she had previously inherited from the estate of her father, the late Mr. Montgomery of New York. The gossips see dazzling social possibilities in the match, for Justice White is also very wealthy, and the hospitalities of such a couple need be limited by nothing but their own desires and good taste.

Justice White's fortune is the result of his own endeavors, and one of his classmates at college ascribes its accumulation entirely to persevering industry. Young White did not take very high rank as a scholar either in his academic course or at the law school, and his classmate, who was valedictorian at both commencements, had greater advantages of wealth and position. Both began practice in New Orleans at the same time, but the valedictorian became known as a pitchman with a law office that he seldom visited, while White was recognized as a lawyer of deep reading, wise counsel and great application and thoroughness.

"Now," continued this candid narrator, "the valedictorian is an accomplished loafer and sport, without an office, a case or the prospect of a fee, and White, the man who was not at the top of the class, but who was always industrious, is the peer of his associates in the senate, a man of wealth, acquired through his practice, and is about to enter the bench of the highest court in the land."

Edward Douglass White was born in the parish of Lafourche, La., in November, 1845, and was educated at Mount St. Mary's, Md., at the Jesuit college in New Orleans, and at Georgetown (D. C.) university. He served in the Confederate army in 1862 and 1863 was licensed to practice law by the supreme court of Louisiana. In 1874 he was elected a state senator and was twice elected to years later associate justice of the supreme court of Louisiana. He was elected to the United States senate to succeed James B. Eustis and took his seat March 4, 1891.

minder to his countrymen that at the best they could not hope to have him with them long. A man in his seventy-ninth year cannot in the ordinary course of events expect to live much longer, and in the case of General Early's case his best health is but feeble his preservation is rether a matter of surprise.

The old soldier was born in Franklin county, Va., Nov. 3, 1816, and graduated at West Point in 1837. His first assignment to duty was as a lieutenant in Fortress Monroe, and he served with the regular artillery in Florida. At the end of a year he resigned from the army and began practicing law. He was twice elected commonwealth's attorney and also served in the state in the legislature. During the Mexican war he was major of the Virginia volunteers and for a short time acted as military governor of Monterey. When the fighting between the states began he was elected and stuck to it till the civil war broke out.

He entered the Confederate service as a colonel and was at the first battle of Bull Run. At Williamsburg, where he was severely wounded in the leg, he received a wound that was thought to be mortal, but from which he recovered in a few months. He fought in many of the great battles of the war and held many important commands up to the spring of 1865, when Lee was compelled by public opinion to remove him from his command in the Shenandoah valley because of the serious reverses his army had sustained. The disgrace of that removal embittered the rest of his life.

After the war General Early again resumed his law practice and was associated for a year in Georgetown with Senator Lonisiana lottery. He never married, having had his first romantic love affair spoiled by the fickleness of a northern girl whom he rescued from drowning at White Sulphur Springs during his cadet days. The lovers were engaged, and the lieutenant was anticipating a happy termination to the romance when his hopes were blasted by the receipt of a newspaper containing a notice of the marriage of his charmer with a northern man.

VERDUROUS LAWNS AND FOLIAGE.

An Englishman Tells About the Careful Gardening In His Native Land.

Lewis Roie, a practical gardener, came to this country 10 years ago from England, where he was a farmer, and he trims and cats according to English rules. Speaking of this country, he said:

You Americans do not know what good lawns are. In England the bosses of the gentry are surrounded by acres of green sward that looks just like velvet. They mow the grass with a machine every week, and after the mower comes a heavy stone roller that rolls it down as fat as a piece of paper. It is just as smooth as that table over there stretched over the table. The roller is to press down and heal any little break or tear in the turf made by the mashing. If you break the turf anywhere, it is just like breaking your skin. You must fix it directly, or there will be a sore place on the lawn. Even if it gets well there will always be a scar there unless you mend it carefully. You should see the English lawns after a shower! The grass is beautiful, and every blade of grass stands up straight, but all the little blades are of exactly the same length, and they look soft and level. The perfection of the green grass is delightful. They have windows generally that come down to the floor, and on the walls outside the house are climbing rose bushes all in bloom. The combined odor of roses and new mown grass is very pleasant.

You have to go at a lawn as if it were a piece of embroidery you were at work on. First you must have a good rich, decaying mold for the grass to live on. You cannot make grass grow in sand. Then as the grass comes up you must go over it step by step and dig out all the coarse grass and weeds and be sure to mend each place after digging up the roots. Then you will begin to find patches where no grass appears. You want to have grass seed handy and sow these places with it.

I water my lawns twice a day—in the morning before the sun gets fairly up and at night after it goes down. I mow the grass every week. After you have a good lawn you must watch every inch of it. You have no idea how easy it is to let a patch here and there get poisoned to death. When you find any foreign substances on a lawn that is flowering to poison the grass, you want to dig it up, put fresh soil and fertilizer under it and fix it as new and handy bit of turf in the bolo you have made. Then keep an eye on it afterward and water it well. The rich, decaying vegetable refuse from the stable make the best fertilizer.

In pruning trees you want to cut off every long shoot and make your trees compact and bushy like a full blown rose. Even wealthy Americans let their trees get scrawny, and they don't always cut them enough to make room for sun in some of the branches. It is easy to trim trees if you understand this principle. And the only reason I have been successful with my lawns is that I have been willing to take pains with them and do a lot of hard work.—New York Sun.

A Workman's Time Checker.

An English time check has been designed for the use in factories and workshops for keeping a register of the time of the workmen. Its inventor claims that it is the only apparatus of the kind actuated and controlled by electricity. It contains no special clockwork and no complicated parts and requires no fixing. As many checks can be fitted to one clock as may be desired, and any ordinary clock can be adapted for the purpose. Each man is provided with checks, one of which he drops into the slot of the apparatus on entering the building. The checks are subsequently removed, and after their numbers have been registered placed on a board ready for the men to take when next leaving work. Any number of slots can be provided, but as a rule two only, marked respectively "early" and "late," are required. When the time for beginning work has gone by, the "early" slot is closed by an electrical attachment, and the "late" slot is opened. Before the next spell of work commences the "late" slot is closed, and the "early" one opened, ready to receive the checks of the workmen.—Exchenge.

Very Ancient Jokes.

When Themistocles was trying to get money out of the Andrians for the Athenian cause he threw out a hint that the Athenians would come with two great gods, persuasion and necessity, to which Andrian replied that the Athenians were well off with two such serviceable gods, but they had two gods who always refused to aid their country—poverty and impossibility.

Cyrus' bitter jest about the Greeks to the wretched Lydians, who had declined his overtures, and then after the taking of Sardis wanted to come to terms, has too much cruelty to be humorous. "Say," said the iasulting victor, "that a piper, seeing fishes in the sea, were to pipe to them, thinking they will come out to the land, and when he was disappointed of his hope took a net and inclosed a great multitude of the fishes and drew them to land, and seeing them flopping said to the fishes that were dancing to me, since you would not come out and dance when I played." —Westminster Review.

ROSEBERRY IS NAMED

GLADSTONE'S RESIGNATION ACCEPTED BY THE QUEEN

And His Successor Is Appointed—The Radicals Strongly Opposed to a Lord For Their Leader and There Is Trouble In Sight For the New Premier.

LONDON, March 3.—This resignation of Mr Gladstone has been formally accepted by the queen and Lord Rosebery appointed to succeed him.

Mr. Gladstone wrote a letter to Earl Rosebery, congratulating him upon his accession to the premiership. In his letter Mr. Gladstone promised to aid the new prime minister whenever his assistance was asked. It is understood that Earl Roseberry's communication to Sir William Harcourt has resulted in the latter consenting to retain his position as chancellor of the exchequer and to his accepting the government leadership in the house of commons.

Lord Rosebery has been the recipient of many congratulatory letters and dispatches. Among those who telegraphed him were the Prince and Princess of Wales. Hundreds of letters and telegrams expressing regret because of his retirement from office were received by Mr. Gladstone. The Nationalists propose to present Mr. Gladstone an address in recognition of the great services that he has rendered to the Irish cause.

The speech from the throne proroguing parliament has been signed by the queen. It is neither a long one nor significant. The speech is the last official document prepared by Mr. Gladstone. It briefly refers to the protracted and laborious character of the session.

The Irish Independent of Dublin, which is a Parnellite organ, contains an article saying that as Mr. Gladstone has now retired, it will be necessary that full and complete assurances be obtained from Lord Roseberry that the government's shall be continued. It adds that only on condition that Lord Roseberry in the fullest sense adheres to this policy and gives guarantees that a home rule bill will be passed within a practicable period of time if the Parnellites continue to support the Liberal government. On this point the paper declares that there must be no weakness or hesitation. Lord Rosebery must show his colors immediately.

Interviews had by the representative of the Associated Press with leading members of the house of commons show that while a section of the Radicals continue to strongly resent the selection of Lord Rosebery, instead of Sir William Vernon Harcourt, as Mr. Gladstone's successor, there is a large preponderance of Liberals who favor loyally accepting Lord Rosebery. Mr. Henry Labouchere continues to lead the Irreconcilables. He insists that they will soon find an opportunity to protest in a practical form in the house of commons against the selection of Lord Rosebery as prime minister.

NEW BRITISH CABINET.

The Earl of Kimberly Assumes the Foreign Portfolio.

LONDON, March 7.—The Standard makes the following official announcement:

"The Earl of Kimberley will assume the foreign portfolio, the Rt. Hon. Henry Fowler the Indian portfolio, and Mr. T. F. Ellis, now lord of the treasury, will become patronage secretary to the treasury, succeeding Mr. Majorhanks, the Liberal 'whip.'"

The appointment of Mr. Fowler, who is now the president of the local government board, is a surprise, but it is regarded as a good one, as he is well informed upon the financial questions and difficulties of India.

Mr. John Morley has consented to retain his portfolio as chief secretary for Ireland

VILLARD'S SCHEME.

Ex-President of the Northern Pacific Planning to Again Get Control.

NEW YORK, March 7.—President Drayton Ives has officially, in behalf of the directors of the Northern Pacific Railway company, asked the bondholders of that company to withhold their acceptance of the agreement recently promulgated by the committee claiming to represent the consolidated bondholders, and states four reasons for making this request. Briefly these are: That the publication of such an agreement is premature; that the scope of the committee is too limited; that the constitution of the committee is unfortunate, and that, apart from the foreign interest hitherto represented by Mr. Villard, the committee owns and controls but a limited amount of bonds. Mr. Ives argues that while Northern Pacific earnings continue to decrease, and in the absence of any full and accurate from the receivers, no basis for a plan of reorganization can be presented. He says also that this committee has made no effort to co-operate with the existing committee which represent other mortgage liens on the company's property. This committee is dominated by Mr. Villard, and the success of this plan will give Mr. Villard a third opportunity to control the company's affairs. The directors, Mr. Ives says, now own personally large amounts of bonds and represent millions belonging to their friends. He urges that a committee representing all interests be formed, or that the present committee be enlarged to meet requirements pointed out. When this is done the directors will use whatever influence and authority they possess to secure the co-operation of the stockholders in any plan which may be proposed, by the bondholders.

Financial Statement

Bondholders Sign.

NEW YORK, March 7.—The Northern Pacific reorganization committee, representing the general mortgage bonds, report that German holders of $7,049,000 of those bonds have signed the bondholder's agreement.

JURY DISCHARGED.

Sensation in the Trial of the Reuter Cases at Madison, Wis.

MADISON, Wis., March 3.—A sensation was sprung in the state roster printing suit when Attorney Olin of the prosecution announced to the court that one juryman had formed and publicly expressed an opinion of the innocence of the defendants. The juryman was a man named Reihle. The statement of counsel was supported by five affidavits of university students, who had heard Juror Reihle make the statement at the dinner table where all boarded.

The counsel held a conference and agreed that Reihle must be excused, but the defense was unwilling to proceed with 11 jurors.

Discharged the Jury.

Judge Siebecker ordered that the jury be discharged and the sheriff issue a special venire for 80 jurors. The whole trial will have to be commenced over.

The court appointed Attorneys Rufus B. Smith and P. W. Hall to examine into the charges against Juror Reihle and to report to the court for further proceedings on the court's own motion.

Juror Reihle is a substantial farmer of the town of Roxbury, and his action was much of a surprise to his friends and to the public. The court ruled that the text of the affidavits should not be published to avoid creating prejudice in the case.

LIGHT VOTE CAST.

Municipal Elections Held in Many Iowa Cities.

DES MOINES, March 7.—Municipal elections were held in a number of cities throughout Iowa during the day. The weather all over the state was extremely disagreeable and in most places the vote was light. The Republicans made gains in several cities that have been steadily Republican and in some others gained slightly in councilmen. Their largest gain was in Iowa City, where they carried every ward but one.

In Cedar Rapids there was a spirited contest, resulting in a victory for the Democrats, they electing their mayor by 500 majority and electing all other city officers, save the treasurer.

In Muscatine the Democrats elected the mayor and two of four city officers.

At Burlington, as the result of a Democratic split, Eugene Butts, Rep., was elected mayor, and the Republicans also secured three aldermen.

At Sioux City the entire Republican municipal ticket was elected by from 400 to 600—a gain over last fall.

Council Bluffs Republicans elect mayor and nearly all other city officers.

At Corning the Democrats elected the mayor and the Republicans captured the recorder, treasurer and two councilmen.

JUST FOR REVENGE.

An Oregon Man Kills Two People, Wounds Another and Suicides.

EUGENE, Or., March 4.—A terrible tragedy occurred at a farm house a few miles from here. Albert Moss was shot by his father quarreled. And David Coleman, a farmer living near by, took sides with the father. Young Moss went to Coleman's house later and commenced shooting at the family. He first attacked a married daughter of Coleman, shooting her twice and killing her instantly. He then shot another daughter through the arm, and finally attacked Coleman, whom he shot through the abdomen and fatally injured. He then went home and blew out his own brains.

Illinois Democrats.

CHICAGO, March 7.—The Democratic state central committee met in this city and decided to hold the state convention in Springfield on Wednesday, June 27. The committee also decided to refer the matter of a United States senatorial nomination to the county conventions, being the same action taken by the committee in 1890, and which resulted in the election of Senator Palmer.

Wilson Is Improving.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 4.—Congressman Wilson, who is ill at Guadalajara, is recovering satisfactorily, and the typhoid attack of fever has left him. He now needs only nursing and rest. Dr. Malmet Prevost says that after 10 to 14 days convalescence Mr. Wilson can start home in his car.

Judge Long's Pension.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Judge Cox of the district supreme court has granted the injunction asked for by Judge Charles D. Long of the Michigan supreme court, to restrain Commissioner of Pensions Lochren from reducing his pension from $72 to $50 a month, as the commissioner announced he would do.

Learned Opal in the World.

CALDWELL, Ida., March 4.—Word comes from the opal mines near here of the finding of the largest opal in the world. It is said to be as large as a hen's egg, and without a flaw. It is estimated that the gem will dress 32½ karats and prove the highest quality and immensely valuable.

The Pope's Birthday.

ROME, March 4.—The popo celebrated his 84th birthday and the 16th anniversary of his coronation. Cardinal Rafaelo Monaco Lavet, one of the members of the Sacred college, offered his congratulations, and the pope, who was in good health, expressed his thanks.

CANDIDATE KOLB.

He Divides His Time Between Politics and Raising Watermelons and Cotton.

Hon. Reuben F. Kolb is again a candidate for the governorship of Alabama, and the political aches of the cotton state will be painted with the gorgeous colors of a tropical sunset between now and election day. Mr. Kolb is a farmer and over since the war has enjoyed a national reputation as a scientific agriculturist. He is especially well known as a watermelon and cotton grower, and he ships watermelons and cotton and all over the south and southwest and even to China, Japan and southern Russia, as well as to various South and Central American countries.

In 1870 he was appointed a trustee of the Agricultural and Mechanical college at Auburn, and in 1880 Governor Seay appointed him state commissioner of agriculture, an office which he filled for four years. During his term he organized the famous "Alabama on Wheels" expedition to the north and west, which induced a great deal of emigration to the state and interested capitalists in Alabama lands. In 1887 he was elected president of the national farmers' congress and was unanimously re-elected at its second annual convention.

An Alabamian by birth, training and education, Mr. Kolb's whole life has been spent in his native state. He was born in Enfaula nearly 55 years ago, a farmer's son. When he was 16 years old, he entered Howard college at Marion, where he spent three years, after which he studied at the University of North Carolina, graduating in 1859. On his return from college he began farming and has been a farmer ever since except while serving in the field during the civil war.

At the beginning of the war Mr. Kolb enlisted as a private in Captain Alphens Baker's famous company. He served for a year and then went home and raised an artillery company, known as Kolb's battery, which fought through the war under Bragg, Johnston, Hood and other famous Confederate generals. During the last six months of the war he commanded a battalion of artillery.

MOODY'S CHRISTIAN CONFERENCES.

They Will Meet Hereafter In the New Northfield Tabernacle.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey, the great evangelists, still devote themselves assiduously to the work which has made them famous. It is nearly a quarter of a century now since these men began their united efforts for the conversion of sinners, and each of them had been engaged in individual labors for years before that, yet the people seem never to tire of hearing these tell the old, old story of salvation through the gospel of Christ, and unbelievers still marvel at their great success. They do not confine themselves to evangelistic work in the great cities whence invitations come to them like the cry from Macedonia in apostolic times. Their untiring enthusiasm finds work to do in the summer season, when they escape as they think to the winter would be inconvenient. Mr. Moody's summer schools for Bible study at Northfield, Mass., his birthplace and home, have become established institutions, and he devotes himself to them with all the fiery ardor that so especially marks him as a man set apart for evangelical work.

There are three of these schools or conferences held every summer. The first meets in June. It is especially for young women and was organized last year by the Young Women's Christian association. In July a second convention is held for college students and Young NORTHFIELD TABERNACLE.

Men's Christian association workers. It was organized in 1880. In August the general conference for Christian workers meets. This was instituted in 1880 and is always largely attended, delegations even coming from Great Britain.

These conferences have hitherto met in one of the buildings of the seminary at Northfield established by Mr. Moody, but they have outgrown the capacity of the hall, which seats 600 people. It was consequently decided last year that a new auditorium or tabernacle must be built large enough to accommodate all who come. This will be ready in time for the June meeting. It is of Romanesque architecture, built of red brick, and its dimensions are 123 by 138 feet. The ground floor will seat 1,000 people and the gallery 800. There is a spacious platform, with a choir gallery behind it that will hold 300 singers. There are doors in every wall, and the floor slopes gently down toward the platform. The structure will be one of the most attractive in the state and the auditorium one of the largest outside of Boston. Its entire cost will be about $60,000.

ENGLISH MANUFACTURERS JUBILANT OVER THE PROSPECTS.

They Will Have "Far Easier Access Than They Ever Had to a Market Representing a Population of 70,000,000"—The New Tariff Framed to Favor England.

The leading trade journals that are now coming to hand from England indicate, more and more every week, how interested, and how excited even, the British manufacturers are becoming over the prospects of securing their nation's share of our manufacturing industries. When the Wilson tariff was first made public, it was considered advisable to muzzle the British bulldog, and it was evidently prearranged that the barking should be done behind the kennel, at any rate where it would not attract the eye of the American eagle. But the anxiety, the desire, the eagerness, to snatch our business from us proved too much for their discretion, and we learn from one paper, absent the wooden trade, that the "prospect of an increased business with the States is, however, very hopeful."

Again, the new bill (the new bill) pass in its proposed form, it will make a great difference in the export of the lower classes of woolens, upon which the specific or weight duty weighs so heavily. This will be a crucial point in the discussion of the bill. Nothing can be fairer than an ad valorem duty, but the difficulty always exists that there are unprincipled people who invariably undervalue values, and those who make honest declarations are made to suffer for the faults of others."

This will be cheering news to our woolen manufacturers, particularly as the fact is recognized abroad "that there are unprincipled people who invariably undervalue values." But we like to keep the best news till the last, and that is what the Bradford (England) correspondent writes to The Textile Manufacturer, which is published in Manchester. This bold Bradford man throws aside all pretenses and hypocrisy. He imitates the straightforward policy of Cousin Ben Folsom when he on July 4, 1890, congratulated the cutlery manufacturers of Sheffield that they would again secure control of the American market, a policy that it appears has been also adopted by Mr. Meeker, the American consul at Bradford. The consistency of which the Bradford expert in the English worsted trade shows is that the proposed Wilson tariff measure will give to the manufacturers of Bradford "far easier access than they have ever had to a market representing a population of 70,000,000 people."

Further analyzing what free wool really means to the American woolen manufacturer, this English expert says, "How, under such circumstances, can the free wool clause hurt the Bradford manufacturer?" This expert opinion is remarkable, and intensely interesting, and would enlighten the majority of the ways and means committee if they are really capacitated for comprehending the actual intricacies of the business of manufacturing worsted goods. In the hope that some of these tariff classes, destroyers of peace, can farming industries, murderers of American manufacturing industries and strangulers of American labor may be able to see beyond the length of their noses we may be able to grasp the actual conditions of some unexplored tariff exists beyond the country hamlets, whence they emanate, we reproduce this Bradford correspondent's remarks in full as published in The Textile Manufacturer:

"There is no doubt that the slight infusion of buoyancy into the mind has been the result, to a partial extent, of the discussion in the house on tariff proposals in America. A good many opinions have been expressed, and some figures given in the Bradford chamber of trade, but all from the point of view of Bradford worsted staplers and manufacturers. But a good many points of interest and very valuable figures have been kept back because Bradford men fear that capital will be made of them by American Republicans. Some even say that such statements might prevent the bill from passing. There is no adequate ground for this fear, which is entertained chiefly by the timid and the over-sensitive. In the first place, Mr. Meeker, the American consul, knows me that there is not the slightest doubt that the McKinley bill in the second place every man who reads his newspaper thoroughly knows that Mr. McKinley and other Republicans have closed the American public ad nauseam with forebodings as to the injury the new tariff will inflict on American manufacturers and the benefit it will confer on English manufacturers.

What is more, when the committee on ways and means which drafted the bill took evidence for weeks, and among it is a mass of evidence as to how the tariff would affect the worsted trade. The fact is the American farmers and the ordinary American consumer have begun to see that protection raises the price of commodities with no benefit to them, and that the chief beneficiaries under the McKinley tariff will not be halted by the repetition of the stale story that they will only benefit a few English towns. So I shall have my say.

To exemplify what the tariff will mean to Bradford trade, I will just in a sentence show how it will affect worsted coatings, which I have already stated, now have others who are going to give. I have stated that American manufacturers under the new tariff will get their raw material free, and statements have been made that this will almost nullify the benefits conferred by the tariff in the shape of reduced duties.

Now, free wool to America—for the first time since America has been a country—must mean to wool staplers in Bradford—and Bradford is the center of the wool trade of the world—a large increase of business. They will have far easier access than they ever had to a market representing a population of 70,000,000. Free trade in wool with America cannot but be to the advantage, therefore, of one branch of the Bradford trade. Now, take the Bradford manufacturers, and how free wool to the American manufacturer will affect the Bradford makers is a question that has not yet been thoroughly gone into. Six-hundred pounds of greasy wool will produce 100 pounds of top. That 100 pounds of top will spin into 9 pounds of yarn. To make a 16 ounce cloth requires 16 pounds of yarn, which represents about 32 pound of wool.

The American manufacturer, under the new tariff, will get in 3 pounds of free tops upon which he will receive 11 cents per pound reduction—i. e., 33 cents on the 3 pounds. The McKinley tariff makes the American pay for that piece 150 per cent on the Bradford cost. The new tariff will make him pay 48½ per cent on the Bradford cost. There is 100 per cent less duty on the manufactured article from Bradford, and the American manufacturer will only get 22 cents concession on his wool—for the 32 pounds that produces a yard of cloth. That wool costs, say, 84 pence a pound in Bradford. Under the new tariff the American manufacturer will pay about the same. There will be no duty. He will give 17 pence, therefore, for his 2 pounds of wool. At the present time he pays 17 pence plus 11 pence duty, or 28 pence.

He will get his raw material, therefore, for 66 per cent less under the new tariff, but then the importer in New York will pay for the cloth of the Bradford manufacturers 100 per cent less than he does now. How under such circumstances can the free wool clause hurt the Bradford manufacturer? It is a matter not yet clear, from the American telegrams, whether tops and rovings will come under the class of "crude" materials, which like raw materials, are to be admitted free, or whether rovings are admitted free, that involves a new line of manufacture, but only with the same conclusion. If American manufacturers are going to allow Bradford to get the first process of the manufacture for them—well, all the better for Bradford.

FALSE SYNTAX FOR ECONOMY.

The Only Consideration That Could Have Prevailed In Boston.

The telegraph operators were telling stories. The tall man, who has held a key all over the country, had the floor.

"You see a good many jokes in the papers," said he, "about the culture of Boston and the habit people living there have of using big words and correct grammar and all that. Most of you think that these jokes have no foundation in fact. Now, I know better. I was receiving clerk in the Western Union office there a good many years ago, and some of the messages handed in to me were corkers.

"One summer I had the cable window. One day two women dressed in black and greatly agitated came in and inquired the rate per word to London. I told them it was 28 cents. They consulted for a minute, and then one of them asked for a blank. I told them where the blanks were, and one of them wrote a message. The other took it and read it over three times.

"Then she came over to the window and asked again how much it was a word to London. 'Twenty-eight cents,' I told her. She looked at the message dubiously. The other woman came up to her and said, 'Don't you think it?'

"'No,' she said; 'I don't like it. That form is improper. You say that Charles suicided this morning, when it should be said that Charles committed suicide this morning.'

"'But,' said the other, 'if we put it in that way we will save 28 cents.'

"The woman who objected turned this proposition over in her mind for a long time. Finally she said, 'I don't think that such syntax is excusable.'

"The other took the blank and read the message a few dozen times. 'We're poor,' she said decisively after studying it in all its pheses, 'and we can't save 28 cents any easier.'

"The girl was convinced the woman who objected. 'Dnt what will our friends think?' she asked dubiously.

"'I suppose they will notice it, but we can't help that.' Then the two women retired to one corner and had a consultation. After laboring earnestly for 10 minutes they wrote out another message. So help me, this is the way I got it: 'Charles suicided this morning. Folks sentyx acct because it is cheaper.'

"All I can say is that it cost a heap for it. All of which," continued the tall operator, "illustrates one of the curious ways in which a woman's mind works."—Buffalo Express.

Wolfe Tone.

A desultory and enormous reader of plays and novels, with an impish humor and a facility and felicity of expression which never deserted him under the most terrific circumstances, Tone's style is brought literary and not colloquial; but, whether it be had a passion for doctrine and a deep determination to see things as they really were, he is perfectly free from every kind of illusion, delusion and sham.

He is very much alive to the humorous side of all things, including himself. The diaries are full of entries like this:

"I cannot help this morning thinking of C—l Burrowes as he was secretary to the Duke of Lerno. Yesterday I dined with Carnot. Today I should be puzzled to raise a guinea."

Wolfe Tone at the bottom of his heart was grave enough. His death is warrant for this, but he himself signed the order of his mind to the mockers. Tone's widow, though she had a confidence a good deal to put up with, mourned her husband's loss for 17 years, when the news came that one shared her reputation for Tone's memory. His son grew up to be proud of his father's sufferings in a noble cause, and to inherit a good deal of good sense. Ireland has never forgotten Tone and probably never will.—Contemporary Review.

Illiterate Statistics.

A few men were discussing the progress of education in the country.

"You're doing a good deal of talking here," said one, "but I'll bet every man in this crowd a new hat that here in London there are at least 50,000 persons who can't speak a word of English."

The crowd was staggered at first, but recovered in a moment, and bets were made. Then it was suggested that some one should go after the statistics.

"Before you do that," said the man very coolly, "I want to bet $1 apiece all round that there are twice that number that can't read and write."

Again the crowd felt the pressure of a bluff, but it rallied soon, and every man who had a sovereign put it up. The newspaper man stood to win eight hats and $9. The man to get the statistics was about to start.

"Hold on," said the man with the iron nerve. "I can tell you now who the fine fish you are."

"Tell us," was the unanimous command.

"Babies under one year," was the reply, "and under four years for the other 109,000."—London Tit-Bits.

Measuring Brain Work.

An apparatus for measuring brain effort has been made by J. L. Bahlr, who suggests that the arrangement might be made to point out the proper studies for children, or those which can be pursued with the least work and most profit, says an English paper. In the center of some heat conducting material he places a thermo-electric pile, which is connected by flexible wire to a sensitive galvahometer. The slightest rise in temperature, due to rush of blood to the head, is indicated by the galvanometer, the effect, of course, increasing with the intensity of the mental work.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

WATCH DISEASES.

SOMETHING LIKE THOSE OF THE HUMAN MECHANISM.

A Jeweler Calls the Ailments of a Watch Consumption, Rheumatism and Heart Failure and Explains the Analysis in Each Case.

"That's the twenty-third today—you're going to have an electric storm," remarked a down town jeweler as he was handed a watch having a broken mainspring for repair.

"How do you make that out?" inquired the customer.

"Why, by the number of broken mainsprings, to be sure," was the reply. "There is a regular epidemic to which watches are subject, much as hnmanity is to smallpox and cholera. It is produced by certain electric conditions of the atmosphere. The mainspring becomes ungneetized and more brittle, and a slight shock will break it. Occasionally it will snap with no apparent cause whatever. I have had it happen to watches lying in the showcase or upon the work there. You know, of course, that such atmospheric conditions frequently distnrb telegraph and telephone lines and even prevent communication. That might be expected, as they are operated by electricity, but the effect on watches is singular. Frequently even a severe thnnderstorm will produce it, but an nnroral display, which seems to be an electrical disturbance, is sure to result in many broken watch springs, and no better term could be applied to the trouble than epidemic.

"No, there is no reliable protection against it, though many things have been tried and many thousands of dollars have been spent. Attempts have been made to temper the springs by electricity, a sort of inoculation against the disease. Then a small plate or disk of soft iron placed within the case to absorb the magnetism, a disinfectant, so to speak, has given some good results.

"Do you know," he continued in a discursive tone, "that a watch is similar in many ways to a human being? It has its diseases and decays, its accidents, old age and finally dissolution. Yes, and each watch has its individuality and a special characteristic, and I defy'er the watch the stronger this personality can be so called, exactly as culture develops and strengthens individual character among mankind.

"Now, in this connection the watch feels the atmospheric condition as you do before a thunderstorm, only more acutely, as does a gouty or rheumatic person, being specially susceptible to such influence, and, perhaps having an inherent weakness of one point, in the mainspring that snaps, fractures a vital organ. 'Heart failure' it might be termed in the mainspring of the watch is its heart, its driving force. Tyne, we can replace the mainspring, which cannot be said for the human heart, but there is no telling how soon surgery will attain that result.

"Then there is the lubricating of the watch, equivalent to its brain. It is affected by proximity to a strong localized electric force—for instance, the generator or dynamo of an electric plant. It becomes magnetized and dies—a sort of paralysis. The nonmagnetic watches have hairsprings made of a composition metal, tin, zinc and other varieties. The soft iron plate or disk I mentioned before gives protection to the hairspring as well as to the mainspring by absorbing the magnetism. A few years since a number of railroad companies had these iron disks applied to the watches of many of their employees, on the snre by no means a complete disinfectant.

"The lever of a watch also is subject to nervous influences, and when polarized, having a forked end, it is acted on regular horseshoe magnet and first retards, then stops the hairspring—a sort of spinal meningitis, you see.

"The jewels and bearings are its joints and pivots are subject to sprains and dislocations as well as inflammation or too much friction. Any severe shock may result in a rupture, even dislocation to these joints. The latter will stop it and probably have complete atmospheric effect on it, and may remain nnnoticed, but will render its movement irregular and eventually cause far greater injury than a complete breaking of the joints. At seas on the approach of a storm the ship's chronometers, of which there are always carried, are 'put to bed,' as it is called, being packed in pillows to prevent injury by endless jar from the ship's violent motion. A few minutes' error in the time of making observations might throw a vessel many miles out of its course.

"Then a watch has a kind of rheumatism. The oil with which its joints are lubricated dries and forms carbonate, which irritates and cuts the pinions and bearings, creating friction or inflammation.

"Diet to a watch, like billionniers to humanity, is its most frequent, disagreeable and least dangerous ailment. It come from all sorts of things—small lifters from the pocket, fine dust, microscopic matter from, many sources, work through into the case and collectively distnrb, retard and finally prevent motion altogether. The system becomes clogged, and a thorough cleaning is the only corrective. In both these latter diseases atmospheric conditions generally influence the patient unfavorably, dry, dusty weather hastening the development and rendering the attack more acute. Rust or corruption is due entirely to a watch as to humanity, and after it reaches a certain stage is incurable. Once in the system its effects are nlmost wholly eradicated, and a warm, moist atmosphere may at any time induce a return of the disease."—Chicago Tribune.

PRESCRIBED FOR THE POPE.

Father Kneipp Has Performed Almost Miraculous Cures.

Father Kneipp, the Catholic pastor of the small and primitive village of Worishofen, in Bavaria, has for several years enjoyed the reputation of effecting marvelous cures of the sick by such simple means as to make them seem miraculous. His fame has spread abroad, and patients come to him from near and far, of all sorts and conditions and with all kinds of ailments. Princes, bishops, merchants, mechanics, peasants and beggars are all to be seen at times among the crowds that seek his advice, and quite recently he was summoned to Rome to prescribe for the pope.

Father Kneipp does not profess to work miracles. He knows a great deal about the human system and its ailments and the effects of medicine, and he prescribes intelligently, as most of the physicians who are privileged to attend his consultations with his patients admit. He has, however, certain peculiar theories of his own, and though they may not be well defined they would seem to be well grounded if the reports of their good effects may be believed.

The priest's first prescription is almost invariably a cold bath, and he will not permit his patients to dry themselves after it, but insists that they clothe themselves while still wet and either go immediately to bed or take a rapid walk in their bare feet. This is the treatment he prescribed for the pope, and manifestly less innocuous of its efficacy are cited, while the only thing urged against it is that people unaccustomed to walking barefoot are apt to bruise or cut their feet while walking over the stony roads.

The reception of his patients occupies Father Kneipp's time almost entirely every day in the week and is interrupted only when he has some function to perform in the village church. He makes no charge for his services, and whatever may be given as an honorarium goes to the support of his schools, orphanages and various other institutions which he has established. The good priest is over 70 years of age, but is always ready to sacrifice his time and comfort for the benefit of those who come to him for relief.

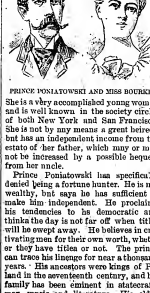
MISS BOURKE AND HER PRINCE.

He Says He Is Not a Fortune Hunter and Marries For Love.

Ever since Prince Andre Poniatowski first came to the United States in 1892 Miss Rumor has been busily engaged trying to marry him to one or another of the beautiful and wealthy girls who adorn our society with which he must move. But somehow the old lady always missed her guess and never once selected the only young woman to whom the prince was really paying serious attention, and the latter probably was going on all the while that he was pretending to be wooing some one else.

Now the prince has taken the matter out of Dame Rumor's hands and has himself announced his betrothal to a beautiful California girl, Miss Maud Alice Bourke, daughter of Mrs. H. F. Tichenor of New York and niece of Horace Carpentier, a former mayor of San Leandro. Besides being her uncle, Mr. Carpentier is also Miss Bourke's guardian and a trustee under her father's will. The young lady has been a member of his family since her mother's second marriage a number of years ago, and it has been supposed that she would inherit a large share of the millions that he is credited with possessing.

Miss Bourke is a handsome blond of the Saxon type. She was educated in Europe and has traveled much abroad.



PRINCE PONIATOWSKI AND MISS BOURKE.

She is a very accomplished young woman and is well known in the society circles of San Leandro, where she resides. She is not by any means a great beiress, but has an independent income from the estate of her father, which may possibly not be increased by a possible bequest from her uncle.

Prince Poniatowski has prince's, so I denied being a fortune hunter. He is not wealthy, but says he has sufficient to make him independent. He proclaims his tendencies to be democratic and thinks the day is not far off when titles will be swept away. He believes in cultivating men for their own worth, whether they have titles or not. The prince can trace his lineage for near a thousand years. His ancestors were kings of Poland in the seventeenth century, and his family has been eminent in statecraft, war, music and literature. His elder brother married an American girl, Miss Mand Ely-Goddard of New York. The prince is 69 years old.

MORTGAGE SALE.

DEFAULT HAVING BEEN MADE IN THE payment of the sum of one hundred and seventy-two dollars, which is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Frank Hodel and Wells Hall, as mortgagors to Security Trust Company of Nelson, N. H. mortgagee bearing date the 26th day of March 1892, and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds for said county of Polk and State of Minnesota on the 28th day of March 1892, at 4:30 p. m. in Book 61 of mortgages on page 98 and No. 49,502 and the said mortgage is the property of the undersigned assignee, in case of a foreclosure of such mortgage, the sum of Seventy dollars attorneys fee as stipulated in and by the terms of said mortgage for such foreclosure and said mortgage was duly assigned by said mortgagee to said assignee, in case of a sale under said power, to retain from the proceeds of such sale the principal and interest which shall then be due on said note and coupons together with all such sums as shall have been paid by said mortgagee or its successors and assigns for taxes and insurance with interest upon the dates of said payments and seventy five dollars, as attorneys fee in all in case of such sale.

And whereas, said mortgagor failed to pay the interest which became due on said note on the 1st day of November, A. D. 1893, and has since failed to pay the same, and the said principal sum of said note became due and payable.

And whereas, the taxes which were duly levied on said premises for the year 1892, having become due and payable, and not having been paid, the said mortgagee was compelled and did pay the same amounting to the sum of Thirty-eight and 21-100 dollars.

And whereas, the mortgagor failed to keep and perform the covenants required by said mortgage in relation to insurance of the same as provided in said mortgage.

And whereas, there is now claimed to be due and is actually due on said mortgage at the date of this notice, exclusive of and in addition to said amounts so paid for taxes and insurances, and the said seventy-five for said attorneys fee, the sum of Two hundred and fifty-two dollars and 21-100 dollars, and no action or proceeding has been instituted at law to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Now Therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage as the north half of the northeast quarter (N. E. ¼) and the northeast quarter (N. E. ¼) of the northwest quarter (N. W. ¼) of section thirty-three (33) in township one hundred and fifty (150) of range forty six (46), containing one hundred and sixty acres and 75-100 acres according to the United States government survey thereof, with the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, which sale will be made by the sheriff of Polk county at the front door of the Court house, in the city of Crookston, in said county, on the 27th day of February the 8th day of March, A. D. 1894, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash to satisfy the amount due on said note and mortgage with interest and insurance and taxes as aforesaid together with said amounts so paid for taxes and insurance with interest thereon and costs and charges of said sale and including said attorney's fee dollars and fees as aforesaid.

Percy Baker was visiting friends in this city last week. Had a pretty severe siege with his several amputations but is apparently all right now.

F. E. Horts started on Tuesday evening for a visit to friends at the old home in Pennsylvania. Expects to return some time in the near future.

Rev. C. F. Sharpe, of Minneapolis will conduct services in the First Methodist Episcopal church next Sunday morning and evening, in the absence of the pastor.

Some baled hay from Dakota finds its way to the market in this city. It would seem as though farmers in this immediate vicinity have enough to supply the demand.

Alderman Norrie came down town for the first time on Monday and was able to walk down town on Tuesday again. Harry looks pretty thin but says he feels all right thank you.

The Great Northern depot at Thief River Falls took fire about 7:30 on Tuesday evening and was burned to the ground. Particulars received on Wednesday via St. Hilaire are very meagre.

Nels Swanson completed a 100 foot well for Dr. Thomas this week. He struck a nice flow of good soft water, which flows into a good sized tank. Nels finds water if he has to go to the centre of the earth for it.

A number of men and teams arrived from Grand Forks on Monday evening on their way to Maple Lake to put up ice. The Great Northern company sent out 21 cars to Mentor on Tuesday to be loaded with ice. It is said that 80 cars will be required for the cut.

Ell Steenerson: "I think the movement made by the republicans was a wise thing to do and in the best interests of the city. It will stimulate the putting in the field of the best men for office and whichever side wins the interests of the city will be best protected by party tickets in the field."

Julian Sauve, of Kortsonville, was in on Wednesday. In conversation with a JOURNAL reporter he says: "If every farmer would sow as little wheat as I shall this year got a nice flow of good soft water, which flows into a good sized tank. Julian Sauve, of Kortsonville, was in on Wednesday. In conversation with a JOURNAL reporter he says: "If every farmer would sow as little wheat as I shall this year would not be much wheat raised this year. I intend to sow 100 acres of flax, some barley and oats and only wheat enough for my own use."

Miss. E. Yeromeau intends to start for Chicago this week for her supply of spring millinery and expects to be away for about 10 days. On her return she will be prepared to inform our readers what novelties she has secured in that line—and she intends to secure all there is that is novel and pretty. She requests her friends and patrons to await her announcement later.

The sick ones in Martin Swanson's family, a few miles down the river are convalescent, and doing nicely. Martin says he has had a siege since December 15th, the date on which the first one was taken, and for six weeks he had to be up continually day and night. Four sick in the family and all came out all right for which he says he feels duly thankful.

R. A. Wilkinson was in the city for a few days. Interviewed as to what Mr. Hill would do in relation to building to Duluth next summer, Mr. W. said: "I do not know that Mr. Hill is giving away his intentions in relation to his business affairs. If anybody knows what Mr. Hill intends to do he knows more than I do, and I am inclined to the opinion that aside from Mr. Hill himself nobody does know."

The Spring Term of the Crookston Normal School & Business College will begin Monday, March 26. All branches necessary for teachers' first grade certificate, for book-keepers and stenographers are taught. The term just closing has been large by attended and very successful Board said room at low rates. Tuition but one dollar per week. Further information write B. A. Strawbridge, Crookston, Minn.

J. D. McPhee was up from the Lockhart farm on Wednesday.

A. E. Koeppe went up to Fosston on Saturday, returning in the evening.

Chas. Toni and Mr. Vanderbeck, of Euclid, were in the city on Saturday.

Rev. J. G. Smith is reported able to sit up some. He has had a long and severe siege.

Mrs. V. D. Carruth was calling on friends last Saturday preparatory to leaving for her home in Washington, D. C.

For democratic alderman at large it is said that John R. McKinnon or James E. O'Brien has the pull. Both good workers.

Dave Fairweather came down from Euclid on Monday remaining over night with his friend, Deputy Sheriff Losey.

The Ada papers state that Fred Pulver has a soft job under the present administration at Washington, D. C., at $2,500 per annum.

The ladies of the Relief corps will give a hard times supper at G. A. R. hall on Thursday evening, March 15th. All are cordially invited.

Who will be the republican nominee for mayor? Well, never mind that, now, but rest assured that a good business man will be elected.

It is said that comrade Jim Kelly would accept a nomination for constable on the republican ticket. What's the matter with Jim? He's all right.

Judge A. Grindlaud came down from Warren on Monday and on Tuesday morning took the train for Grand Forks. The Judge looks as hale and hearty as ever.

On March 1st a boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Hitchcock, but on the morning of the 6th the little one died. The bereaved parents have the sincere sympathy of their many friends in their bereavement.

Barber Dufresne was brought before a justice on a charge of assault, and demanded a jury trial. When the time set for trial arrived the complainant did not show up so the case was dismissed.

Capt. M. M. Wheeler, the genial traveling passenger agent of the Omaha road was in the city looking up business for his line on Wednesday and gave this office a pleasant call.

The highest honors in the power of the Chicago World's Fair Commissioners were awarded to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which, for over half a century, has no equal as a cure for colds, coughs, la grippe, and all disorders of the throat and lungs.

The JOURNAL should have said last week that Messrs. Hall & Larsen, Carpenter & Co., were H. C. Scribner's aids. He has raised the White Russian for several years with perfect satisfaction, and has no blight and good yield always.

Somebody said that Adolph Rydal was grooming for alderman in the First ward. That would not do at all. He should by all rules for alderman at large so as to, if it is right, no matter what ward he happens to move into next.

Young men and young women if you are thinking of preparing to teach school, keep books, or of being a stenographer, a good chance for you is to attend the Crookston Normal School & Business College this Spring. They make a specialty of doing such work. Write them.

E. M. Stanton was approached by a solemn, earnest looking individual and asked if he would consent to head the "Knights of Labor" ticket? "I should be totally disqualified" quoth Edwin M. "if you had suggested that I head a 'Knights of Rest' ticket, I reckon I'd be dead in that!"

Tom Morris has been mentioned as the probable nominee of the democrats for mayor. If there is anything in this rumor it shows that the dems are getting ready for earnest consideration. It is possible that they have men in their ranks who would draw more votes, but not so many who would make a better mayor than Tom should he be selected.

The Ladies of the W. R. C., will give a hard times social at G. A. R. Hall, Thursday evening, the 15th of this month. Prizes will be given to the lady and gentlemen wearing the most grotesque suit representing hard times. Everybody is invited to come dressed in rags, tags and patches. The out of ish crowd with their starvation friends are expected to appear in poverty stricken suits (no plug hats, kid gloves or patent leather boots allowed). Supper from 5:30 to 9 o'clock. Admission, fully and food will be served all for the small sum of 25c per capita.

DURING hard times consumers cannot afford to experiment with inferior, cheap brands of baking powder. It is NOW that the great strength and purity of the ROYAL stand out as a friend in need to those who desire to practise Economy in the Kitchen. Each spoonful does its perfect work. Its increasing sale bears witness that it is a necessity to the prudent—it goes further.

N. B. Grocers say that every dollar invested in Royal Baking Powder is worth a dollar the world over, that it does not consume their capital in dead stock, because it is the great favorite, and sells through all times and seasons.

Mrs. Dr. Denniston returned to her home last week from a pleasant visit east.

Among names suggested as candidates on the republican ticket for assessor is that of our friend Huggard. Dave is one of the old-timers in Crookston and no one should be better posted in relation to values than he. He is an honest, industrious faithful man anywhere you put him, and a much worse selection might be made.

Whoever said that Holston is laying the pipes to be mayor must have been a sad joker. We have reason to suppose that Holston wouldn't have it under any consideration. Nevertheless the rumor was upon the streets that Holston had a bee buzzing in his bonnet—or was it wheels? But Holston proposes to lay low this spring and go to congress next fall—if he can.

At the republican meeting M. R. Brown sounded the key-note of the campaign when he said that issues, such as one of the principal objects of this party move was to purify our campaigns and free them from personalities, he hoped that—so far as the republicans were concerned—there would be no mud-slinging, and that the campaign be confined strictly to party lines, so that election would leave no bad feelings, no bad blood, or sore spots anywhere.

Capt. Jack Mallen suffered another attack from heart disease, at Wabasha, on the 6th inst. and is said to be lying in a critical condition. It was the precarious condition of his health that was a bar to his candidacy for commander before the late G. A. R. State encampment in Minneapolis. If he had been sound and rugged he would have been elected commander without much opposition.

Euclid Items.

EUCLID, March 6th, 1894.

Dr. and Mrs. Chaplin went up to Warren Tuesday.

H. C. Misner returned from the twin cities Saturday last.

Mr. C. H. Pitkins, of Salnia, Iowa, is about to locate in Euclid.

Robert Teal and Robert Cnsmey are trying to interest the people of Euclid in a bowling well.

John Tiedmann has purchased the Farmer's Union Horse Co's., stallion at a bargain.

Horace and Celeste Cronkbite, of Argyle, were visiting friends hereabouts this week.

Friends of Mr. Blever are much worried over his present condition. Mr. Blever has been confined to the bed for about 10 months.

The town board met at the town clerk's office Tuesday afternoon to audit the year's accounts.

Matt Blever has been quite sick with inflammation of the bowels, but Dr. Chapin reports him on the gain.

E. Taylor, & Co., have bought 400 bushels of choice seed wheat from Mr. T. Wees of Buffington farm.

Norwood Davis and sister Miss Leona, of Angus, spent Saturday and Sunday visiting their Euclid friends.

On account of the bad condition of the roads Rev. J. B. Astwood was unable to give Angusites regular Sunday service.

Contractor Nick Engel has moved bag and baggage out on Wm Davidson's farm, where he has a contract to build a new farm house.

Henry, Stahr took it into his head to clean the store floor, and with a few invited guests, waded in and made a complete success of it.

Agent E. B. Ballou and sons, are making arrangements to run their farm this season themselves.

Mrs. H. C. Misner entertained the young people of Euclid, as well as her Argyle and Angus guests Saturday evening. Games, candy pulling and a general good time was indulged in.

THE RAINY LAKE COUNTRY.

Gold There. But No Use Trying to Get It Before Spring-time Comes, Gentle Annie.

With characteristic enterprise the Minneapolis Evening Journal has sent a reporter to the reputed gold-fields in the Rainy Lake regions, who gives very interesting accounts of affairs at that place, but he sounds a note of warning to all who are thinking of going for the purpose of finding work, and urges all such not to come until the snow disappears in the spring at least, for there will not be any work to speak of until that time. Hundreds are already on the ground with nothing to do and hundreds are arriving daily. While appearances seem to indicate gold in paying quantities, enough is not known as yet to warrant the presence of thousands—but they will no doubt go. One saw-mill, at last accounts, was all that has arrived all but the boiler, will soon be up and ready to furnish lumber for building purposes, and a big stamp-mill now en route will be ready by the time spring opens to begin work on quartz. No doubt quite a village will spring up at an early day, but whether all will get wealthy or all be disappointed is a question for the future to settle.

J. F. Cartier Dead.

J. F. Cartier died at his residence on Main street on Saturday last of a complication of diseases. For years he had been a great sufferer from asthma, and recently he has been afflicted with dropsy and a few days ago was taken with inflammation of the bowels. For several years he was a clerk in the C. O. D. store, leaving that institution he went into W. H. Norrie's office as bookkeeper. Mr. Cartier was a man about 60 years of age and leaves a a wife, two sons and two daughters to mourn his decease. The funeral obsequies took place on Monday afternoon, the St. Ann's society acting as a guard of honor. Quite a large procession followed the remains to the cemetery.

It comes within the range of probability that J. W. E. Wyatt will be selected as democratic candidate for the city clerk. Had the usual style prevailed he would have had a strong pull for the nomination and the democrats could do far worse than to pick him up. It is freely predicted that they will do it.

The Ware Banquet.

Thief River Falls Press.—(Owing to a feeling of modesty on the part of the editor, on this occasion, a friend of this paper has kindly consented to report the banquet, and we are confident our readers will appreciate it.)

Last Friday evening the friends of the Press gave a grand banquet in honor of Editor P. S. Ware. The banquet which was given under the auspices of the B. M. U., was held at this Ogalunah hotel, whose genial proprietor spared no pains in making the event one which should be memorable in the annals of our city.

The following guests were present, in response to the twenty-eight invitations issued: Ira C. Richardson, Dr. H. Grundy, A. V. Stebbins, O. Bergh, O. P. Johnson, W. T. Mullarkey, H. O. Hunson, Hans Nelson, Andrew Douglas, Capt. E. F. Lovell, C. J. Knox, F. J. Stebbins, J. W. Swinstrom, E. C. Robinson, H. E. Mussey, L. P. Johnson, T. S. Phuey, H. Gahan, Chas. Robbecke, P. S. Ware. Of the seven others to whom invitations were sent Messrs. Kratke, Longseth, Meehni and Gibb were detained on account of illness, Oen and Zeh on account of business and the invitation to Mr. Kretzschmar did not reach the gentleman in season next day.

At 8:30 the guests assembled in the office of the hotel, and at 9 o'clock they filed into the spacious dining room, where the festive board, groaning beneath multifarious dishes of choice viands and toothsome delicacies in the perfect garden of flowing champagne, presented a scene of cheer and artistic arrangement seldom afforded in these latitudes.

The chair was taken by the president of the B. M. U., the guest of the evening being seated at his right.

After a few remarks by the chair as to the object of the banquet, that it was given as a mark of the esteem in which their guest was held in the community, and as an expression of confidence as to the outcome of the recent persecution to which he had been subjected elsewhere, the goodly contents of the board were attacked and half an hour devoted, amid pleasant conversation, to the grosser delights of the table. The next on the program being disposed of, though not without many an encomium on the splendid taste manifested by host Robbecke, cigars were passed round, and Mr. H. O. Hagson the toastmaster of the occasion rose and proposed the first toast of the evening, "Our City," which was responded to in a happy speech by Capt. E. F. Lovell whose flattering remarks about the character and intelligence of our citizens were delivered with a warmth and kindness of expression that gave evidence of the deep and sincere feeling by which they were prompted.

The second toast was "The Press." This was responded to by Mr. Ira C. Richardson who ably and eloquently dwelt upon the duties of an intelligent newspaper. The speaker alluded feelingly to the case so recently before the public but with a gentleness tact that emphasized the force of dignified deportment which characterized the whole proceedings.

The third and last toast was "Our Guest," and was responded to by Mr. L. P. Johnson. Applying the thoughts of the two previous speakers to the immediate occasion, he has exemplified in the notable gathering and its distinguished guest, he warmly accentuated the esteem in which the latter was held, and after a few remarks eulogistic of his high qualities and noble purposes expressed the hope that he would ever be found in the front rank of the champions for the rights of the people and the principles of truth.

After a brief pause the object of all this honor, rose and addressed a few heartfelt remarks to the assemblage, assuring them of his appreciation of the honor shown him and the sentiments expressed, and avowing his determination to endeavor always to be worthy of the esteem and confidence of the public. After a hearty round of applause which greeted these remarks, as indeed it had each one of the previous speeches, the formal proceedings closed and the company devoted an hour or two to pleasant conversation and interchange of ideas on various matters of interest.

It is worthy of remark that from beginning to end the arrangements and proceedings of this memorable evening were conducted in a manner indicating a refinement and culture seldom looked for in a community bordering on the wilderness. Let us hope that a precedent has been laid down that will establish our reputation along such lines.

An Excellent Entertainment.

The complimentary concert given by Prof. Strawbridge to the students of the Normal School Business College, last Saturday evening, in the college hall, was a most enjoyable affair, and passed off without a hitch.

The first number on the program was a piano solo by Miss Marie A. Finseth, of Grand Forks, who displayed more than ordinary ability as a performer on the piano. Mrs. T. E. Adams next being "He was a Prince," in her usual brilliant style, and was followed by Jens Schefstad, who treated the audience to a couple of selections on the violin. Mr. Schefstad is fast becoming master of his chosen instrument, and in addition to his naturnl talent for music, he is a hard worker and will some day make his mark in the musical world. The training which he received while on his six months trip with Arnold, the celebrated violinist, is bearing fruit, Prof. R. S. Knudson, of Grand Forks, gave a couple of readings "Lasca" and "The Usual Way," in a manner that showed marked ability in this direction, Mrs. McClure and Dr. W. J. Robertson then delighted the audience with a couple of guitar duets, and F. W. Bugg sang "Hearts" in good style. Miss Finseth gave another piano solo; and Miss Ida Hancock, the assistant county superintendent of schools, won the hearts of the audience by her rendition of "A Second Trial," a touching little story of commencement day. Miss Martha Murch sang "Burst ye Apple Buds," in a way that showed she is making the most of her musical training. J. Schefstad then gave another violin solo, "Legende," and the entertainment closed with a trio by Messrs. Case, Strawbridge and Bivins "The Warrior's Grave."

Complimented the Artist and the Citizens

The February number of the Photographic Recorder, a monthly devoted to the photographic business of the northwest, published at St. Paul by Zimmerman Bros. contains a handsome cut of one of our artists, S. J. Chelin and pays him and the people of Crookston a nice compliment in the following manner:

Among the rising young photographers of the northwest is S. J. Chelin, of Crookston, Minn., who is worthy of mention. We have been favored with as fine a collection of photographs as we have seen, they show careful and conscientious work, in all the details and above all the posing and lighting of the subject shows the artist, a number of quite original effects are noticed and he is to be congratulated on having such elegant subjects for sitters.

He has also one of the best equipped studios in the northwest, and we will in the near future reproduce some of Mr. Chelin's work for the benefit of the readers of the Recorder. We wish him continued success.

Notice of Examination.

Notice is hereby given that an examination of candidates for one cadetship at the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland and one at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, New York, will be held at Moorhead, Minnesota, on Tuesday the 3rd day of April, 1894, at 9 o'clock, a. m. and continue for two days or until the examination is completed.

A naval cadet must at the time of entering the Academy be not less than fifteen nor more than twenty years old, and the military cadet must be between the years of eighteen and twenty-two.

The naval cadet enters the school on the 15th day of May, next, but the military cadet does not enter until June, 1895.

The board of examiners will consist of three persons whose names will be announced later, and the examination will be conducted under such rules and regulations as they may prescribe. But no person will be permitted to compete for more than one place.

Knights of Honor.

The Knights of Honor gave a pleasant hop to a number of invited guests in Odd Fellows hall on Friday evening of last week. About 30 couple being present besides the members of the order. When the guests had assembled in the elegant hall, Dictator Fred Rauch made the following neat little speech of welcome:

"Ladies and gentleman, and Bro. Knights: It affords me great pleasure to greet and welcome our numerous friends on this our first anniversary occasion since our lodge was organized. We cherish the deed and thought when yonder charter was granted by the Supreme Lodge K. of H. This is why we have invited our friends to share in our happiness. The K. of H. lodge was created 20 years ago by some 12 young men; to-day its membership numbers over 155,000. The grand work of the order has radiated far and wide so that it has created a grand position—one that is not only a credit to us but to the country at large. The aim of the order is to do what is right—and so we labor with earnestness, so that our noble order may win its way on its merits and I am happy to see that our efforts have been so far crowned with success. For me to explain the good workings of our order would be to me a work of love—but I am admished according to that 'tempus fugits,' but also of the fact that we have assembled here for terpsichorean exercises and not for lip service. Thanking you for your kind attention I now propose the opening of the further exercises of the evening with a waltz."

The music consisted of two violins and the organ played by members of the K. of H., and was excellent. The company enjoyed themselves hugely until 2 a. m., when it broke up pronouncing the event the most pleasant one of the season.

COUGHLIN GOES FREE

THE EX-DETECTIVE NOT GUILTY OF DR. CRONIN'S MURDER.

At Least So Says the Jury That Has Been Listening to the Testimony For the Last Four Months—The Verdict Rather a Surprise.

CHICAGO, March 5—The happiest man on earth at 4:25 p. m. was Daniel Coughlin. When the clerk read out the words, "We, the jury, find the defendant, Daniel Coughlin, not guilty," a warm flush went over his face which before had been of a deadly white. Newspaper men, old time friends of the prisoner before his troubles, came upon him in a body and nearly wrung his hands off.

"Its all right, boys, all right," gasped Coughlin, as he reached for three or four hands at once; "I won't forget you. You treated me all right."

Then the prisoner worked his way up to the jury box and shook hands with as many of the men as he could reach, but the crowd was too much for him, and yelling and cheering to shake its delight, it pushed him away from the box. He gave up the effort to greet the men and, in company with the bailiffs, started to leave the room, passing behind Judge Tuthill's chair. Just as he was directly behind the judge a cry of "Make way there; open a passage, make way," was heard, and two stalwart bailiffs pushed through the crowd, and close behind them, her hat awry, her veil half up, and gasping with sobs that choked her, came Mrs. Coughlin. Dan was striding to liberty as though he were in league boots.

DAN COUGHLIN.

Who Have Given Him Freedom,

"Dan, come back, here's your wife," called the voices and Coughlin retraced his steps. Just at the foot of the little flight of stairs leading to the judge's rostrum he met his wife. The woman gave an incoherent cry, her arms went up, fastened themselves around her husband's neck, and then she gave way utterly. She only said, "Dan, oh Dan," but no where, not even in Dan Coughlin's heart, was there such joy as in the bosom of the little woman, who, clasped tight against her husband's heart, felt him here again. Coughlin bent his big blonde head until his moustache swept her cheek, and the two rocked to and fro until the woman was and then she was led away by Coughlin's father, who was happy enough to dance a jig, but gave his entire attention to his hat, which he kept patting on and taking off with marvelous rapidity. In a few minutes he, with Mrs. Coughlin, who by this time was radiant, left the room.

Attorney Donohue, who had with ex-Judge Wing defended the prisoner, was the recipient of a shower of congratulations from friends and fellow attorneys.

Neither Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Bottum nor Associate Prosecutor Scanlan would express an opinion as to the verdict.

"It Was a Surprise," they both asserted, but further than that they declined to talk to interviewers.

An attempt to interview the jury in the court room was not productive of good results. "I can't tell a thing," said Juror Sharp, pleasantly. "We agreed not to tell or give any names, and I cannot say anything."

"That's right," broke in Foreman Holsman. "We have agreed that it would not say a word to the papers. It would not be fair. I will say one thing, though," and the foreman with a broad grin, "I am just about as happy to get away from this thing as Dan Coughlin ever was."

"That's what," said Sharp, emphatically.

The jury was at once taken into the office of the county clerk, where the warrants for their pay were given them, and the Cronin trial was out of court, and into history for good.

Must Be Thoroughly Sifted.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 10.—Governor Flower said to an Associated Press representative: "I have sent for Mayor-Elect Malloy and have told him that the bottom of the Troy matter must be reached, no matter who suffers by the exposure. He has promised me to do all in his power to aid in bringing the guilty ones to justice. If I find there is a disposition to shield any one or drop the matter, I shall take a hand in it myself, but at present I cannot interfere."

Forbade to Sell Lands.

MILWAUKEE, March 10.—In the Northern Pacific case, Judge Jenkins issued an order forbidding the receivers to sell lands in their possession. The order relates to a one-third interest in some property at Duluth which the Northern Pacific company holds jointly with the St. Paul and Duluth and Superior Short line.

TO MY MOTHER.

Sometimes it seems thy face—thy long hid face—
Looks out on me as from a passing cloud,
Till I forget they clad thee in thy shroud
And laid thee sleeping in thy fond old place.
So face again the tender, hoaling grace
Of thy dear presence is to me allowed,
Wilt thou not bless the bead before thee bowed?
Wilt not thy voice thrill through the empty space?
How lone and cold the world without thee seemed!
Beguiling thee, now warm it is and bright!
Yet oft in vain to reach thee do I seek,
And then I wake to know I have but dreamed,
And thou art silent as the silent night.
With tears I call thee; yet thou dost not speak.
—Louise C. Moulton in Youth's Companion.

A Simple Fire Escape.

A simple, easily procured, inexpensive and practical means of escape from upper stories may be found in a stout duck sack and a strong immilla rope. The sack should be deep and wide enough to hold several persons, and two rope well hound around the top to which the rope bail is attached. If no appliance be provided to hold a stout sail across the window on the inside, then several wraps must be taken around some article of furniture, wife and children dumped into the sack, the husband paying out the rope and letting them down. The sack is then drawn up, when the remaining occupant goes into the sack with the slack end of the rope, and paying it out lets himself down. Rope and sack will pass unhurt past considerable sheets of flame from windows below, and if occasionally treated to a strong solution of alum water, or even strong brine, are of difficult ignition. The deep sack dispels the feeling of fear in not beholding the dizzy height and also protects from flame in passing windows. Every window should have strong staples into which a rail can be inserted, one which should be ever ready if needed. A cool head could thus let down, in many cases, numerous loads, and for that matter there may be a rope enough to allow all the paying out and pulling up to be done by some one on the ground. Private instructions should be in every room, and each occupant should be made familiar with the working.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Physiological Effect of Music.

The results of numerous experiments made with scientific care by a Russian physiologist to determine what, if any, are the physiological effects produced by music are thus summarized: An influence on the circulation of blood is noticed, the pressure sometimes rising and sometimes falling, though the action of musical tones and pipes both on animals and men expresses itself for the most part by increased frequency of the beats of the heart; the variations in the circulation consequent upon musical sounds coincide with changes in the breathing, though this action is not observed quite independently of it; the variations in the blood pressure are dependent on the pitch and loudness of the sound and on tone color; in these variations of the blood pressure also the peculiarities of the individual, whether men or lower animals, are plainly apparent, and even nationality, in the case of man, is claimed to exhibit some effect.—New York Tribune.

"Canned Peaches."

A highly respectable and widely respected clergyman living in a country parish not far from Boston received a communication from a New York house dealing in wines and liquors not long ago, saying that they would be very glad to furnish him with anything he needed in their line, and as an inducement for his patronage added that they were aware that the arrival in a country place of wines and liquors in the case of the clergyman was apt to create comment, if not scandal. And they offered in case he preferred to purchase them to have them securely packed in a wooden box, where they would be free from examination, and to have the shipment for his patronage added that they were aware that the arrival in a country place of wines and liquors in the case of the clergyman was apt to create comment, if not scandal. And they offered in case he preferred to purchase them to have them securely packed in a wooden box, where they would be free from examination, and to have the shipment for his patronage added that they were aware that the arrival in a country place of wines and liquors in the case of the clergyman was apt to create comment, if not scandal. And they offered in case he preferred to purchase them to have them securely packed in a wooden box, where they would be free from examination, and to have the shipment marked "Canned peaches."—Boston Herald.

Runaway Legs.

Lady Canning tells a story about her father, Lord Stuart de Rothesay, who was ambassador at St. Petersburg in the forties. He was afflicted with a sort of nervous paralysis, which deprived him of the control of his limbs. Once his secretary saw him running rapidly along the quays. Afterward he heard himself called and found Lord Stuart clinging to a lamppost. He was unable particularly to speak to you, but could not stop. My legs ran away with me."

The Human Family.

The human family living on earth today consists of about 1,400,000,000 souls—not fewer, probably more. These are distributed literally all over the earth's surface, there being no considerable spot on the globe where man has not found a foothold. The extremes of the blacks and whites are as five to three, the remaining 700,000,000 intermediate, brown, yellow and tawny in color.—Exchange.

Among the degenerate Romans from A. D. 100 to A. D. 500 titles were graded with almost mathematical exactness, and men of different social rank were raised on being addressed as illustres, spectabiles, clarissimi, perfectissimi, egregii, and so on, according to their position.

In his story of the last moments of Lincoln Horatio King relates that Stanton, when the attending physician, with his finger on the great martyr's pulse, announced that the end had come, said with deep feeling, "He now belongs to the ages."

A Boston paper states that a Chicago grocer sells soap every tenth cake of which contains a dime, a gold dollar, and that the citizens of Chicago are in consequence getting to look remarkably clean.

DYNAMO &.

There exists a general and deeply rooted idea that direct current dynamos of very high potential are not at all practical. The actual historical and practical facts are that the high potential direct current machines were more extensively and successfully operated when the dynamo first came into general use at about 1880 than any other type, either direct or alternate. Furthermore, their number and size have largely increased, and the voltage at which they can be practically worked has been steadily raised until we now have 60 light dynamos on the standard size of large machines, generating about 3,000 volts and 10 amperes.

Arc dynamos of 90 light capacity are also regularly made by several manufacturers, and 120 or even 125 light machines are built and used. I happen to know of one station where there are four arc dynamos rated at 125 lights each which ran every night with a load of from 100 to 105 lights. These machines must generate about 5,000 volts each. No great practical or other difficulty is found in operating arc machines, except the real danger to persons, but this is merely due to the high potential and does not depend very much upon the type of machine or character of current.—Cassier's Magazine.

He Lost His Case.

"Judge Emerson, one of the most eloquent men Illinois ever produced, was once taken down completely in a speech at Decatur," said E. P. Layman, an attorney of Chicago. "He had a case in which there were some peculiarly pathetic circumstances, the rights of a young girl whose property had been squandered and who was reduced to destitution being involved. Judge Emerson made the most of it, and as he closed his speech a solemn hush had fallen over the courtroom.

"Tears stood in the eyes of the jurors, and even the judge coughed sympathetically and hid his head behind the trial docket. His opponent, whose name I have now forgotten, saw that the spell was to be broken in some way, or his case was lost. Arising slowly to his feet, and in a voice of deep solemnity, and with slow deliberation, he said, 'Gentlemen of the jury, le us continue these solemn exercises by singing the one hundred and fifteenth psalm.' A roar of laughter followed from the audience, and Judge Emerson lost his case."

A Little Learning.

We have been often told that "a little learning is a dangerous thing," and we may be just as well assured that a little bread is not the safest of all things. It would be far better to have plenty of both, but the sophisms of those who use this argument is that they represent the choice lies only in one of these articles, our election must be made between little and none at all. If the choice is to be made between a small portion of information or of food and absolute ignorance or starvation, common sense gives its decision in the homely proverb, "Half a loaf is better than no bread."—New York Ledger.

An Infelicitous Speech.

"Why, you're looking better already, Sir Ronald!"

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others also interest us. Mrs. Sarah Ann Cranfield says: "I had been troubled with a bad stomach for years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician most thoroughly. I was in business, but oblized to close on account of my health. A neighbor told my friends that I could not live if I did not get relief. They were finally successful, and I was induced to use this medicine which a gentleman directed my daughter to get. Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that he knew, and had been cured by the remedy, and was about a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the New Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken two bottles I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had not swelled so long that they seemed almost petrified. In short, I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure and a bottle and a half of the Nervine, and was a well woman. I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy and are receiving benefit." Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialists in heart disease, acts directly on the heart, in a positive guarantee or sent by druggists on first day's use. The details of the singular disappearance of John Freeman have come to me from various sources. Some slight discrepancies in dates I have been enabled to correct from an old volume of the Saunders News Letter. By the kindness of the authorities of Dublin Castle I was permitted to inspect and take copies of the official reports sent in by the police embracing the district. Along with these reports I found tied up a number of letters of a more private character written by the same police officer and addressed to the same superior to whom were forwarded the official reports.

I had at first intended to tell the story myself. With that intention I wrote to each of the four brothers who separately and together figured in the singular events hereafter described, requesting of them more exact information than I already possessed. They replied not only not such length, but with such unexpectedly vivid realism that their various narratives, in spite of some literary shortcomings, seemed to me to need only a little editorial revision to fit them for publication. I perceived that I would more prudently play the part of editor than of original author. Accordingly I decided and let the brothers Freeman tell their own story. When their narratives overlapped I simply used the scissors. When too minute or too wandering, I struck my pen through the redundancies, or what appeared to me to be such, endeavoring to secure a little more brevity and conciseness.

CHAPTER I.

CHARLES FREEMAN'S LETTER.

In the month of July, 1854, my eldest brother, John Freeman, suddenly and most unaccountably was taken from us. One fine afternoon, being in good health and spirits, he went fishing and never returned. At lunch he was very pleasant and even jocose, making us youngsters laugh so immoderately that we fear ther was at last obliged to interfere, and one of my brothers was sent out of the room in disgrace. All the events of that terrible day are imprinted on my mind with the clearness of vinality. I can still see the funny face with which, when my father was not looking, he threw us into uncontrollable laughing fits. He had but just returned from Trinity college for summer vacation and was full of all sorts of joyous plans and projects for spending a good time at home. Poor fellow, he little knew what this vacation had in store for him.

For a boy like my brother, and indeed for all of us, few rural neighborhoods could have been more delightful than ours. There were mountain streams abounding with trout, and streams which needed only a night's rain, sometimes merely a heavy shower, to supply good fishing. When the streams were not flooded, he often brought home a good basket of brown trout and white taken in the pools and holes with a mere shrimping net which he made himself and was something like a large and long handled landing net. There were good trout lakes, too, in the mountains. Of sea fishing, both from boats and from the rock, he was very fond; he was at the latter sport—viz. fishing for cunner from a rock—when he so mysteriously disappeared. The Atlantic, beating against a very wild and almost ironbound coast, lay less than a mile from our home. My father, a clergyman of the Church of Ireland before the world suspected it to be "a spas tres," was incumbent of a very large parish—in fact, three parishes rolled into one—which extended many miles along the seacoast and far into the interior. There were no resident gentry and no preservation of game. No one but my brother had a gun in all the country-side, so that the shooting was all ours, and there was shooting in summer as well as winter, for in summer we shot curlews, cavo pigeons, rabbits and hares. Pius chounded in the region, and while there were hares and and no greyhounds back was, in fact, not only a great sportsman, but the only sportsman in the country. Enemies he had none, so that his mysterious disappearance could not be ascribed to any personal malignity. All the country people were fond of him, and I think proud of him. They were always bringing him news of "the whereabouts" of otters, badgers, coveys of partridges, etc., and would run across the fields leaving their work to learn the outcome of his bag, or would shout from afar when they saw him returning with rod or gun. "Well, Master John, what luck?" No, we never suspected for a moment, not until months after his disappearance, that he had been made away with by an enemy or had met with any foul play. And yet he found daylight, less than a mile from the rectory, my brother suddenly disappeared, vanished as utterly as if he had been sucked down into the bowels of the earth or drawn up into the sky.

The day was the 10th of July, and a singularly fine day even for that time of the year. It was the day after his return from college, and he was quite running over with spirits. When I awoke early that morning, I heard him whistling outside the window on the lawn. The air was "Vilikins and His Dinah," a song much in vogue at the time. He always came home with a new tune and never seemed to tire of it till he got another. When I looked out, he was walking to and fro on the lawn taking the twist out of a new trawling line. He had fastened one end of it to a tree inside the shrubbery and was diligently engaged in taking out the twist, which indeed is a tedious process. During the forenoon and on till dinner time he seemed keenly and happily absorbed in similar avocations—viz. getting his fishing gear in order. We youngsters were confined to the schoolroom all that time, which we considered unfair, inasmuch as it was Jack's first day at home, but we could hear him hasting about the place and overlustily shouting "Vilikins and His Dinah." Once we heard an awful screaming of geese in the rear regions. We knew perfectly well the cause of it. Jack was pursuing them and plucking out their fine wing feathers in order to tie pollock flies. A little after noon he came into the schoolroom and asked the tutor, Mr. Hamphrey, to let me go to the village to buy him some wire. He gave me a penny for the wire and a penny for myself. In those days I considered a penny a handsome tip. He wanted the wire to make him one eye for his big rod, that which he used for sea fishing. He also had me call at the shoemaker's and get a piece of wax. I mention all this because an his disappearance some foolish people said that he had ran away, a supposition which a remember of the family harbored for a single instant. He was, in fact, hrimful of sporting intentions. At 3 we dined, when, as I have described, he made those funny faces and set us all on the roar. When dinner was over and we ran out, there was a boy at the hall door with a box of bait in his hand, consisting partly of cockles, partly of what we call sea lingworms. They are dug up in the sand of the seashore when the tide is out. This boy had been digging bait for Jack all the morning. He asked Jack to let him go with him to Dhn-Corrig, and Jack refused.

"Where are you going, Jack?" said my second brother, Ned.

"To Dhn-Corrig for cnnner," he said, "and let none of you follow me if you value your lives."

Young as I was, by a certain sympathy, or I know not what, I saw why he wished to be alone. It was to indulge in his transports and talk, sing and do what he pleased and so let off his animal spirits and delight at being home again without witnesses. I generally knew or felt what was passing in his mind. Indeed I was very much attached to him, though he took hardly any notice of me.

"I shall slay the wily cunner, Ned," he went on, "till the sun is just that high above the western mountains."

"Sing tcorri-al-scorri, al-corri-al-ie,"

"and then, on with the white feather, and in with pollock and cahogues till Apollo is half way to the north in his silver boat and black night invests the sea.

"For a cup of cold pigeon it lay by her side.
And the billet does it stated 'twas by pigeon she died.

Sing tcorri-al-scorri, al-corri-al-ie."

Off then he marched down the avenue with the little box of bait in his left hand and his rod on his right shoulder, crunching the gravel noisily, for he was a large and stout lad. The two dogs followed close at his heels with their tails down, for they feared that they would be turned back. So they were, at the gate, and when they still showed signs of following he stooped down and flung stones toward them. Shortly afterward I heard him shout "Jer!" "Sir," answered a voice from a neighboring field. "Come to Dhn-

He flung stones toward them.

Corrig an hour after sunset to bring home the fish." "I will, sir," answered the voice. Then I heard more faintly in the distance the plaintive notes of "Vilikins and His Dinah," the latest song, by the way. So my brother Jack left home that 10th of July, 1854, and was not seen again. As will be quite evident, he could have had no intention whatever of running away, and yet that was the explanation of his disappearance which was favored by every one outside our own family.

CHAPTER II.

AND SOON NOT RETURN.

I know not why, but I had an uneasy feeling about Jack all that day, and it increased after he had left the rectory for Dhn-Corrig. For some time this uneasy feeling took no precise shape, but about 4 I began to picture to myself "a tidal wave" sweeping him off the rock, and having a lively imagination saw the imaginary scene clearly and Jack struggling for his life in the water. In the previous summer three of the tenants of mine fin a different part of the country, all fathers of families, had been swept off the rocks while fishing cunner and drowned. Though I reminded myself that Jack was a splendid swimmer and diver and could do anything in the water, I could not get rid of the vague sense of coming calamity of which I was conscious all day, and which became greater and greater as the sun set and darkness came on.

"Might not Jack be attacked by cramp," I thought, "when in the water?" True, he never had had a cramp, nor did I know of any one who was ever assailed in that way, but I had heard a great deal of talk about the crump. I was sent to bed early, for I was only 8 years old, but I could not sleep. I kept listening for the barking of the dogs. In the previous summer that was to mis the usual sign that Jack had returned safe from fishing. It was now long after dark. My two elder brothers, Ned and Sam, came into the room with a lamp. We then slept in the sama room, Ned and Sam in one large bed; I in a little thin bed, which, with high sides, over which I had to climb in getting in and out. Ned put the lamp on the table opposite the looking glass and leaned over it. Ha took a pin and began to push up the wick. It was a primitive little lamp. I have not seen such since I was a boy. Thcro was usually a fat red bead on the side of the wick, which had to be snuffed just as we used to snuff the candles.

"Jack is out late tonight," he said. "I hope nothing has happened him!"

"What could happen him!" said Sam, who was of a more stolid character. While saying this he undid the serpent fastened belt which confined his waguor. In those days boys were loose white blouses gathered round the waist by a belt. We used to call them wagners.

"I don't know," replied Ned, "but the very late. There's papa opening the hall door and listening. How still he is night is!"

"He's drowned," I cried from my trackle bed. "The tidal wave has caught him as it caught Cody, Phillips and Moroney last year."

"Hold your tongue, you little ass, and go to sleep," answered Ned angrily, but he knew down the window, leaned out and listened. There was a corncake orying somewhere outside. The moon was shining. I could hear the distant roar of the sea when it rolled up the white strand that we called Tramore.

"Thna is getting bad, Sam," he said. "He's long after his time."

Sam was in bed, but still up and listening with bright eyes. I heard my father moving about below stairs occasionally from the hall door to the parlor and back again and talking with my mother.

"There's some one coming," said Ned. The dogs were indeed barking but not for Jack, that I know well.

"Pooh! 'tis only old Jer," said Sam.

"Well, Jer," he cried from the window, "where are the. fish? Why isn't master John with you?"

To these questions there was an audibls reply.

Jer was one of my father's laborers, who worked, or rather elaborately idled, upon the extensive glebe farm which was attached to the rectory. I will remembered that it was Jer whom my brother told to come to Dhn-Corrig after sunset. Jer made no reply to the questions. I heard him scrunching the gravel as he walked slowly to the hall door.

"What is he saying?" I cried.

"Sh!" said Ned, with his head on one side, listening. The man was saying something to my father at the hall door. "He says he found the bait box on the rock, but no rod, and that Jack is not there, and that he shouted for him everywhere and got no answer. Get up, Sam; we must go search."

Sam sprang at once with a bound upon the floor and dressed in haste.

"Perhaps he left Dhn-Corrig," he said, "in one of the bonts going out for night fishing."

"Then why did he leave the box of bait behind him?" retorted Ned.

"Forgot it," answered Sam, dressing furiously. The house was by this time in confusion, with servants rushing to and fro, exclamations, lamentations and my father's voice raised. Then I heard somewhere the sound of a horn. The coastguards were turned out to search. I was alone now. Ned and Sam were far away in the night. From the window I could see many lights down moving swiftly southwest in the direction of Dhn-Corrig. I heard the faintest words and most distant sounds seeming to the extreme stillness of the night. Fear, I suppose, too, made my hearing preternaturally acute. I could hear in the open window a long time till I was discovered there by my mother, shivering and coughing, and compelled to return to bed. She was in tears, though, perhaps to comfort me, she said: "Go to sleep, darling. Jack will be here when you wake in the morning! Of course he has gone out in one of the deep sea fishing boats." It was daylight, however, ere long that none of the boats which had gone out that night returned to stress of hqwmaking.

At last I fell asleep. When I woke in the morning and sat up, I found my two brothers lying on the bed outside the bedclothes fast asleep, but not undressed. I knew from this that Jack had not been found. I dressed and went into Jack's room. It was empty. I then went down stairs. There were voices in my father's study. The door was open. I saw my father sitting there and my mother sitting down, both very pale and my mother weeping.

It was still the gray dawn of the day. My parents not having noticed me, I set out for Dhn-Corrig and ran all the way. The place was crowded with fishermen and country people, among whom were several policemen and coast guards in blue jackets and white trousers. There were boats off the rock which were being slowly rowed along. The men in them were dragging the sea bottom. Sam, with Watkins, the constabulary officer of the district, and galloped off again. Every one looked to me to solve the mystery, to recover the body or explain at least how he was killed or stolen, and I am no more able to do so than to translate Confucius from the original Chinese.

When you were with me last summer, the Freeman family were a way from home, but you remember the position of the rectory, which is visible from the rock behind my cottage, and its situation with respect to the rock called Dhn-Corrig, which lies at the end of this picturesque valley. The Rev. Dr. Freeman is a gentleman for whom I have always felt a great respect, but one with whom I was never able quite to hit it off, and our relations have latterly become very strained indeed. I could never get into the habit of steadychurchgoing. If I went to morning service, I staid away from evening dinner, and sometimes without valid excuse have omitted both morning and evening service. My behavior appeared still worse when contrasted with that of the coast guard officer, old Crumps, who attended regularly at the bell tolls on Sunday morning and Sunday evening and Wednesday evening, too—for we have a service in the week also—may be seen, usually with a cigar in his mouth, but always with a big Bible adorned with blue and yellow flags under his arm, marching his way to the house of prayer. Long since Mr. Freeman began to speak to me about my irregularities and at first in a perfectly polite manner. I promised amendment, but did not amend. Then he "the pastor of my flock," as he put his expression, he spoke to me very sharply indeed about the duty incumbent on all progressing Christians of attending the house of God. Both the manner and the matter of these exhortations I resented, always, I hope, remembering that he was not only a clergyman, but an elderly man, and of prond piety and rectitude. I said nothing calculated to offend, but I felt myself becoming stiff necked and rebellious and all the old Adam rising strong within me, and I dare say this came out in my manner and the tones of my voice.

But things reached their climax not long after you left me and when Mr. Freeman and his family had returned to the rectory from a short visit to an adjoining country, where he has a small landed estate, very much mortgaged, I believe, and a residence called Castle Dove. The family spend a fortnight or three weeks there every summer and were about to make their annual migration when John Freeman was lost. There is an old maiden lady in this parish who delights in giving the most trivial conversations a tragic interest. One unlucky day while visiting at her house in company with my wife I became so far thing about a few words I let fall, declare that in my opinion the days mentioned in the first book of Genesis were ages instead of days, intervals of time and not days in our sense of the word. I believe that Dr. Dublin such an opinion would pass without exciting astonishment, and indeed I have been told that it is held by many clergymen of piety and repute. A few days later I was subjected to a very pastoral visit from Mr. Freeman. I confessed to retract my heresy, was obliged to listen to language of a very cutting description indeed, and ever since my relations with Mr. Freeman have been as I have said, strained, and one mutual saintations of the very coldest character. I think I can comprehend his flock, and I think—well, no more of that now. If he was harsh and censorious then, he is plunged in deep tribulation now.

The next brother is Edward, a tall, good looked, black eyed and curly atripling, far more popular than John, owing to his pleasant ways and ready wit, greatly devoted to the art of play and performances on the cornet-a-piston, and a magnificent leaper and swimmer. He was by no means as powerful and athletic as his brother John, who—but I think I have sufficiently described him already. There is no girl. Next comes Sam, who is somewhat of a nondescript, a staid, self contained, studious sort of boy. The fourth son is a little hoy called Charley, a weird looking child, all eyes. Like a young crow, and who never laughs. Mrs. Freeman is as quiet and unassuming as her husband—at least where his pastoral authority and sense of theological duty are concerned—is not. She is kind, gentle, and hospitable, a truly Christian lady.

You have now a rapid sketch of, this bereaved family, which if this mystery produces any fruit can supplicities or developments, as I suspect it will, may be of service to you for the better understanding of my subsequent letters. If may, too, put you into a better position for giving me a hint or clew concerning any possible explanation of the mystery which may suggest itself to you. Of much be not sparing, write at length, fully weighing and considering all the facts. Was John Freeman drowned or murdered or spirited away and hidden, or did he run away, or was he swept off by the tide and picked up by a passing ship? Consider all the possibilities and write. When we were at the depot together, I neither supplied to you guess nor knew the mystery of a novel from the first few chapters. This disappearance is variously like the first chapter of a novel. Bring your guessing and solving powers to bear upon it and oblige, yours truly, SAMUEL WATKINS.
